KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The past week has been one of quiet business among the shops here, there being few functions of large enough proportions to clean up stock. The market has become glutted with bulbous stock, with no demand. Roses are resuming their usual good form and are bringing fair prices. Carnations are looking well and the supply is in excess of the demand. Violets are getting scarcer and the price higher. Large quantities of Harrisii are coming in and the outlook for enough potted stuff for Easter looks slim.

Quite a number of advance orders are coming in for the Thursday before Easter, but the shops cannot get definite promises from the growers to furnish stock to fill them. It looks now as though good stock will be very scarce.

Various Notes.

Wm. Sharp, of Murray's, has some of the finest specimen lilies to be seen here. In fact, all of his stock looks unusually fine. Mr. Sharp reports business as very satisfactory.

The executive committee of Convention Hall met with some of the trade here last week to discuss the prospects for a flower show next fall. Everything was satisfactorily handled and the prospects for a show this fall are very flattering.

Miss Dalley has a fine display of hyacinths and specimen plants at her shop and reports business as good.

Miss J. E. Murray has her shop window very tastefully decorated and reports business as first-class. Miss Murray is putting in some very fine stock.

The Kansas City Floral Co. has fixed its shop in fine shape and is putting in a large stock of ribbons and other supplies. Mr. Shaeffer, the president of the company, has spared no expense in making the store one of the finest in the city.

E. A. Humfeld has some fine stock at his place and reports business as very good.

The Alpha Floral Co. has installed a new register and it is a thing of beauty. They are doing a fine trade and Mrs. Harvey, the manager, reports business as increasing.

Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, is putting in an immense stock at his house here in anticipation of a large Easter business. Mr. Kellogg is a hustler and sends flattering reports as to business in his line.

H. Lambach, Chicago, and C. S. Ford, of New York, representing florists' supply houses were among the trade the past week.

NARCISSUS.

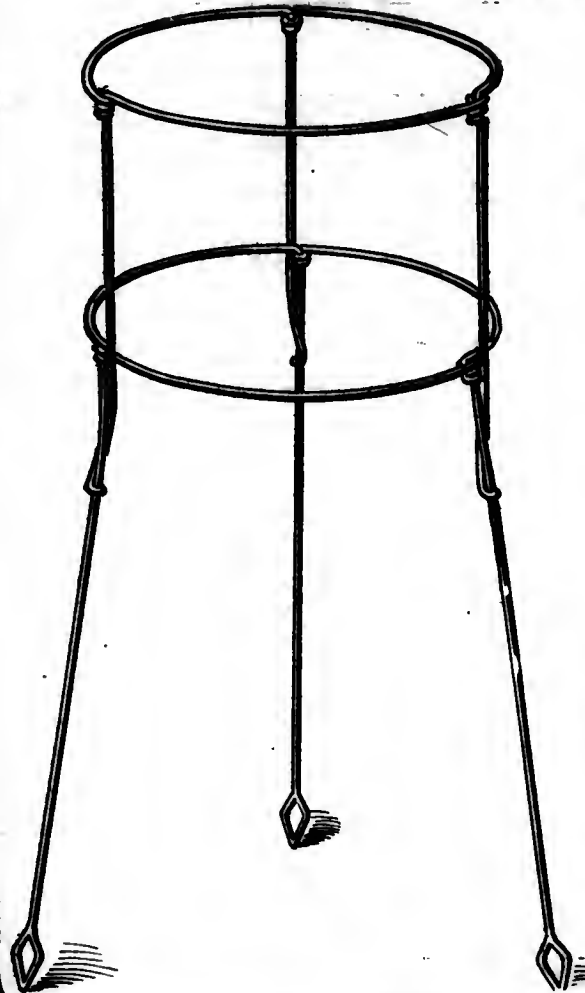

ALBION, MICH.—A. H. Dew reports a fine winter's business, the best he has ever had. He has just completed a new house, which he is now filling with Easter stock and bedding plants.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers will this year take out 6,000 feet of wooden gutters, which are only 5 years old, and replace the same with 6,000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind are our best references. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Mild spring weather is bringing in stock at a lively rate and orders of all descriptions are filled without any difficulty. Roses and carnations never were as fine as at the present time and demand seems to keep pace with the supply. There has been no sign of Lent interfering with trade to any extent. The warm weather is showing its effect on violets and these may be practically out of the market at Easter this year. The supply of bulbous stock is light at present, as most growers are holding it back for Easter. Azaleas are advancing rapidly and a cool temperature will have to be maintained to retard them enough to hold them for Easter. Indications are for a good supply of lilies, both cut and pot plants. Spiræas, hydrangeas, lilac and hardy roses are showing signs of hitting the market at the right time.

Various Notes.

The stock and fixtures of B. G. Lambros, bankrupt, have been sold and a new company may be formed to continue the business.

Jos. E. Pollworth, secretary and treasurer of the C. C. Pollworth Co., will be married April 3, to Miss Alma Yahr, daughter of ex-Senator F. T. Yahr, and president of the Yahr & Lange Drug Co., one of the largest wholesale drug houses in the northwest. Miss Yahr is a popular west side belle and prominent in society circles.

O. H. Sasse, a well known florist, was instantly killed last Friday by being run over by a street car. The car was slowing up at the corner crossing and the accident was not seen by either conductor or motorman and how he happened to get under the car seems unexplainable. Mr. Sasse was 40 years of age and had retired from the florist business recently and engaged in the real estate and contracting business.

The New Wolf Improved Pipe Ventilating Apparatus.

is equipped with adjustable roller hangers, circular steel ratchet arms, automatic safety locks which combine durability, neatness and ease of operation. By using our combination of adjustable roller hangers and steel ratchet arm, the strain upon the pipe shafting is reduced to such a great extent that no expensive double strength or special fitted pipe is required. Houses 165 ft. long are now successfully operated from the end with single machines, which are furnished with or without pipe shafting. Send for catalogue and references. PIERSON Water
Steam BOILERS

Will reduce your coal bill. They did it for others last winter.

The Reason of this is found in the construction of the boilers. They have a larger amount of direct fire surface than other horticultural boilers. The flue areas are large and all parts are easily accessible for cleaning. They are adapted for the use of any kind of fuel.

We Manufacture Every Type of Greenhouse and Everything for Heating.

Estimates furnished for complete structures or for material ready to erect.

HEADQUARTERS FOR

Florists' Ribbons
Chiffons and Novelties

Write or Telegraph Today.

(This offer expires on April 21st and will not be repeated).

To introduce CERAMIQUES DE FLANDRES—the new hand-made Art Pottery—to the Florist trade, we offer to send any or all of these pieces, and as many of each as you wish, at the following greatly reduced prices:

No. 2-70c No. 2d-35c

No. 53-$1.58

No. 7-with interior $1.83

(Nine other shapes and designs in stock), all $1.83 each

No. 125a-35c No. 168-70c

No. 824a-70c No. 366-70c

No. 335-$2.28 No. 813-21c

Or, on receipt of check for $25.00 we will ship you our Florists' sample line, worth from $60.00 to $80.00 to sell—no two pieces alike and all suitable for the Easter trade.

And we will take back any of them that remain unsold after Easter.

If you wish to offer your customers something entirely new this year—goods that are really artistic and altogether different from the usual machine-made article—and incidentally if you wish to handle a line that will pay you a larger profit than any other art ware in the market—let us hear from you.

Shipping instructions and Check or New York references should accompany the order. Goods shipped the day following receipt of order.

Each of these pieces is finished in rich blending shades and tones of green, some bearing inlaid designs.

We carry in stock nearly 1500 different models, in jardinières, fern-dishes and vases alone.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Rambler Roses for Forcing.

Florists have to think a great ways ahead and he who does this is usually best off when the market is at hand. We have seen some beautiful specimens of Rambler roses of late, which were exhibited at the Boston rose show. For those who can and do lift these Ramblers from the ground in November and force for the following Easter, we have nothing to say, but the average florist is not successful with that method and there is a surer way of getting a well-flowered plant, even if it does entail a little more labor. And now is the time to prepare for the plant that you want to sell a year hence.

If you have stock on your own grounds that you planted out last spring, they having made a few strong canes during summer, you have the finest material to begin with. If you do not have such plants, then buy of one of our good nursery firms some strong plants that were grown in the field last summer. Prune last summer's growth back to within five or six inches. Pot them in 6, 7 or 8-inch pots, according to strength of plant. Use a heavy loam with a fourth of cow manure, not too old, and pot firmly. Start them in a cold frame that you can keep close until root action begins. A daily spraying is always beneficial. You will be sure to get a number of breaks from these plants and when the young growths are three or four inches long select four or five of the strongest and rub off the others. When once the young growths start you are sure the roots are also at work and then remove them to a good, light bench. In fact, a rose house would be the place, although by no means a necessity.

Free growing as these Ramblers are, they easily succumb to mildew, so while making their growth under glass, up to the end of July, they should not be subjected to extremes of heat or cold or be allowed to get too dry at the roots. With a daily syringing during their growing time they will make fine, long canes and if ripened off outdoors in the fall you cannot fail to have plants that will break and flower from the pot to the tip of the canes. But more of that hereafter. It is now you want to start. Do not think there is much labor or expense over all this. A hundred Ramblers will take up little room before the first of June, when you have plenty of room, and they are outside or in a cold frame the rest of the time until you start them growing in January.

A Famous Bed of Ramblers.

The popular Crimson Rambler will, perhaps, be always chief favorite on account of its brilliant color, contrasting with its green foliage, yet there are others well worth growing, so buy some of the other desirable varieties. Their treatment is the same. Dorothy Perkins is a beautiful pink, with distinct foliage. The Farquhar is a fine rose pink, with deep green foliage. Try some of both of them. Someone at Boston made mention of the fact that these climbers, particularly Crimson Rambler, are grand in a bed or mass. This is well known to many and recalls to the writer the bed of Crimson Ramblers at the Pan American in 1901. If you wanted to duplicate such a bed, you should plant now, or within the next few weeks, or, in better words, while the plants are dormant.

That famous bed had one great advantage, viz., the soil, a foot of heavy, yellow clay loam, which had been piled up as sod for a year, with at least a fourth its weight of cow manure. The plants arrived about the second week in June. Think of the date. They were growths were tied up to a stake here and there and some strong canes were tied together to form an arch, but the general surface of the bed was as informal as possible. About the following July never was there a more brilliant sight. The bed was of irregular form, about a thousand square feet and there must have been 50,000 trusses of bloom. A picture of this bed was published in the REVIEW, with F. R. Pierson standing in the background, admiring his exhibit.

Planting Hardy Roses.

Some say plant hardy roses, particularly hybrid perpetuals, in the fall. This is not good advice for our latitude. Spring is the time for us, and as early as you can, as you would any hardy deciduous shrub, and tell your customers not to expect too much the first year.

The difficulty is, our customers want a fine show the first year. It can't be done. Supposing you plant this month! If you cut each dormant cane down to three or four eyes you should not lose one plant in a thousand. This class of roses, dry little sticks that were either imported or had been in a root house all winter and spring. When the bed was planted you had to look closely to discover that there was anything there, for the dry little stems were cut within an inch of the ground. With water and mulching and water ad libitum throughout the summer the ground was covered with growth by October. With a covering of pine boughs, they came through the winter with scarcely a shoot killed. Strong the most important for the garden, must be cut down. You will the following June and July get a few flowers, on varieties like Magna Charta perhaps a good many, but they should be pinched off quite short. It is the wood for next year that you want to encourage and if you do not get good, strong growths this year you cannot expect fine blooms next year, or succeeding years. How simple it is to have fine beds of Paul Neyron, Margaret Dickson or Ulrich Brunner if you use patience and a little good gardening.

M. H. Walsh's Seedling Rambler Rose, Lady Gay.

Some Good Tender Roses.

Sometea and hybrid tea roses make our best summer bedding roses and flower throughout the summer until late in the fall. These will not endure our winters and if they were lifted and wintered in a cold frame or, perhaps, in a cool house, they will be slightly started and a sharp frost would set them back. Defer planting these until early May. Old Bon Silene, Safrano and Isabella Sprunt flower with us outdoors from August to hard frost. Maman Cochet is, of course, hardly without an equal as a summer tea rose and every commercial florist should have a bed of a thousand plants of both the pink and the white, and within reach of the hose. The hybrid teas are fine for this purpose. Kaiserin, Carnot and La France especially, and several later introductions, if dormant, plant at once but if started to grow wait until May.

Pot Roses for Easter.

With all our showy Easter plants there is nothing that would sell quicker than a well-grown and flowered hybrid perpetual rose, yet how seldom are they seen. Any novice can force into bloom an azalea that the thrifty Belgian, with high culture, has prepared for us, but it takes some gardening to start with the dormant rose and finish with a well-flowered plant. Those fine plants three or four feet across that we read of at the European exhibihad been lifted in November, potted, then laid down and covered with a few inches of soil and some straw and brought in and pruned about February 1. They were in glorious contrast to some that had been lifted in November, heeled in a cold frame until the middle of January and then potted. The former is the way; but this is a hint a little out of season. If you buy now for future forcing: It is not the finest H. P. roses that are always the best to force. Here is a list of a few (and you don't want a great variety), that force well: Ulrich Brunner, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Magna Charta, Baroness Rothschild, Anne de Diesbach, Clio, Mrs. John Laing, La Reine, Capt. Hayward and old Jacqueminot. La Reine is a very old pink rose, little grown in the garden but a grand pot variety.

Amaryllises.

The fine varieties of Amaryllis vittata that have been so gay with their showy flowers for the past two months are not so generally grown by the commercial florist as they should be. Now is the time to increase your stock. The offshoots can be taken off and either potted singly or grown a year in flats. When the large bulbs have done flowering they should not be at once carelessly put to rest. Even some liquid manure can be given them now, or for a month or two after the flower spike is cut. It is now they are storing up material to produce the gorgeous flower for next spring. After June they can rest, with little water, until you want to start them growing again next winter. They may never be wanted as a cut flower, but as a window plant they are most showy. Seed is easily saved and from the seed in three years you can have a fine, strong flowering bulb.

Tritomas.

If you have room to grow any herbaceous plants, do not forget to have a good stock of Tritoma Pfitzerii. We have had a bed of it and realize what a great improvement it is over T. uvaria, the red hot poker plant. You can cut its handsome spikes throughout the summer and late into fall and a vase of them is a fine thing for your store window.

Geraniums.

All your zonal geraniums should now be in their last shift, with us a 3½ or 4-inch pot. You cannot wait until after Easter this year. It is too late. We frequently get complaints that zonals do not bloom. It is principally because they are kept close and the soil is light and too often a third of some rotted manure. They then grow to leaf. Use a rather heavy loam, pot firmly and put a 4-inch pot of bone flour with every bushel of soil; a little more won't hurt. No shade should ever be over these geraniums. You want them tough, hardy and stout for planting out. WILLIAM SCOTT.

MAY JOIN HANDS.

At the Detroit convention of the American Carnation Society a movement was set on foot to secure the coöperation of the American Rose Society in a joint exhibition at Chicago, but the plan failed. Since both these societies have voted to meet in Boston in 1906 the idea has been revived and has some earnest and influential advocates. It seems that the executives of the two organizations should have little difficulty in agreeing on a date and certainly neither society will suffer by the joint meeting while in all likelihood both will gain.

ILLINOIS FLORISTS.

The Illinois State Florists' Association is a new organization, formed a few weeks ago, and one that is full of business. It already has a bill for an appropriation before the legislature which bids fair to pass. Much credit will be due to the lobbying skill of the association's committee should the bill pass; they went at it like veteran politicians.

bitions are not produced from plants lifted the previous fall. They are grown at least two years in pots, with the highest feeding and care. That may not pay here, but very good, attractive plants can be grown from good American-grown nursery stock, purchased in the fall and forced the following winter or spring. If tried, there is no hurry about them now, only order from your nurseryman early enough during the summer so that you will not get the scrubs. Another plan is to purchase now one-year-old plants and plant out on your own grounds, treating them as described when planting for a bed, cutting each dormant shoot near the ground. All you want is five or six strong breaks, these to form strong growths during summer. There is surely an advantage in having these plants on your own place. The writer was quite pleased to notice within a few days some roses about right for Easter that

THE FRENCH FLOWER TRADE.

As the result of an inquiry ordered by the Mayor of Nice into the losses caused by the severe frosts at the beginning of January to flower growers in the south of France, a report has been issued. It shows the total loss at over 2,000,000 francs, made up by losses on flowers 1,054,590 francs, on fruit, vegetables and plants 1,029,066 francs. The authorities are taking steps to recompense the growers as many of them have practically lost everything and among the small growers there is great distress.

MAGNOLIAS.

Under separate cover I enclose blossoms and leaves of a variety of magnolia which we in Alabama call French magnolia. At the present writing the tree is indeed "a thing of beauty" standing, as it does, with its twenty feet of height and thirty feet or more circumference covered with its snowy blossoms and scarcely a leaf visible, but later it is covered with a profusion of light green leaves. Please give the botanical name for it and how to propagate it.

M. T. G.

The bud arrived in fair order. We think it is Magnolia Soulangeana from the purple color of the outer petals. Magnolias can be readily raised from seed, but layering would be the best method for you to pursue. Select some growths of last year. Cut lengthwise half the thickness and bend it into the ground three or four inches. Be careful when bending the shoot not to break it where you have made the cut. Of course, you will prepare the soil where the layer goes into the ground. Just make it fine and friable. Let a foot or so of the end of the shoot be out of the ground beyond where you made the cut. Do it at once and if all goes well roots will have formed at the cut and a year from now you can sever it from the parent plant. Magnolias are difficult trees to transplant at any stage, so be very attentive to the young plant when first separated from the old tree. W. S.

VIOLETS IN FRAMES.

Friend Scott's reply to a query about growing violets in a frame on the south side of a rose house in last week's REVIEW, and his remarks regarding the success of novices and failure of veterans, tempts me to add a little to his answer.

Years ago I grew some violets in a somewhat similar situation and also gave them somewhat different care than what we have of late years, and yet I do not remember ever having much more satisfactory flowers than I did from those frames. Perhaps a little detail regarding those frames will be of assistance to J. P. K. and anyone else who may have a like situation, where they would like to try violets but have always considered the situation unsuitable. With this experience in memory, if such a situation were the only convenient one at hand, I should certainly try it.

This frame was on the south side of a three-quarter span rose house, with the sash coming up close under the gutter of the rose house. This gutter was about two feet above the level of the ground, and consequently the front of frames were only about one foot above ground. We only had 1-inch steam pipes in the frame but I cannot now say certainly just how many, but, if memory serves me rightly, there were four runs. They were about evenly spaced against the sash and close to them, being hung on the bars on which the sash rested. This might not have been heat enough at all times if there had been no connection to the rose house, but we had it so we could care for the violets without going outside. The south path in the rose house was dug out of the ground, so that we could walk under the glass, so we put doorways into the violet frame every six feet, from this path, and extended the path into the frame far enough so that we could reach to the front side for picking the violets, working, watering, etc. We removed the sash entirely during the summer. The soil was very sandy and not at all rich, as is now considered the best and yet the violets were all right in quantity and quality, all going to prove that you can grow this particular and fickle flower at times under almost any conditions and any old way.

These plants in the frame not only had plenty of water but they were treated to lots of steam by turning the stream from the hose on the steam pipes at the same time. Probably our very light soil helped them out as regards this kind of treatment, as I surely would not now advise one to give them such damp treatment, under any and all circumstances, as those received. However, as I said in the beginning, if I had such a place that I wished to put violets, I should not hesitate to try them.

We then grew Marie Louise, as it was before the day of the Imperial. We also grew some fine pansies under these same conditions, also mignonette, only the latter did not have sufficient head room to grow it perfectly, although it liked the situation all right. I should say there were no openings between the rose house and the violet frame except the doorways, but there were no doors, so that they were always open. But being so low down, there was not much heat from the rose house, and the sash were not lifted for ventilation until late in the season, as the steam was all shut off during the day and the door openings gave sufficient air for ventilation.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

A SIMPLE BASKET CENTER-PIECE.

The Color Scheme.

The basket selected for this piece was low and round, without a base, to be used on a round table. It was of braid in natural straw color and green. The view is taken looking down upon the basket and the result was to partially shorten the handle, which is circular in form, to harmonize with the shape of the basket itself.

The material chosen for filling is Bridesmaid roses, with a touch in white and yellow in the Chinese lilies and Paper White narcissi. The proportion of coloring is therefore pink largely in excess of the yellow. Green comes in second in quantity. Some such proportioning of color is far the most attractive in any floral design, because it is decided and strong with the addition of a delicate suggestion. The coloring can also be termed correct according to the principles laid down more than once in these pages; namely, that two colors to be harmonious must have some one color or element of coloring in common. In these three flowers there is to be found a strain of yellow not difficult to trace through the yellow streaks in the petals of the rose, through the yellow cup of the Chinese lily and in the stamens of the Paper White narcissi.

Filling the Basket.

This is a good style for beginners, having the design perfectly simple in the body of the basket and the easy garland over the handle. The first step in preparation is to line the empty basket with one layer of tin foil or oil tissue paper up to within an inch of the top edge of the basket inside. Soak sphagnum for half an hour or so. Wring out in handfuls so dry that no water can drip from it. Lighten and separate the moss partially and make a firm, but not hard bed in the body of the basket. Hollow out a space in the center of the moss filling the shape of a shallow basin two or three inches deep. Slope gradually up to the edge of the basket. Thread a coarse needle with strong green thread and secure the moss in place with a few long stitches from opposite sides of the basket. Lay damp wood ferns flat on top of the moss until the same is covered with a green mat. Sheet moss, if obtainable, serves the same purpose of a soft neat background.

Cut the stems of as many roses as is judged will fill the basket after this style, into lengths of from six to eight inches. Cut between joints, and leave all the foliage on above the cut. Place a stemmed pick against the lower end of the stem, so that the middle of the pick is alongside of the end. The wire attached to the upper end of the pick is wrapped tightly around the stem downward until the wire has wrapped the lower extremity of the stem smoothly to the pick. Another method of stemming much in favor is to use 12-inch lengths of No. 24 wire only. If a rose stem is at all weak, insert one end of a wire upwards from the stem into the base of the calyx far enough to secure it well. Then holding the stem firmly with the left hand over the rose, let the wire follow the stem of the rose downward. When about half-way down begin to coil the wire closely around the rose stem. Continue this until the lower end of the stem is reached with an inch of the wire to spare to insert the rose by, into the sphagnum. Wire for this purpose should be painted green to be more nearly invisible. It is not necessary to attempt to straighten a curved stem thus wired. Leave the bends and twists in the stem. Do not destroy these graceful lines, but strengthen them by the use of wire.

Occasionally there is a strong, heavy-stemmed rose which does not need stemming of any kind. Sharpen the lower end and it will run into the sphagnum easily and keep its position. Often a whole basket can thus be quickly and easily filled with the wiring of only the few weak-stemmed flowers.

The roses intended for the handle garland should be laid along a string of smilax of moderate weight. As fancy dictates both as to position and distance apart fasten in the roses with two or three rounds of No. 36 wire, after setting the rose stems well into the smilax foliage. Attach the heavy end of the smilax to the starting point of the handle on one side and train the rose-laden garland up along the handle as the picture shows. Secure in place with a twist of the fine wire as needed. Fasten at the other side of the handle to finish, was done at the start. Do not cut off the surplus. Let it trail at the side of the basket.

Distribute the stemmed roses in the sphagnum all over the body of the basket, leaving some to stand erect and others to fall out around the edge till very little of the basket is to be seen. Set medium length sprays of Asparagus plumosus around the edge, with the tip out. These wiry stems need no artificial wiring or stemming. They will be easily inserted in the moss. Scatter a few among the roses, but only a few. It is not a difficult matter to dull the color of the roses by too much of a green veil. Use green as a setting or background rather than as a garniture. That is the natural method. It is a common practice with some florists to fairly plaster any and all of their designs with adiantum, till the piece is neither one thing nor the other, lacking character and tone. Let one large spray follow the handle a short distance up on the left and fall out as shown.

roses are observed on the left. These narcissi are stemmed in the same way as the roses.

BUTTED VS. LAPPED GLASS.

The method of lapping glass, either on the roof, the sides or in the gables of greenhouses is antiquated. The modern method is to butt the glass wherever it is used in the construction of greenhouses. In order to secure a tight roof and to keep it so for a period of ten or twelve years in the lapped method, there are too many "ifs" to eliminate: "If" good putty is used; "if" it is done in warm, dry weather; "if" the sash bars are constantly kept painted inside and out; "if" experienced and trustworthy men are employed on the job, etc.

For every good point that can be advanced for lapped glazing, at least two good points can be established for butted glazing of greenhouses. By following either method a comparatively tight house can be constructed; by neither an absolutely tight one. Many florists of long experience are agreed that it is not necessary, in fact, that it is not desirable, to have an air-tight house for the ordinary cut flower and plant establishment. It must, however, be admitted that a roof of butted glass requires more pitch than one where the glass is lapped.

In my first houses all the glass was lapped and puttied. In those days our houses were constructed of sash 3x6 feet and these were glazed and puttied before they were secured to the roof. Later, when wider houses were built, sash bars came into vogue and these, of course, required fastening to the roof before the glazing could be done. Here the patent glazing points and the putty bulb first came into requisition.

After this the modern and much superior system of butting the glass came into use. In this system the tongue of the rafter or sash bar is not quite so high as where the glass is lapped and in place of glazing points and putty a half round cap with a groove that just nicely fits over the tongue is used and firmly secured to the rafter by No. 9 1¼-inch round headed screws. Double diamond glass 16x16 or 16x24 is now most largely used in the construction of commercial greenhouses. In the former size you have four, while in the latter you have only two sides for matching joints. But, on the other hand, with the larger glass there are only two-thirds the number of joints that there will be with the smaller panes.

In laying the glass, begin at the gutter line and finish the row at the ridge. Where the rafters or sash bars have been set well and true, and if the spacing has been properly attended to, it is really a pleasure to lay the glass. If, however, the joint is not tight where the two panes come together, turn the pane over. If the joint is still unsatisfactory, turn the pane end for end. By pursuing this plan the joints will be sufficiently tight for all practical purposes. After laying two rows of glass, put on a cap and put in a screw four to six inches from the gutter and one an equal distance from the ridge. After these the distance between the screws should be about fifteen inches. For hot-houses where it may be desirable to secure an absolutely tight roof, thin strips of lead or rubber can be used to butt the panes against, thus securing an air tight as well as a rain tight joint.

The advantages of butted over lapped glass, to my mind, are: First, rapidity in laying, since two men will lay as much butted glass in one day as six men can lay of lapped and puttied glass. Second, it can be laid at almost any season of the year. Third, it is less difficult to repair when breakages occur, and we all know from sad experience that these come but too often. Fourth an air space between two butted panes will close up more rapidly in cold weather than it will between two lapped panes. Fifth, a lapped glass roof requires a longer period to clear itself from a heavy fall of snow or sleet, and it is more difficult to clean off the scum and filth on the inside than on a butted roof. Sixth, the great majority of florists are men of moderate financial resources, therefore, as a rule, their houses have cedar posts for the foundation and the superstructure is frame. In eight or ten years the roofs of these become as undulating as the prairie lands in Wisconsin. If the glass has been butted you draw the screws, remove the caps, take out the glass, reset the posts, readjust the supports and purlins, reglaze, repaint and when you are through the house is nearly as good as new. Seventh, if for any reason it becomes necessary to dismantle the house you are indeed in great luck if the glass has been butted.

In the course of the last five years it fell to my lot to buy up two florists' establishments that for good reasons were discontinued by the owners. On these two places there were seven houses, containing a little over 11,000 square feet of glass and I do not believe that over 100 feet of this was broken in the removal. Had the glass on these houses been lapped I should have considered it good policy to have supplied my men with long-handled hammers and given them instructions to give these roofs what "Paddy gave the drum." No, thank you, no lapped glass for me. I have tried both and it is appropriate in this connection to say, "The proof of the pudding is in the eating."

At present I have eleven houses, containing over 30,000 square feet of glass. On ten of these houses the glass is butted. The other is an old house with lapped glass and when this is rebuilt, if an advocate of lapped glass were to offer to do the glazing according to the antiquated method gratis, I would decline with thanks and gladly pay for the glazing according to the modern method.

In finishing let me remark that the climate in this part of Ontario is decidedly damp and at times the mercury creeps down 5 and 10 degrees and on rare occasions 15 to 20 degrees below zero.

PIPING.

I have a house 24x160 feet, twelve feet to the ridge and with side walls five feet high. How many pipes will it take to keep it at 52 degrees with the outside temperature 10 degrees below zero? The boiler will be at the center of the house, heating with hot water, using 3-inch flows and 2-inch returns. G. W. R.

With the boiler located in the center of the house, so that the greatest length of pipe to either end of the house from the boiler will be eighty feet, a 3-inch riser from the boiler to either end of the house and returning to the boiler by thirteen 2-inch returns will provide the necessary radiation. The actual capacity of the boiler required is 1,500 square feet of radiation, but for safety and economy it would be well to secure one rated at 2,000 feet capacity. Under a pressure system, with the expansion tank well elevated, such a system of piping should give good service.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Easter Preparations.

We all know that the heavy call at Easter is for something in plants but, coming very late this year and with such weather as we have had for the week past, many plants intended for this occasion will be past their prime. Present indications point to a good demand for carnations.

When these notes reach you, Easter will be little more than two weeks away and, while little can be done to increase the cut, much can be done in the way of keeping the quality up to standard. I do not predict a scarcity of stock, for no doubt there will be plenty, but, as usual, prime blooms will be in the minority.

In spite of ventilation, these warm spells run the temperature in the houses up very high during the day, making the temptation very strong to save coal and labor by letting the fires go out and closing the ventilators nearly or quite tight at night. If this is done the result will be serious damage to the bloom, even if only partially developed.

The difference between the temperature inside and that of the cool night air causes condensation and moisture will collect on the blooms; besides, the atmosphere will become stagnant. By all means have some heat on at night and a crack at the ridge to correspond in order that the air be kept moving.

As the need for cuttings is practically over, all side shoots down to the point where the stem will be cut, can be removed when disbudding. Any buds showing signs of bursting or otherwise coming imperfect, should be cut as soon as seen. To allow them to develop is not only a hindrance to the others, and a drain on the plant, but a waste of raw material.

Increased watering will be necessary as the season advances, but do not give a heavy soaking in the morning and think the plants can go it alone all day. About two or three o'clock in the afternoon there will be spots that need touching up.

Weeds as they appear must be pulled else they will deplete the soil and prevent circulation of air among the plants. Leave no detail undone. "Do it now."

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Topping Young Stock.

By this time all the early potted plants are well established and most of them have been topped or are ready to top. Much has been said about what stage the plant should reach before topping but just let me add that it does not pay to pull out the center blades before the stem begins to show. Some say it causes disease through water lodging there, and they may be more or less right, but there is another reason why it does not pay. About three-fourths of the time you do not pull out the very heart, but only the blades around it, and in a couple of weeks you see the young blades push out at the top instead of the eyes along the side of the stem. You have weakened the plant and have not topped it either. Then, again, when the stem shows between the joints the growth is more matured and the eyes are better formed and ready to break and there is less check to the plant.

Varieties differ greatly and must be topped accordingly. What would make a fine, shapely plant of one would not do for another at all. For instance, old Mrs. Joost needed only one topping to make a fine, bushy plant, while Indianapolis needs to be topped every time it makes two or three joints. It naturally runs up to flowers any time of the year and unless you keep it topped it will waste its energies blooming when it should be building plant. The failure to top enough is, I think, the main reason why some growers have failed with this variety. This severe topping must commence right from the beginning and be kept up until the plants are housed in the summer or early fall, so as to have a bushy plant.

Shift the Young Plants.

Watch all your varieties closely, especially the early ones. If the young plants have filled the pots with roots you may still have to repot some of them before planting out. Don't let them become stunted. By all means plant from pots if it is possible. If you have a lot in flats or planted on benches, it will pay you to pot them. I know they take up more room on the bench in pots and it may be a big job, etc., but it will pay you to do it. The plants will take hold better and they will be better and lift better in the fall. The roots will be more compact in the fall and hold the soil better. All these things will count when it comes to having vigorous plants next fall.

Lawson and Its Rivals.

Much has been said lately regarding Mrs. Lawson "running out," or deteriorating. Like most of the other gentlemen, I must say that I cannot see it. While we have never grown Lawson quite as good as some others we have seen, yet we know that ours have been as good this season as we have ever had it. Mrs. Lawson is a most peculiar variety. Naturally it is a very strong, vigorous grower and if it is in good condition September 1 and well established on the benches, it is pretty sure to turn out fine. It is, however, a poor transplanter and it does not require much neglect on the part of the grower to throw it all out of gear and it is very slow to recover from a check at that time. Growers in general have learned how to handle it during this period and we find a much larger percentage of growers who do it successfully than we did two or three years ago. Of course there are growers whose stock has run down through over-propagation and general neglect and a variety like Lawson, which is in great demand, is sure to suffer more than a variety that is in limited demand.

The remark has been made that the Lawson blooms shown at Chicago were not so good as those shown at Detroit last year and at Indianapolis several years ago. I think they were quite as good as either lot, considering the date of the exhibitions. The Detroit show was held six weeks later than the one at Chicago and the one at Indianapolis was about midway between the two. I did not measure any of the blooms at either time, so I cannot say positively as to size, but I do know that there were more blooms at Chicago of other varieties that were as large or larger than Lawson than at any previous exhibition. Not because Lawson was any poorer, but because the others were mostly newer and larger varieties. The judges' scores cannot be taken as evidence either, because a vase of blooms that scored say ninety points four years ago would hardly score eighty-five points this year. So that unless Lawson were grown much better today than four years ago it would score less and one would be left to think that it is deteriorating. That it does not stand out above all others as it did at one time can not be gainsaid, but it is because we are getting better varieties among the new ones. I think the variety will hold up in good shape until we are given a worthy successor.

CARNATION BREEDING.

[An address by C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y., before the American Breeders' Association, at Champaign, Ill., February 2, 1905.]

The complexity of the subject of carnation breeding, its immensity of detail, precludes but a superficial skimming-over of the subject in the limited time allotted to me.

The original carnation known to hybridizers for some 2,500 years before the Christian era was a five-petaled, single bloom about one inch in diameter, of a pinkish mauve color. In its original state it grew generally throughout the southern portion of Europe, being found in abundance in Normandy, France, from whence it is believed by some historians to have been introduced into Great Britain. So recently as 1874 it was found covering the Castle Falaise, in which William the Conqueror was born. It was described by Theophrastus as early as 300 B. C.

The present carnation with which we are working is the product of several centuries of culture and hybridization. It is an open pollinated species and mother plants can be used both from the hybrid plants as well as inbreeding upon the same plants or upon the same variety. Once secured from seeds a variety is easily perpetuated by propagation from cuttings, which are secured in abundance and may be easily rooted. Improvements in varieties may be made by bud selection and bud variation as well as from seed variation due to hybridization. In raising varieties from hybridized seed very few improved sorts are produced, the proportion being about one good variety for each 1,000 hybrids grown.

Up to the present time, I have been breeding for color alone, basing my work upon the theory that any laws developed in color work would hold good when applied to the development of other desired qualities.

The Method of Work.

The tools which I use in my work are very simple indeed, consisting of a pair of delicate tweezers and a microscopic magnifying glass. The method employed is to find the anther just bursting, so that the pollen is in a condition of dry powder. The anther is removed by means of the tweezers and the pistil of the flower desired to be fertilized is lightly touched along its entire length by the pollen-bearing anther.

In order to do my work with reasonable method, I have divided it into sections as follows: Crimson section, comprising crimsons or scarlet maroon in color; dark pink section, which comprises all rose, cherry and deep pink tones; light pink section, which comprises the light salmon or daybreak tints; scarlet section, which comprises all of the colors which may be termed red or scarlet; white section, comprising only the creamy white and snow white tints; yellow variegated with scarlet, crimson or pink upon yellow grounds, as the yellow varieties are almost invariably marked with pink, scarlet or some other tint; white variegated section comprises varieties of a light pink with scarlet or crimson markings.

The blue section comprises varieties showing some tendency toward the blue in color. This latter section has not as yet produced anything that might be termed a blue, as invariably there is enough pink in the make-up of the color to shade the tone into purple or mauve. The crimson, dark and light pink, scarlet and white sections have been fairly well fixed, but the yellow, white and pink variegated and blue sections will be very difficult to fix, as they are essentially mosaics and there is a constant tendency toward variation in all hybrids produced from them.

The bulk of my profitable varieties can practically be traced to the variety General Maceo, which was the result of a cross between the English variety Winter Cheer and Mr. Dorner's American variety Meteor. The original plant of Maceo had a very peculiar habit, being almost a climber, and was dug from the frozen ground after all supposed good sorts had been taken into the house. Its only recommendation was an intensely colored large bloom on a plant having a habit somewhat resembling a creeping grape-vine in growth, but by selection from bud variations it was built into an immensely profitable commercial variety.

In hybridizing carnations we sometimes meet with what is termed seed sports. These have been invariably light pink varieties, more or less marked with crimson edgings and stripes, that have been produced by crossing crimson sorts which have comparatively pure crimson pedigrees for several generations.

Aside from its commercial importance, there is a sentimental side to carnation growing. The production of new hybrids which are distinct improvements upon existing sorts is always a pleasure and serves to keep one thoroughly interested in the divine flower and amply repays for the close application necessary to produce practical improvements.

How I Commenced Carnation Culture.

Some fourteen years ago while walking down Broadway in New York City, a Greek flower peddler pushed under my nose a bunch of clove-scented carnations. The delicious fragrance reminded me vividly of the old home garden, with its little plots of paisley pinks, and I became at once interested in the blooms, and being at that time out of business, I took up the growing of carnations, believing that if chrysanthemums, roses and other flowers could be improved by hybridization and culture, the carnation ought to respond to similar methods, and in this view later experience proved I was not at fault.

Commercial Importance.

At the present time the commercial value of the carnations grown in this country has risen so that the calling may be considered one of the substantial professions. The annual value of the carnation product reaches $5,000,000 to $6,000,000. When we consider both the sales of plants and flowers and the capital invested possibly may amount to $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, taking into consideration the value of the real estate and buildings devoted to carnation culture.

The improvement in the carnation which has resulted in giving us flowers three times the size that they ordinarily were, with stems four to five times as long, has produced a general advance in the price of the carnation which seems to keep pace with the increased demand. When I first undertook the growing of the carnation, 50 cents to $1 and $2 per dozen was considered the retail price. At present $2, $3, $6, sometimes $8 and in rare instances $10 per dozen is secured. When I first entered the business from 50 cents to $1 and up to $4 per hundred as the maximum price, were the wholesale rates. At present $2, $4, $6, $8, $10 to $15 are ruling prices and at certain seasons as high as $25 per hundred is secured for the best and most perfect blooms.

We have about two acres under glass devoted to carnation growing, the annual sales from which run from $30,000 to $36,000, netting a fair annual profit of $10,000 to $12,000.

Value of New Sorts.

Much has been said and written about the value of a single variety of new carnations. So far I am informed at least five varieties have been sold on a basis of $8,000 to $10,000 per variety. One at least upon a basis of $20,000 for the variety, this being the scarlet sort, Robert Craig, one of my own seedlings, a half interest in which was sold last year for $10,000, and the Mrs. Lawson, which netted as much as the Robert Craig. The Robert Craig variety will not be disseminated until the season of 1906 and already orders have been entered for some 375,000 plants, which will probably be increased to 400,000 plants before the season of dissemination is closed.

The naming of a new carnation is quite a puzzle to the originator and he usually selects the name of some beautiful lady, some particular friend, some important personage, a bird, the names of planets or something that will serve to describe or produce an impression of the characteristics of his flower. In naming my own productions, I have honored the varieties with such names as Governor Roosevelt, The President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Viola Allen, James H. Manley, Robert Craig and the Cuban patriots, General Maceo and General Gomez.

The carnation has frequently been used in a political sense. It was the McKinley emblem and the campaign flower during the campaign which elected McKinley and Roosevelt and during that campaign the various carnation growers throughout the country donated many thousands of flowers to decorate the buttonholes of those marching in the political parades and at the present time the American Carnation Society decorates the grave of the lamented president with carnations each year on January 29.

The carnation is extensively used as a decorative flower. It lends itself to almost every use in which flowers are suitable. Its varied and delicate colorings, its magnificent pungent refreshing odor, and its long keeping qualities render it probably the most valuable of all florists' flowers.

VARIETIES TO PLANT.

By the time that Easter is past and gone we can begin to size up the situation and plan for the planting season. If we have kept tab on our customers' wants we will be in a position to select for planting those varieties which are most in demand and so take full advantage of every foot of bench room.

Beauties, as usual, will still occupy the front rank, as they deserve, and although they are grown in increasing quantities every year, the demand seems to keep pace with the supply.

Brides and Maids will occupy their present position during next season, for, although there are some new varieties which may compete with them for public favor, they are in no danger of being displaced for a year or two.

Meteor at last seems to have lost its place to a great extent and, indeed, this fact has been apparent for a year or two, as any red with even a shadow of a reputation has been welcomed to fill its place.

Liberty's day is apparently over and, though some of us may stick to it for a year or two longer, it is doomed. With all its qualities and attractiveness, it is far too erratic to become a general favorite with growers and I have little doubt that Richmond will be the red for some time to come and eventually drive Liberty from the market.

La Detroit will this year get a fair trial in most places and have its merits fairly tested.

Some of the other new roses, such as Killarney, Wellesley and Rosalind Orr English, will also get a good try-out and from present indications these varieties are likely to become favorites with the growers and the public, possessing, as they do, good distinct characters, pleasing color, good form and fragrance and above all good sound constitutions, which make them easy doers.

The art of hybridizing roses for culture under glass is as yet in its infancy and still we have attained creditable results. The interest which many of our foremost growers are now evincing in this art is bound within a short time to bring about good results in the shape of varieties finer and better than anything we ever dreamed of and to help to elevate the profession to a higher and less sordid plane.

ROSE CULTURE UNDER GLASS.

[A first prize essay by Charles Wengerber, read before the Monmouth County Horticultural Society.]

Rose cuttings can be taken in December, January and February, but the best month is January. The cuttings should be taken from healthy plants. The best cuttings are those that are taken from flowering shoots, but blind wood can also be used. The eyes should not be too far advanced. When making the cuttings use two eyes, cutting the bottom leaf off. The cut should be made with a sharp knife and must be smooth. If the room in the sand bench is scarce the top leaves can be trimmed.

The cutting bench should be, on the north side of a house with bottom heat, of from 60 to 62 degrees, and the overhead temperature 58 to 60 degrees. The bench should be washed out thoroughly and then whitewashed. Crocks or moss should be used for drainage. The sand should be coarse. Put a layer about three and one-half inches thick in the bench and then give a good watering and press the sand hard.

The sun should not strike the cuttings until rooted. They should be syringed three times a day and ought to be rooted in three weeks. When the roots are from one-half to one inch long, pot them in thumb-pots, and when the roots are showing considerable in these pots, pot them in a size larger, and so until they are planted in the bench. They should never become pot-bound.

Most of the growers nowadays use grafted stock in preference to cuttings. As soon as Manetti stock arrives it ought to be heeled in in a cool place but not letting the frost reach it. When potting, put them in as small pots as possible, but large enough to cover the roots entirely. Sometimes Manetti stock has very large roots and instead of taking 3-inch or 3½-inch pots, I would rather trim the roots somewhat. As soon as the Manetti is budded out well, and before leaf growth, grafting should commence. The temperature of the house should be at 50 degrees. Syringe them several times a day.

The bench for the grafts should have bottom heat, enclosed on the sides, having it arranged so that a side can be taken off if there is too much heat. A frame about two feet high on one side with a slope down to one foot four inches on the other side put over a bench should be about the right height. It must be air-tight; if any cracks are found they should be closed.

The bottom should be thoroughly washed and whitewashed. A layer of two or three inches of sand or sifted ashes, ashes preferable on account of ashes taking heat up easily, would be enough to put in bottom. Water the ashes or sand thoroughly before putting the grafted plants in, as the moisture in the box will have to nourish the plants for the first four days.

When grafting it should be done as quickly as possible. It is best to have a few sharp knives handy. Make a slant cut about three-quarters of an inch long on the Manetti, as close to the pot as is convenient to tie, make the cut of your scion the same size. The wood of the scion should be as near the same size of the Manetti as possible. The best wood is the heel of a flowering shoot and should be taken from the healthiest stock. Have one eye on the graft and trim the leaves a little. When matching the cuts see that one side and the bottom of the cut match bark with bark. In tying start at the top of the Manetti and finish at the bottom. The temperature at about 80 degrees has done the best with us.

Do not open the box till the fourth day, and then give slight syringing, air them for about five minutes, and every day a couple of minutes more till the ninth day, when they should have about one-eighth of an inch of air. The Manetti shoots should be taken off and plants which are dry watered. After the seventh day the temperature should drop to 75 degrees. A little more air is given each day after the ninth day. After three weeks the grafts ought to have grown together. Take them out and put in a temperature of 62 degrees, the temperature going down gradually to the regular rose house heat. When the plants show signs of good growth, loosen the raffia to prevent same from cutting into the wood. My reason for not taking the raffia off too early is that if the graft has not taken well on some places it will callus better than if the raffia is off; also, the graft will not break off so easily. When planting in the bench the graft wants to be covered.

The benches should be washed the same as cutting benches and, when dry, whitewashed. The drainage in the bottom of the bench should be covered with sod or coarse manure, and the benches filled about four inches deep with soil. The best soil is sandy loam from an old cow pasture, mixed with about one-fifth of rotten manure, cow manure if possible. The soil should be cut over about three times before using in a bench.

Extreme care should be taken in planting the roses. A hole should be made large enough to cover the ball with ease. It can then be held with one hand at the exact depth and the soil pressed around it with the other. Do not cover the ball of the rose too much.

After planting, pound the bench with a brick or tramp between the roses. Water immediately after planting, just around the ball, then according to the growth of the roots, water the whole bench. The roses should be syringed every clear day. Wire stakes should be put alongside each plant and wires running lengthwise along the bench. Our principal feeding is with manure water, but at different times, different manure is used, as cow manure, chicken and sheep manure, a good dusting of bone meal and once in a while wood ashes.

Mulching should never be done during the dark days in winter. The blind wood on Ivory and Golden Gate can be cut off to some extent, as they make quick growth. The temperature at night is: Bride and Bridesmaid, 56 to 58 degrees; Ivory and Golden Gate, 54 to 56 degrees, and American Beauty 60 degrees. The temperature in day can run up 10 to 15 degrees more.

CATTLEYA X SUSANNAE.

This new and interesting cattleya is the result of crossing the two-leaved C. Skinneri with C. Warneri, the aim of the raiser, E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, Mass., being to increase the size of bloom of the former with added flowers to the spike of C. Warneri. This has been accomplished for the plant as shown by Mr. Orpet before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club on January 17 was exactly intermediate, nearly all the bulbs being two-leaved, with the bronzy tint peculiar to C. Warneri showing on leaves and bulbs.

The flower spike is stout and carried well above the leaves, producing at the initial flowering five and six blooms to the scape, the individual flowers being a trifle paler than those of C. Skinneri and of double the size. The color is uniform throughout the flower, there being no accentuation of the same on the tip, as might have been expected from the use of Cattleya Warneri as the pollen parent.

The committee recommended the award of a certificate of superior merit to this excellent seedling, which we believe had never previously been exhibited either here or in Europe.

THE GREENHOUSE WHITE FLY.

The Division of Entomology of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin on the white fly, from which we reproduce the accompanying illustration and the following matter:

"The damage by the greenhouse white fly to tomato, cucumber and many other plants growing under glass easily places it in the front rank of greenhouse pests. In many cases it would be impossible to grow certain crops in forcing houses without the aid of remedial measures. A specific instance is on record where, in a western Massachusetts town, the attacks of this insect resulted in the total loss of a greenhouse crop of tomatoes and cucumbers, valued at $4,000.

"During the past few years many appeals for remedies have been made to the editors of our horticultural journals, to many state experiment stations, and to the United States Department of Agriculture; yet, although it is not, in reality, a difficult insect to control, the remedial methods which should be followed are far from being generally known among the many greenhouse men who suffer from its depredations.

"The insect is notable for its very general feeding habits, having already been recorded as breeding on over sixty different kinds of plants. Of these the following are of the most economic importance: Aster, chrysanthemum, salvia, lantana, fuschia, coleus, ageratum, primula, geranium, heliotrope, rose, egg plant, bean, melon, lettuce, cucumber and tomato. The two last suffer the most serious injury from this insect, perhaps more than the other greenhouse plants together, although not infrequently there are reported serious losses in greenhouses devoted to one or more of the other plants mentioned.

Description.

"The mature white flies of both sexes are four-winged insects scarcely more than three-fiftieths of an inch in length. The adult white flies, as well as the scale-like larvæ, are provided with sucking mouth parts. In a short time after the emergence of the adult from the pupa case, the body, legs, and wings become covered with a white waxy substance which gives this, as well as other species of the genus, a characteristic floury appearance. The adults feed nearly continuously during their existence. The number of eggs deposited per day by an adult female white fly in a laboratory has been found to average very nearly four. Probably in the warmer temperature of a greenhouse this number is greater by one or two eggs per day. The eggs hatch in from ten to twelve days. The majority of the adults are found upon the upper and newer leaves of the food plant. They are almost invariably found upon the underside of the leaves, and it is here that nearly all the eggs are deposited, although many are found upon the tender stems and leaf petioles and a very few scattering ones on the upper surfaces of the leaves.

Appearance of Infested Plants.

"On thoroughly infested plants we find on the uppermost leaves only adults and freshly laid eggs; a little lower on the plants we find eggs in the process of hatching; and, finally, on the lowermost parts of the plants we find discolored, shriveled leaves with many pupæ and emerging adults and few, if any, unhatched eggs or young larvæ. The larvæ and pupæ secrete little globules of honeydew, so named after the material of a like nature secreted by plant lice. Owing to the interference with the respiratory processes of the leaf, both by the bodies of the insects themselves and by the fungus growths due to them, badly infested plants have a tendency to wilt when exposed to the sun's rays. In seriously infested greenhouses the leaves of the plants gradually die, the lower leaves first.

Preventives.

"The introduction of the insect into non-infested floral establishments may be prevented by avoiding the introduction of infested plants unless first subjecting them to a fumigation in a tight fumigating box, based on the directions hereafter given for entire greenhouses. Vegetable houses, which are not used during the summer months, allow of a practice which not only greatly reduces the chances of the white fly appearing in the house during the growing season, but may result in the house being successfully kept free from thrips and other insect pests during the whole or a considerable part of the season. The practice referred to consists in removing from the house all vegetation, even the smallest weeds, and fumigating the tightly closed greenhouse with hydrocyanic-acid gas at the rate of five or more ounces per thousand cubic feet of space for a ten hours' exposure.

Fumigation with Hydrocyanic-acid Gas.

"This has been found to be the most successful means of controlling the white fly in greenhouses. Its success in this case is due to the susceptibility of the adults and larvæ of these insects to a comparatively long exposure to a small amount of the gas. Experiments thus far have been with tomato and cucumber plants, but as these plants are among those most liable to injury from improper fumigation with hydrocyanic-acid gas, a wide range of usefulness is indicated by the success thus far obtained.

"Experiments have shown that the white fly is destroyed in all except two stages (egg and late pupal) by an amount of potassium cyanide which is extremely small as compared with the amounts generally recommended for other insect pests. As small an amount as between one-fifth and one-sixth ounce per 1,000 cubic feet, for three hours' exposure, has been used with success, but the greatest difficulty attending the use of hydrocyanic-acid gas, in greenhouses containing plants as susceptible to injury by it as are the cucumber and tomato, is the difference in the tightness of different greenhouses. It is consequently impossible to give specific directions which will be suitable under all circumstances.

"In most greenhouses, probably 0.007 gram of potassium cyanide for each cubic foot of space for an exposure not exceeding three hours represents the amount which will prove most effective for treatment of the insects without injury to tomato or cucumber plants. In many cases 0.01 gram per cubic foot has been found suitable for the same exposure, but this should not be used except in loose greenhouses where, after trial, a smaller amount is found ineffective. In all greenhouses when an attempt is to be made to control the white fly with hydrocyanic-acid gas, it is advisable to first use not more than 0.005 gram per cubic foot of space for a three hours' exposure. If this amount is sufficient for the house, none of the adults will recover after the fumigation, though in the course of two or three days many more will emerge from the pupa cases. The larvæ, when destroyed, as they should be by the fumigation, change in two or three days from their normal glistening, greenish color to a yellowish or brownish color. When this result is not obtained by the first test, one or more further tests should be made, increasing the amount of potassium cyanide 0.001 gram per cubic foot of space for each test, with three days intervening to note results, until an amount is reached which is sufficient to destroy the larvæ, or until the tender leaves of the plant show injuries as a result of the fumigation.

"Tests, thus far, with other greenhouse plants likely to be attacked by the white fly, according to available records, have all been for a much shorter exposure than three hours and with a much larger amount of potassium cyanide, but it is probable that in case plants other than the cucumber and tomato require treatment for this insect, preliminary tests in a fumigating box or in a small greenhouse will show that the amount of chemicals and the length of exposure recommended for these two can be used without the slightest danger to other plants. In most cases much larger rates of potassium cyanide per cubic foot can be used.

"Fumigation of plants with hydrocyanic-acid gas should be at night and the foliage of the plants should be dry. The greenhouse should be made as tight as possible, all entrances but one closed and locked, and arrangements made to open a few ventilators from the outside at the expiration of the period of exposure. A house when fumigated should not be unnaturally tight as a result of rain or snow, otherwise the greater amount of gas confined in it under these conditions may injure the plants. The materials used for the generation of the gas are ninety-eight per cent potassium cyanide, commercial sulphuric acid, and water, the proportions generally used being one-half more acid (liquid measure) than potassium cyanide, and one-half more water than acid. Having determined the cubic contents of the house and the total amount of potassium cyanide, sulphuric acid, and water to be used, these should be divided into parts representing each twenty-five feet of length of the greenhouse. Small receptacles must be used. They should be either of earthenware or glass. In many cases, ordinary glass tumblers will be suitable, though the diluted acid should never more than one-fourth fill the receptacle. Each lot of the potassium cyanide should be pulverized or broken up into small pieces, wrapped in thin paper, and laid beside one of the receptacles, these being placed at intervals of about twenty-five feet on the floor of the house. In each receptacle first pour the proper amount of water and then the acid. Beginning with the end of the house farthest from the exit, drop into each receptacle, in succession, the package of potassium cyanide, proceeding as quickly as possible toward the exit. During the few seconds the operator is in the house after the generation of the gas is started, the breath should be held to prevent even the least bad effects. Close and lock the door of the house and, after three hours, partially ventilate it by opening the ventilators, previously arranged for opening from the outside. One ventilator for every twenty-five or thirty feet, opened for ten or fifteen minutes, is sufficient to protect the plants from possible bad effects of over-exposure to the gas. Before inhaling air in the house, however, the ventilation should be more thorough, so that no odor of the gas, which is much like that of peach pits, can be detected.

"A single fumigation will destroy practically all of the insects except the eggs and some of those in the late pupal stage. Although one such treatment might check the insects so that they would not cause noticeable damage for weeks, two subsequent fumigations two and four weeks, respectively, after the first will subject to the gas all of the white flies in the house in stages wherein, under ordinary circumstances, they are unable to withstand its destructive effects.

Other Remedies.

"Fumigation with tobacco, by burning the refuse stems and leaves, has no effect on the greenhouse white fly beyond temporarily stupefying the adults. The adults may be destroyed, however, by vaporizing in the infested house certain tobacco extracts which are sold in liquid form. To accomplish this result preliminary tests should be made, first using the amount recommended in the directions accompanying the preparation. The attempt to control the greenhouse white fly by means of tobacco extracts alone has never, to the writer's knowledge, proven successful, while many cases of failure have been reported. The frequent fumigation necessary to control the insect when once it has become abundant would be impractical and costly. However, in connection with syringing the plants with a soap solution such a treatment may sometimes be of value, although only when the use of hydrocyanic-acid gas is impossible or for some reason undesirable.

"Among the sprays, the best brands of whale-oil soap, used in the propor-

"In most greenhouses, probably 0.007 gram of potassium cyanide for each cubic foot of space for an exposure not exceeding three hours represents the amount which will prove most effective for treatment of the insects without injury to tomato or cucumber plants. In many cases 0.01 gram per cubic foot has been found suitable for the same exposure, but this should not be used except in loose greenhouses where, after trial, a smaller amount is found ineffective. In all greenhouses when an attempt is to be made to control the white fly with hydrocyanic-acid gas, it is advisable to first use not more than 0.005 gram per cubic foot of space for a three hours' exposure. If this amount is sufficient for the house, none of the adults will recover after the fumigation, though in the course of two or three days many more will emerge from the pupa cases. The larva, when destroyed, as they should be by the fumigation, change in two or three days from their normal glistening, greenish color to a yellowish or brownish color. When this result is not obtained by the first test, one or more further tests should be made, increasing the amount of potassium cyanide 0.001 gram per cubic foot of space for each test, with three days intervening to note results, until an amount is reached which is sufficient to destroy the larva, or until the tender leaves of the plant show injuries as a result of the fumigation.

"Tests, thus far, with other greenhouse plants likely to be attacked by the white fly, according to available records, have all been for a much shorter exposure than three hours and with a much larger amount of potassium cyanide, but it is probable that in case plants other than the cucumber and tomato require treatment for this insect, preliminary tests in a fumigating box or in a small greenhouse will show that the amount of chemicals and the length of exposure recommended for these two can be used without the slightest danger to other plants. In most cases much larger rates of potassium cyanide per cubic foot can be used.

hours, partially ventilate it by opening the ventilators, previously arranged for opening from the outside. One ventilator for every twenty-five or thirty feet, opened for ten or fifteen minutes, is sufficient to protect the plants from possible bad effects of over-exposure to the gas. Before inhaling air in the house, however, the ventilation should be more thorough, so that no odor of the gas, which is much like that of peach pits, can be detected.

"A single fumigation will destroy practically all of the insects except the eggs and some of those in the late pupal stage. Although one such treatment might check the insects so that they would not cause noticeable damage for weeks, two subsequent fumigations two and four weeks, respectively, after the first will subject to the gas all of the white flies in the house in stages wherein, under ordinary circumstances, they are unable to withstand its destructive effects.

Other Remedies.

"Fumigation with tobacco, by burning the refuse stems and leaves, has no effect on the greenhouse white fly beyond temporarily stupefying the adults. The adults may be destroyed, however, by vaporizing in the infested house certain tobacco extracts which are sold in liquid form. To accomplish this result preliminary tests should be made, first using the amount recommended in the directions accompanying the preparation. The attempt to control the greenhouse white fly by means of tobacco extracts alone has never, to the writer's knowledge, proven successful, while many cases of failure have been reported. The frequent fumigation necessary to control the insect when once it has become abundant would be impractical and costly. However, in connection with syringing the plants with a soap solution such a treatment may sometimes be of value, although only when the use of hydrocyanic-acid gas is impossible or for some reason undesirable.

"Among the sprays, the best brands of whale-oil soap, used in the proportion of one to one and one-half ounces per gallon of water, have been found to destroy all of the white flies except the eggs, a small percentage of the nearly mature pupæ, and from twenty-five to fifty per cent of the adults which escape the spray by flying from the plants. It is not advisable to syringe tomato plants in greenhouses at any time, when avoidable, as syringing interferes with pollination and produces a damp atmosphere which promotes rot, but the injury by syringing may be as nothing compared with that which is caused daily by the insects. When the use of hydrocyanic-acid gas is impractical, an all-night fumigation with a tobacco extract is recommended, followed during the next day by a syringing with a solution of whale-oil soap or its equivalent.

Comparative Cost of Treatment.

"Potassium cyanide costs from about 30 to 50 cents per pound, according to the amount purchased. Commercial sulphuric acid costs from about 2½ to 10 cents per pound. The entire cost for a single fumigation of a greenhouse containing 20,000 cubic feet is between 20 and 30 cents. The labor required is scarcely, if any, greater than for fumigation with other materials. A single fumigation with a suitable tobacco extract would cost, in a house of the same size, at least $1.50, and the cost of labor for the syringing which is recommended to follow such fumigation would probably not be less than $1. The soap required would cost only a few cents, though possibly as much as the materials used in a fumigation with hydrocyanic-acid gas.

Cautions.

"Hydrocyanic-acid gas is one of the deadliest poisons known, and should always be handled with the greatest care. Never hold the potassium cyanide in the bare hand when pulverizing, but wrap up the lumps in two or more thicknesses of cloth before breaking with a hammer. Dust or small pieces of potassium cyanide should not be thrown away in exposed places, but always buried, as should the contents of the receptacles of the chemicals after the fumigation. Never inhale air in a greenhouse after the generation of gas has begun, and provide against any one entering the house before it is properly ventilated."

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The relation between supply and demand has continued practically unchanged in the past week. There are tremendously heavy receipts in all lines, but each day's receipts of the staples has been cleaned up at some price through the medium of the cheap sales stores scattered through the country. The average returns per flower were never lower at this season, but the aggregate of each day's sales should be reasonably satisfactory to the wholesaler, if the aggregate receipts from each grower's establishment are not all that they might be. If there is anyone who has cause for complaint it is the Beauty grower. Beauties never sold cheaper. All the big growers are coming on with heavy crops and receipts are more than legitimate demand can assimilate. The dealers hold the stock until it is too open to ship and then job it off to the boys with the sidewalk stands at prices which have made a good many street corners veritable rose gardens this past week.

The volume of business increased, especially toward the close of last week. Friday was a heavy day in point of shipments going out, many wagon-loads of express boxes leaving the wholesale market. Saturday was a good local day and Sunday the street salesmen cleaned things out. Monday is always an active shipping day and Tuesday the duller day of the week, but stock moved out fairly well at cheap prices.

Qualities continue excellent, considering the unseasonably warm weather. Tea roses are soft and somewhat reduced in size and Maids are losing color. Carnations are very fine indeed and are coming in in greater quantities than ever before known in this market. There are, however, dozens of buyers all around the country, with new ones springing up every day, who can handle lots of from 1,000 to 10,000 or 15,000 any day when the price is to their liking and so no stock goes to waste. Callas do, however, waste badly and so do violets. Some bulbous stock remains unsalable. The outdoor southern stock is coming in by the wagon-load and goes only at slaughter prices. Outdoor lilac has appeared, also trailing arbutus.

Violets for Easter.

There is a good deal of difference of opinion as to what the violet supply will be for Easter. Some houses do not expect to have any and others are booking orders right along. Last week the New York violets were "shaking" badly but this week they are doing a little better, probably because of a little cooler weather. The chances are that at Easter there will be plenty of shipments, with the small proportion of fair stock readily bringing $1 a hundred and the rest going at any price. Singles are already practically done for.

Help Wanted.

There is a scarcity of help in the wholesale houses and half a dozen good workers could find jobs ranging all the way from places that pay $12 a week to $40. Capable salesmen, buyers and packers are hard to find and in no branch of the trade is help better paid than in the wholesale houses in Chicago. Dependability is the first requisite and then hustle, with a modicum of good manners and a little experience and some natural ability for the work.

Various Notes.

Bassett & Washburn have their big new range up and partly glazed. The beds are first a foot of cinders, then a bottom of drain tile, then six inches of soil, the side boards of pecky cypress. Their improvements this season will cost close to $70,000. There are no nails in the new range except in the ventilators, over 20,000 screws being used.

George Reinberg says that in spite of the heavily loaded market he is well satisfied with the last few weeks' business. He is now on with another Beauty crop like the famous one at Christmas. Jos. Foerster, who has charge of the salesroom, says shipping business has been especially heavy the last couple of weeks.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will rebuild some of the older houses this year. The quantity of stock they have cut this past winter is something remarkable and they propose to put every house in its highest producing condition for next season.

E. C. Amling says that he thinks business decidedly good and prices well maintained, considering the great quantity of stock coming into the market, which is certainly prodigious.

The Arendt Bulb Co., Tamaroa, Ill., is shipping daffodils and jonquils in quantity to the E. F. Winterson Co. They shipped over a million flowers last year and will do as well this season. The stock is fine.

N. J. Wieter says that business in carnation cuttings was slow in January and February but that March made up for it. Chrysanthemum plants are selling well.

Albert Amling is already cutting Kaiserin of quality which would be a credit at the height of the season for this fine summer bloomer.

Harry Rowe is using Gen. MacArthur rose, obtained through J. B. Deamud, and says it takes well with his customers. It opens well and is a good keeper.

On April 12 Albert Fuchs will auction off the balance of his stock at 2059 North Halsted street. The sale will begin at 10 o'clock sharp and there is much good stock to be sold.

On March 30 W. N. Rnidd heard a shot in Mt. Greenwood cemetery and found the body of August Wassou, a florist at 539 Eightieth street, lying by the grave of the suicide's daughter.

Joe Curran is again with O. J. Friedman, after a few months at Mosconesotes. The latter has closed his north side store.

George Woodward has gone to Pasadena, Cal., to lay out J. J. Mitchell's new estate there.

John Zech says he is well pleased with the first week of business for Zech & Mann.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. will try Killarney rose for next season.

Weiland & Risch will plant a quantity of new Wellesley rose for next season.

The Kennicott Bros. Co. reports having shipped out 38,000 carnations March 31.

C. W. McKellar reports a good sale on chicks and ducklings for Easter.

O. W. Frese is now with the Poehlmann Bros. Co.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Winter still lingers in the lap of spring. The hottest March 28 and 29 in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, touching 76 degrees in the shade, was naturally followed by a chilling blast and on Sunday overcoats and blue noses were again in evidence. The consequent decrease in shipments of cut flowers on Monday hardened the market and held prices steady, but at prices which were about the lowest of the season. Violets were few and far between on Monday evening. They became quite aggressive for a time and an occasional "special" touched high-water mark for weeks, 50 cents, there being not enough to go around. But the usual flood was looked for on Tuesday and with a return of warm weather there will be few left for the Easter festivity. One prominent violet dealer declares the tide has set in toward a steady retrograde movement and that overproduction and lack of quality are the real reasons for the great slump in violet values in the season of 1905. He predicts even worse times the coming winter and a supply far in excess of any possible demand. Fifty-four new houses at Rhinebeck are reported to have been contracted for already. All kinds and classes of people are inoculated with the fever and it looks as if violet raising would be the only industry of that section.

Southern narcissus is here in such quantities that selling it at any price was a problem on Saturday. Twenty-five cents was the bottom and lots of it had to be sacrificed at that figure. Quality was excellent and shipments arrived in good condition. Roses have journeyed steadily downward. Thousands of the best Beauties were sold at 10 and 12 cents on Saturday. General Jacqueminot is in the market and as popular as ever. Pansies sell slowly. Plenty of cut lilies arrive daily and the best seldom go above 75 cents per dozen.

Carnations are very abundant and values have fallen. As Easter approaches prices will naturally harden and advance and Saturday of the present week will doubtless see a change for the better.

Wild smilax has advanced in price and is hard to obtain in first-class condition. Some poor stock has been shipped direct from the south. Kreshover handles a superior lot and seems to have the usual stock for his customers. The present asking price is $7 for a box of fifty to sixty pounds, with $8 to $10 possible for Easter.

Various Notes.

Next Monday evening will be Easter plant night at the New York Florists'

Club rooms in the Grand Opera House building. Some fine specimens of Rambler roses, bougainvilleas and other seasonable plants are expected. Secretary Young will receive and care for all shipments, as usual. A very interesting meeting is promised and a large attendance desired. The Bowling Club will meet at the Thirtieth street alleys at 3 p. m. on Monday. Matters of importance must be settled at this meeting and a full house is requested.

The auction houses are well filled with buyers and prices have been fairly encouraging. Hardy roses, rhododendrons and evergreens form the bulk of the offerings to date. Fruit trees and shrubs are beginning to arrive and the prospect for a long and successful season seems assured the men of magnetic voice and persuasive smile.

Peter Crowe and wife, of Utica, were in the city last week and have departed for an outing at Old Point Comfort. J. C. Spencer, of Utica, was also a visitor and spent Thursday evening teaching the Flatbush boys how to bowl.

The ever welcome Phil Breitmeyer, of Detroit, also called to look over the Easter plant supply.

The market at Canal street has been opened and from now on John Birnie and his confreres will be busy until Decoration day, with short intervals for slumber. The market building is still a "dream."

Charles Millang is handling some fine Brunners from Victor Zuber, of Whitestone, and has arranged to sell John Messen's (of Newton), 20,000 cut lilies at Easter. He will have his conservatory and extra rooms stocked with every variety of Easter flowering plant as usual.

Walter Sheridan has been handling an average of over 1,000 special Beauties a day for some time.

Last Thursday his brothers and friends gave Jack Gunther a reception at the store in honor of his recovery.

A. J. Fellouris has returned from a successful southern trip, where he visited his shippers and customers. He has nearly a thousand cases of galax for the spring and summer secured, between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 leaves. For Easter he will have in addition an abundance of arbutus, lilac and other spring flowers.

Mr. Koster, Jr., of Koster & Co., Boskoop, Holland, is in the city and will return to Europe on May 10.

Arthur Merritt is now with the Rosary Co., on Thirty-fourth street.

Reed & Keller have bought the florists' supply end of Frank Netchert's business and also his extensive machinery for the manufacture of metal designs. New York headquarters for novelties for florists may well be claimed for this enterprising firm.

Theo. Lang bowled an average of 230 in five games one evening last week.

Pankok & Schumacher, of Whitestone, will build two new houses this summer. They now have 15,000 square feet devoted to lilies, oranges, hydrangeas, bougainvilleas and other seasonable Easter plants. They will have a large stock of Hydrangea rosea next year. One of their novelties is a seedling dahlia from Countess of Lonsdale and they have a fine stock of Vermilion Cactus.

The Hinode Florist Co., at Whitestone, has a fine range of houses completed and will build three more, 25x150, this summer. They have 25,000 lilies in pots that promise to be in perfect shape for Easter and 2,000 grand Crimson Ramblers, grafted stock, compact, of fine shape, also 500 hydrangeas and 4,000 hybrid roses, as well as many other Easter plants and Japanese novelties. The same varieties fill their 17,000 square feet of glass at Woodside. Plenty of land has been purchased for steady yearly development.

Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, has some twenty houses stocked with Easter plants as well as a fine house for daisies and carnations, Queen and Prosperity. He may fairly be styled the hydrangea king, having thousands of plants, Hortensis in all colors, azurea, rosea, Thos. Hogg and Joan d'Arc. His Baby Ramblers are beauties and he has a lot of them, also Crimson Ramblers and Philadelphia, ericas, genistas, lilacs, daisies, the whole in superb condition. Mr. Dupuy has an able lieutenant in his good wife and has built himself one of the most convenient homes in the town, where he delights in dispensing hospitality.

Ghormley received 35,000 daffodils one day last week from Delaware and Virginia. Shipments continue far beyond expectations and nearly every wholesaler in the city has had a share of them.

A. L. Young & Co. seem quite satisfied with the steady growth of their business, which is largely conducted on a cash basis.

Retailers everywhere are in the midst of Easter preparations and already the windows are a charming vision. Plants are being delivered daily and are selling well, indicating the fulfillment of the prophecy that it would be Easter every day from now until the consummation, still nearly three weeks distant.

Roberts & Greenwald, on Columbus avenue, have dissolved partnership, Mr. Greenwald continuing the business.

The Market.

We had very warm weather during the greater portion of the past week, which caused a very heavy output of flowers. On several days the market was quite druggy, Saturday being an exception, as nearly everything cleaned out nicely. The first few days of April have been cold and blustery, conditions better fitted for the preceding month, but with generally clear skies more flowers are coming in than can be absorbed at this season.

Roses have tumbled in prices heavily and it is hard to give quotations on these. Beauties are plentiful and quite druggy. Liberty sells better, but is much lower.

Such hybrids as are coming in bring very fair prices. Carnations are arriving in enormous quantities; from $1 to $2.50 are the prices, according to quality, a few extra select going higher. Single violets are getting scarce, but doubles are still abundant. From 75 cents down to 300 for $1 are usual quotations. Daffodils remain about the same, but there is less call for tulips. Some very good Spanish iris is coming in, selling all the way from 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred. The demand for this flower, strange to say, is not very good. Callas and Easter lilies are abundant and lower. Asparagus and ferns remain about the same.

Various Notes.

Ten new members were elected to membership in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at a meeting of the board of directors on April 1. Messrs. Henri de Vilmorin, Philip de Vilmorin and James H. Veitch were elected honorary corresponding members. The secretary was asked to write to the presidents of the Carnation and Rose Societies to see if it would be possible to have the two societies meet at the same time in Boston in 1906. Quite a number of prominent growers would like to see the two conventions meet together if a date agreeable to each could be arranged. We believe the two societies have never previously met in the same city in the same year and this would appear to be a splendid opportunity for them to hold a joint exhibition. It would undoubtedly draw a very much larger attendance of the members of both societies than could possibly be secured at separate conventions. More particularly is this true of western and southern growers, a good many of whom grow and are interested in both flowers. If those who are exclusively carnation or rose growers will but be willing to forward or set back the dates of their meetings a little there is no reason why a satisfactory arrangement cannot be made to join hands for once.

Welch Bros. are distributing agents for plants of the popular Killarney rose. They report this rose as a fine seller and wonderful keeper. They are receiving exceptionally fine Queen of Edgely from the Floral Exchange, Philadelphia, which they say sell well now, when Beauties are hard to move.

E. Sutermeister is shipping extra well grown Spiraea astilboides and the variety superba to the Park street market.

C. E. Dickerman, Dorchester, and John Husband, of Cambridge, are sending fine cinerarias to the new market. Hoffman, at the same stand, has a fine assortment of azaleas and rhododendrons.

Oswald Ralph, of South Weymouth, has a seedling carnation, the result of a cross between a white seedling and Maceo, which is very promising. The color is a light magenta showing well under artificial light.

Galvin had one of the windows at his Tremont street store filled with extra fine Gardenia florida the past week.

Anderson & Williams are bringing in a fine assortment of well flowered tea and hybrid perpetual roses in pots to the new market, which sell well.

Farquhars, among other bulbous stock, have some of the fine double orange tulip, Cairrone d'Or which seems to take the popular fancy. At the recent exhibition it was the most admired tulip shown. Those who have not grown it should give it a trial.

Robert Miller is at East Brookfield, Mass., and not East Bridgewater, as stated in last week's notes.

Sim & Kidder are still shipping quantities of grand Princess of Wales violets to the Park street market. Sim's sweet peas, which command top prices, are superb. Burpee's new Sunbeams, of primrose color, are very fine with him.

Weather conditions have at last allowed us to get sweet peas and a few other early seeds into the ground. It is seldom the ground is so dry at this season. Our winter rains were very scant indeed and for the benefit of vegetation we hope the arrears of precipitation will be forthcoming ere long.

Indications point to a rather heavy loss in trees and shrubs from the late winter. Recently planted evergreens seem to have suffered severely. A dry fall and winter, added to the prolonged cold, is responsible for these conditions.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

We have just passed through the ferocious month of March, with its supposed piercing winds and howling blizzards. I can say that the month past was remarkable for its calmness and serenity. Sunshine was in great abundance, which, in addition to the thermometer hovering between 70 and 80 degrees, made stock plentiful. It looked at times as if a great glut would result, but the bright, warm weather was an incentive to the public to purchase the beautiful, irrespective of the Lenten season, which always has an effect on the market.

Business, generally speaking, is fair, with an abundance of high grade flowers. Prices remain firm on some special lines, but as a rule are away below par. Beauties are in good demand, at from $1 to $4 per dozen. Home-grown blooms are superior to shipped stock. Tea roses are not over-abundant and average from 3 to 8 cents. Meteor is of good color and quality at the same price. Carnations are still in heavy supply. Prices range from $10 to $30 per thousand, most of them going at the former price.

A prominent bank opening on the west side created quite a furor in the carnation market on April 1. Twelve thousand carnations, Beauties and tea roses by the hundreds were used. Had it not been for this special demand many a consignment would have gone by the way.

The plant trade is quite brisk and many very fine azaleas, lilies, genistas and pans of bulbous stock grace the retailers' windows. Particularly noticeable were some pans of Murillo tulips in Collins & Harrison's store.

Various Notes.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is making an elegant display of great variety. Some very fine roses from the Rocky River plant adorn the windows, while some well grown plants play an effective part.

Smith & Fetters are in the midst of a moving "bee" but are still doing business at the old stand. They expect to get into their new quarters very shortly.

Jas. Eadie is making a prominent decorative effect with Beauties sent in from his East Cleveland plant.

C. M. Wagner reports an abundance of funeral work, which keeps him busy.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. is receiving some fine Beauties from the Essex Greenhouses.

Robt. Kegg is still bringing in some fine Lawson carnations.

Isaac Kennedy, of West Park, is cutting the finest tea roses near Cleveland. His sport of Bride is a wonder.

The Ohio Floral Co. is sending to its Cleveland store some choice roses with stems from two to three feet.

The F. R. Williams Co.'s cut of roses is quite heavy and color magnificent. This concern is compelled to discard Meteor, owing to the small fly which was so disastrous in and about Chicago. A house of Kaiserin 50x150 is a wonderful sight, thousands of buds developing.

It is with sincere regret that we learn of the death of Mrs. Casper Aul. The sympathies of the craft are extended to Mr. Aul.

Jas. Eastwell is visiting the east, looking up Easter novelties.

FOREST CITY.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market has shown some improvement, but may still be termed dull and irregular. The warm weather has shortened the supply of violets, which bid fair to be out of the market by Easter. Sweet peas are taking their place to some extent and on several days the supply has not equaled the demand. There were hardly as many flowers used at the opening of city councils on Monday as last season. Beauties, Liberties, Meteors and potted plants were the popular offerings. The supply of southern daffodils, while hardly as large as a week ago, appears more than sufficient, there being virtually no price for them. Indications point to a good supply of Easter lilies and an exceptionally fine lot of Easter plants. Wild smilax is scarce.

Mr. Stokes' Easter Plants.

Walter P. Stokes, of the well-known seed firm of Johnson & Stokes, has a range of glass adjoining his attractive home at Moorestown, N. J. He makes a specialty of Easter plants, which are now making a fine show. The lilies are largely longiflorums, short, stocky plants, with good foliage and buds developing nicely. There are a nice lot of azaleas in medium sizes, two good batches of spiraeas and a goodly number of Hydrangea Otaksa, both pink and blue, with large heads of bloom. Mr. Stokes has partially solved the difficult problem of securing an Easter and a spring crop from the same set of houses, by filling two large buildings with his Easter plants, now almost ready, and potting up the spring plants in the space thus made. These comprise a general assortment of geraniums and soft-wooded stock, also some vegetables, two houses of carnations, some rubbers propagated from stock planted out and a nice lot of tulips. The feature of the place is the valley, which is forced in quantity throughout the year. There is quite a heavy cut now of sturdy looking flowers with good foliage, with prospects of a still larger supply at Easter.

Various Notes.

Hugh Graham has, in addition to the fine collection of Easter plants described last week, a very nice lot of Hydrangea Otaksa.

The scene at Bayersdorfer & Co. is one of great activity. The big warehouse is full of cases packed, and partially packed, for shipment. Clerks are hurrying about, completing orders, and big drays below are being loaded with cases of supplies for all parts of the country.

M. Rice & Co. received a few days ago a large shipment of the popular twig ware, consisting of nests, hampers and baskets, which kept them busy for several days filling their back orders, which were very large.

The Modern System.

Through the courtesy of J. G. Whilldin, of the Whilldin Pottery Co., the REVIEW is able to present its readers with the following original and clever lines:

Oh, isn't it great to be up-to-date,
And live in this year of grace,
With a system and place for everything,
And—nobody knows the place!

We've an index card for each thing we do,
And everything under the sun;
It takes so long to fill out the cards,
We never get anything done.

We've loose leaf ledgers for saving time,
The Lord knows what they cost,
When half our time is spent each day
Hunting for leaves that are lost.

Stenographers who spell like "H—"
And make us swear and cuss;
When we are not dictating to them
Why—they're dictating to us.

And sectional this, and sectional that;
We'll soon have sectional legs;
I dreamt last night that I made a meal
Of sectional ham and eggs.

I dreamt that I lived in a sectional house,
And rode on a sectional "hoss,"
And drew my pay in sections from
A sectional "section boss."

Oh, isn't it great to be up-to-date,
And live in this year of grace,
With a system and place for everything,
And—nobody knows the place.

PHIL.

LONDON, ONT.—Wm. Gammage is actively interested in the approaching annual exhibition of the Western Fair Association. Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, has accepted an invitation to judge the floral display.

KENTON, O.—H. E. Rosenberger has gone into business with Carl Gilmore and the firm will trade as Gilmore & Rosenberger. They have begun the erection of two houses 28x100 and later another one will be put up. A hot water heating plant will be installed.

ALLIANCE, O.—The Lamborn Floral Co. has been incorporated by Leroy L. Lamborn, Mary W. Lamborn, C. C. Weybrecht, H. C. Koehler and Ruth Burdge. The capital stock is $25,000. New greenhouses to cover a space 120x300 feet will be put up at once, the material coming from Chicago.

WASHINGTON.

J. R. Freeman's place on Brightwood avenue in Takoma Park is in good condition. He has some very good carnations. Mrs. T. W. Lawson has been good all winter and shows no sign of running down. Challenger, Enchantress, White Cloud and Joost are as good as ever. Roses are in full crop but will be off crop for Easter if this warm weather continues, but one house of Kaiserin and La France will come in just right. The Georgetown place, in charge of Jos. Freeman, Jr., is in fine shape for Easter. He grows a lot of pot plants. Lilies are very good. G. E. A.

BIRD-IN-HAND, PA.—A recent fire in the boiler house of E. J. Weaver gave the whole place a close call.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—T. W. Long reports a good business and a fine opening for developing both a retail and wholesale trade.

HOUSTON, TEX.—A. W. Hawkins will build a greenhouse and go into business on Arlington street, between Twentieth and Twenty-second avenues.

THE National Horticultural Society of France and the Rose Society of France have organized an international congress of horticulture to sit at Paris May 22 and 23. An elaborate program of lectures and discussions has been prepared and all horticultural bodies are invited to be represented.

FISCHER'S GRAND FREESIA PURITY.

A magnificent, snowy, glistening white, of very large size and great length and strength of stem: a dozen sprays making as fine a showing as a dozen large white carnations and can be used wherever carnations can be used for decorative purposes. A truss bears from eight to eleven buds, of which six are frequently open at one time, making an immense flower. It is of great substance and bears shipping without bruising. Stems can be cut two feet long and are as rigid as sticks. It is very prolific in bloom, producing three to four side shoots of eight buds each besides the main flower. Bulbs no bigger than dried wax beans produce as large a flower as the largest bulbs, only the stems are shorter. It propagates very freely, producing from four to eight bulbs, all of which will flower the next year.

All growers of freesia should try this queen of freesia for when once grown you will want no other.

Price for large bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.
Discount on 5000 and over.

CURRIE BROS., Milwaukee, report business starting off very finely. They expect the volume will be greater than ever this year, especially in the nursery line, but also in the seed department.

J. H. BAKER, of Baker Bros., Fort Worth, Tex., says that the demand for vegetable seeds has begun to let down a little, except for vine seeds. It has been a very good early season and before all orders are in the year promises to be a record breaker. There is a larger call than ever before for peas. A good deal of corn had to be replanted.

THE SEED TRADE.

Reports as to the seed trade to April 1 are almost all to the effect that the volume of business to that date is ahead of recent years because of the mild weather of March. January and February were not up to the average with any save the jobbing houses but March has more than made up the loss.
While the busy season has come earlier than usual to the mail order houses and this seems certain to be a very good year for this branch, still jobbers report that the requirements of general merchants handling seeds have been larger than ever and re-orders are already coming in.

NITRATE OF SODA.

What effect would about 500 pounds of nitrate of soda have on a piece of ground or a greenhouse 32x200? The ground had never been broken up before and was heavily manured in the first place. When the lettuce came up or was transplanted and had taken a good hold, the nitrate of soda was put on, not mixed in water at all, but put on the ground and worked in. The first crop had about 250 pounds and the second the same. The first crop was good but the second crop, of lettuce, was no good at all. Can you tell us what the effect will be on a third crop?
G. & S.

Nitrate of soda is used at the rate of about 300 pounds to an acre, so you have certainly been using it pretty freely when you have put 500 pounds on that small patch, and I am not surprised that your crop of lettuce has failed. The soil would get so overcharged with it that it would be impossible for the plants to make healthy roots. I would not advise planting a third crop of lettuce. Better grow some gross feeding crop, such as cauliflower, for a time to help work the surplus nitrate out of the soil. Before planting such crop I think it would be advisable to give your soil a thorough soaking of water, so as to wash part of the manure out or it may prove too hot quarters even for such a gross feeder as cauliflower.
W. S. CROYDON.

GREENHOUSE BEETS.

Though beets can be grown in a lettuce house temperature, it is not the most profitable temperature to grow them in, as growth is too slow. Houses that have grown lettuce all winter and are now getting a little too warm for that crop can be employed to better advantage if devoted to beets now. It should be quite easy to run such houses at a night temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees from this out without hard firing and the sun heat on most days will be sufficient to maintain a day temperature of from 75 to 80 degrees, at which beets ought to mature in about four weeks from time of planting, providing good plants are used.

The seed could be sown right in the bench and thinned to the proper distance if necessary, but the better plan is to sow in flats and transplant to the bench afterwards. This is a considerable saving of bench room, as for nearly half the period of their growth they are occupying but small space in the flats. If the seeds are sown rather thinly in the flats it will not be necessary to prick them over until they are large enough to be set in the bench, but if by some mischance they are too thick in the flats and are thought to be in danger of becoming drawn and weakly before they are large enough for setting in the bench, it would certainly be better to prick them over and insure good plants.

Rich soil is unnecessary for the growth of this crop, so that any soil in which some other crop had been grown would be all right without the addition of manure unless the soil was very much exhausted, in which case the addition of a little well decomposed manure would be advantageous.

There are several varieties of the Egyptian type, such as Crosby's, Eclipse, etc., all of which are adapted for the purpose in hand, being round, dark red and quick maturing.

Beets as a rule are not much troubled with insects. Greenfly will sometimes attack them if the atmosphere of the house is kept too dry. Should these make their appearance, tobacco, or any of the ordinary remedies can be employed to keep them in check, but with plenty of moisture both atmospheric and at the root there will be little danger from any serious attack.

ISMENE CALATHINA.

Ismene calathina, which, by the way, is allied to the pancratium, is one of the most useful and beautiful of white-flowered stove plants. Bulbs which have been rested during the winter months may be shaken out and started into growth. A suitable compost to grow them in should consist of two parts fibrous loam, one part leaf-soil, and one part old hotbed manure, with a liberal addition of charcoal and sand. Clean, well-drained pots should be ready and should be of different sizes, according to the size of the bulbs. Pot firmly, and keep the apex of the bulb level with the surface of the soil, and give a sprinkling of sand to finish it off. Give a good watering, and place the plants in a house with a temperature of about 60 degrees allowing a rise by sun-heat.

Water very carefully until the pots become full of roots, but keep well damped with the syringe, and also give a sprinkling overhead on warm, sunny days to encourage growth. Ismenes are quick-rooting plants, having large, white, fleshy roots, and if good results are expected, should not be allowed to become potbound, or, as far as my experience goes with them, they will not flower. Therefore I would recommend them to have plenty of pot-room, and when the roots have reached the crocks give them a shift into a larger sized pot, taking care not to injure the roots in doing so. A slightly rougher compost may be used for the last potting, with the addition of a little good fertilizer. Do not confine the plants to a close atmosphere, but give air on favorable occasions, or they will become weak and drawn and will not throw such fine flower-spikes.

Diluted manure-water may be given with advantage about twice a week, and occasionally a sprinkling of artificial manure will be very beneficial. When the flowers begin to open remove the plants to a cool, dry greenhouse, and give clear water. The plants last a considerable time in flower when allowed to grow under cool conditions at the finish, and are much more scented than when grown in strong heat. After they have finished flowering cut off the flower-spike and stand the plants where they can be well looked after. They should still be fed lightly, as this will help them to develop new bulbs and offsets. As the foliage turns yellow gradually withhold water, and eventually dry them off altogether. The pots may be laid on their sides under the greenhouse stage during the winter, providing it is not too wet.—Gardening World.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencillings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business for some unaccountable reason is better than I have seen it at this season for a number of years. Trade was really quiet for some weeks before Lent commenced, but since that time it has been really good. The weather has not been so favorable for a big crop of flowers and this fact, together with a rush of funeral work which all the stores have been favored with, has helped to clean up stock and keep everything and everyone on the rush. Roses are of better quality at present than they have been for some time and they are consequently bringing a shade more in price. Carnations remain at the same figures I quoted a couple of weeks ago, with a good demand. Violets and daffodils are out of season and tulips are past their prime. Harrisii and longiflorums are getting more plentiful and the prospects are for a big cut at Easter. Valley is in good supply and the demand fully equals it.

Smilax and good maidenhair fern are not over-plentiful.

Various Notes.

Superintendent McLaren, of Golden Gate park, estimates that it will take $50,000 for the coming season to properly cover the various parks in the city with loam and fertilizers. He expects to do considerable grading as soon as the weather becomes favorable.

Culligan & Co., 211 Sutter street, deserve considerable praise for the handsome quarters they have recently fitted up and for the artistic window displays they are giving the public. They are successors to Geo. B. Jones, one of San Francisco's pioneer florists.

A visit to St. Mary's cemetery, Oakland, shows extensive plantings of palms and other decorative trees being made under the direction of Superintendent Kelly.

Wm. Barry, E. O. Webb and J. F. Seulberger have been re-appointed horticultural commissioners of Alameda county.

connected with the State University at Berkeley that a plague of caterpillars threatens the life of the grand old oaks on the college grounds and action will be taken at once to save the trees by destroying the pests. It is a peculiar fact that every few years hordes of hungry caterpillars make their appearance in this neighborhood and this year's army seems to be larger than ever.

The oak trees in Berkeley are celebrated as being among the most beautiful specimens in the state and they are particularly susceptible to the damage done by the caterpillar, many of the trees having been entirely destroyed several years ago. The appetite of these caterpillars is so insatiable that when they are fairly in action they make an end of leaves and twigs and all the tender and edible parts of the trees, leaving them in a condition that presages complete destruction. Professor W. A. Sit-chell, head of the botanical department, has several methods of extermination that he will use, and publish the one that he finds does the work quickest.

It is only some particular spots that are visited in this way and very searching inquiries and experiments along this line will shortly be published by the botanical department.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale markets show few changes from last report. Prices have varied greatly, running low all the week on first quality stock. Although fresh stock was fairly well cleaned up on some days, the glut is still with us and from the looks of things on Monday it has come to stay throughout this week. The report is general throughout the city that business is dull in all lines except in funeral work, which some of us have been blessed with the past week, so with these conditions it is utterly impossible for the trade to use up the vast amount of stock sent to this market. At Kuehn's, Ellis', Berning's and the new market of Angermueller, who just opened, stock of all kinds is seen in great quantities.

All stock is of extra fine quality. In roses we have plenty of extra fine stock. Beauties of all lengths are more than enough. Extra fancy carnations at $2 per hundred is surely cheap. There are so many of these that we get tired looking them over for the choicest varieties.

Bulbous flowers of all kinds are greatly overstocked. Tulips have very little call. Harrisii and callas sell fairly well, also Romans and Dutch hyacinths. It looks as though this stock will be pretty well over by Easter. Violets are about over, very few coming in, pale and small. Greens are as usual in supply and demand.

The weather is still fine. A day's rain the past week made things all the better for the plant men, who are very busy shaping the grounds for early planting. Union market is alive with blooming plants, with plenty of buyers. Seedsmen along Fourth street report a heavy demand for grass and flower seeds.

Various Notes.

Henry Aul, one of our foremost growers, will build two new houses this summer. He has made application for membership in the St. Louis Florists' Club.

Miss Hoffman has moved her store from Sidney street around the corner to a much larger place. Miss Hoffman reports quite a little funeral work.

The St. Louis Palm Co., at 923 Olive street, has made extensive improvements in its large show windows.

Oscar Heile, on South Broadway, reports a busy week with funeral work. He is sporting a new dog on his delivery wagon.

F. H. Weber, on Boyle avenue, is showing some well grown blooming plants, also some extra fancy cut stock. He reports very good trade since Lent began.

Hans Jepson, private gardener to C. D. McLure, reports that he will grow some specimen chrysanthemums for the flower show this fall.

Mrs. Wm. Ellison and daughter spent the past week in Chicago, leaving Arthur in charge.

Max Rotter, on North Broadway, says he has felt little effect of Lent. Plenty of funeral work has kept him busy.

Frank Buckscht, formerly a partner of Henry Berning in the retail business, has formed a partnership with H. R. Stoeke, to carry on a general landscape business. Both men were with the floricultural department during the World's Fair.

Robert Meinhardt has taken a position as bookkeeper with C. A. Kuehn. He is a cousin to Fred H. Meinhardt.

The members of the St. Louis Florists' Club should not forget to attend the meeting on next Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Odd Fellows' building. The feature of the meeting will be a talk by several of the large growers on Easter stock, which will be very interesting to the retailers, who will want to know where to get the best blooming plants. Several of the members will scatter food for thought and bones for contention of the growers, retailers and wholesalers. Six applications for membership will also be presented, among them some permanent growers.

TORONTO.

The weather is fine and prospects are that spring has come, although we hear prophets say that all those fine March days borrowed from April will have to be paid back.

Business has been good, although many of our growers are complaining about stock not going as readily as it should. They forget that the bright weather is giving them more to sell than they would have otherwise, and in consequence they can sell much cheaper and save coal. Easter lilies are coming in quite plentifully and in some quarters it is expected there will be a shortage for Easter. Azaleas and many of our best flowering plants will be short, on account of the late Easter and the advanced season.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

E. A. CUSTER has purchased the Mound Nursery near Farmington, Ill.

At Lake Arthur, N. M., the Townsite Co. has planted 70,000 apple grafts for the improvement of the town.

THE PHOENIX Nursery Co., Delavan, Wis., is working on spring orders with a full force and expects the largest season to date.

THE Graham Nursery Co., Mechanicsville, Ia., has been incorporated, with $10,000 capital stock, by H. F. Collver and J. M. Graham.

D. T. MCCARTHY, nurseryman, of Lockport, delivered an address on grafted fruit trees before the Niagara County Farmers' Club on March 25.

NURSEYMEN as well as fruit growers will be interested in "Raspberries," by L. C. Corbett, just issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture as Farmers' Bulletin No. 213.

A SHIPMENT of 60,000 fruit trees from a Missouri nursery was recently held up at North Yakima, Wash., by the state inspector. The shipper was given the privilege of removing the stock from the state.

H. E. WEED, landscape architect at Chicago, has sent out a circular offering his services as "consulting gardener and entomologist" to visit his clients' places periodically and "intelligently direct the work of his gardener."

R. F. CROUSE, of Paris, Tex., has bought forty acres of land at Roswell, N. M., and has ordered the stock for establishing a nursery. Mr. Crouse was formerly connected with the Texas Nursery Co., of Sherman.

In Eddy county, New Mexico, a jury decided against the Stark Bros. Nursery Company in a suit brought to recover the sum of $3,500 which the company claimed was due to them for trees delivered to F. G. Tracey in 1893. Mr. Tracey, while not denying that the trees were delivered to him, did claim that they were not what he ordered and not what the company represented them to be, and the jury gave him the verdict.

CHASE BROS.' PLANS.

Wm. Pitkin, of Chase Bros. & Co., Rochester, says: "We have sold our property on University avenue and have purchased nine acres of land in Brighton just west of the tracks of the Auburn branch of the New York Central railroad. Here we shall erect two large buildings for packing. One of these will be 300x300, one story and basement, of block concrete or solid concrete. The other building will be of the same construction and 100x100. These buildings will give us 40,000 square feet of frost-proof storage and packing room. In addition to this, we shall have a siding from the New York Central running into the buildings, giving us 400 feet of track on which to load and unload our stock under cover.

"Then we intend to build an office building 60x100 feet in size, one story and basement. Our new plant will have a frontage of 600 feet on East avenue. We have been hampered by lack of room the past few years. We estimate that the buildings and equipment of the new plant will cost $50,000. We intend to begin grading in April and will begin the buildings in May so that we can have them completed in September."

INDIANA NURSERY LAW.

The legislature of the state of Indiana has just enacted a law intended to prevent the delivery of nursery stock not true to name. Here is the text of the act:

Section 1.—Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, that it shall be unlawful for any person, persons, firm or corporation, acting either as principal or agent, to sell to any person, persons, firm or corporation any fruit tree or fruit trees representing the same to be of a certain kind, variety and description, and thereafter to deliver to such person in filling such order and in completing such sale a fruit tree or fruit trees of a different kind, variety or description of such fruit tree or fruit trees so ordered and sold.

Sec. 2.—Any person violating any provision of this act shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty ($50) dollars nor more than five hundred ($500) dollars.

Sec. 3.—Prosecutions under this act may be commenced at any time within five years from the time of delivery of such fruit tree or fruit trees mentioned in Section 1.

NURSERY IMPORTS.

EVERGREENS AND VINES.

[An extract from a paper by Joseph Meehan, read under the general heading, "Our Horticultural Indebtedness to Japan," read before the Germantown Horticultural Society March 13, 1905.]

How very much we are indebted to Japan for many beautiful evergreens. For many years the Cryptomeria Japonica, the Cephalotaxus Fortunei, Abies polita, Pinus Koransis and many other coniferous sorts have been familiar on our grounds. The cryptomeria exists in many a fine specimen about Philadelphia, and the cephalotaxus is not rare. The Japanese holly, Ilex crenata, and its near relative, the Osmanthus aquifolium, are quite hardy hereabouts and more of these two beauties should be seen.

The use, beauty and utility of the many species and varieties of retinosporas need hardly be referred to, so well are they known. The golden tinted ones, Retinospora pisifera aurea and Retinospora plumosa aurea, are particularly valuable because of their color. Whether it be winter or summer the golden color is pronounced and pleasing. Pisifera aurea is a less dense grower than the other, and for this reason for contrast sake both should be planted.

Among evergreens of shrub-like character, Japan has not been backward in supplying us. There are the many euonymuses, from the green-leaved Japonicus to its gold and silver-leaved forms, the climbing one, radicans, and such larger growing sorts as Sieboldianus. Then there is the Skimmia Japonica, now a favorite with florists for winter decoration of windows; and all these are hardy. The little Andromeda Japonica and the Azalea amoena are also from that far off country.

Vines were not to be mentioned in these notes, but I cannot refrain from noticing some of them, to show what we owe to that country.

The Actinidia polygama, Bignonia grandiflora, Celastrus articulatus, Hydrangea scandens, Jasminum nudiflorum, Lonicera brachypoda and Vitis heterophylla variegata, are among the number; and then there is Clematis paniculata and Dolichos Japonicus to add to the list. And what would we do without our Japanese wistarias, beautifying our dwellings in spring better than anything of like nature could do, and lastly, and to end these notes, let me call attention to the queen of all useful vines, the Ampelopsis Veitchii, which clothes our dwellings with its bright green leaves in summer and its bronzy red ones in autumn.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society March 28 was marked by a very large attendance. Three new members were elected. There was a falling off of exhibits, probably on account of everybody being too busy to trouble with them. F. R. Pierson was awarded a certificate of merit for Baby Rambler rose and L. A. Martin a similar award for an excellent vase of Antirrhinum majus. A very interesting and instructive essay on spraying for San Jose scale was read by L. A. Martin. Quite a lively discussion ensued, the consensus of opinion being that unless some concerted action is taken to check this pest, few fruit trees will be left alive in the course of a few years.

The secretary announced several liberal donations towards the prize fund of the November show, the prize list for which is nearly completed. F. R. Pierson asked for the opinion of the members regarding the most suitable number of carnations to be staged for the cup he offers, his desire being to give the small growers a chance to compete as well as the larger growers. After the members had freely expressed their opinions, Mr. Pierson decided to give the cup for seventy-five blooms, being twenty-five each of the three Lawsons, pink, white and variegated, instead of giving it for fifty blooms Variegated Lawson, as originally intended. Next month Prof. Powell will deliver a lecture on trees and roses. For this lecture the school trustees have kindly granted the society the use of the lecture room in the high school, which will allow of making the lecture open to the public.

GAS WATER.

Referring to his trouble as a result of drainage from gas getting into his water supply, B. P. Critchell, of Cincinnati, writes:

"We have at last got over our trouble from the poisonous effects of the gas water. We lost two entire batches of cuttings from the effects of this poisoning, and do not know whether we have any chance to recover. Do not know whether it is the fault of the city sewer system, or the fault of the gas company in turning their gas water into an open creek, but we do know the effects of it, which not only for a time killed the cuttings, but also affected all the growing stock, but at the present time the growing stock is recovering, and is now doing very well."

The State Society Meets.

The Colorado Society of Floriculturists held its annual meeting in the rooms of the State Board of Horticulture in the state house in Denver, March 24. There was a large attendance and the enthusiasm displayed showed that the florists of the state are awakening to the value of such meetings. The papers read were: "The Propagation and Culture of Roses under Glass," by J. A. Sked; "Colorado Soils," by Prof. Longyear, of the State Experiment Station; "Hardy Roses and their Usefulness for Various Phases of Gardening," by John Berry; "Dahlias: Past and Present," by W. W. Wilmore.

The discussions following these papers were very interesting, especially upon the manner of caring for hardy roses in winter, and the destruction of insect pests. The discussion concerning growing Beauties a second year under glass brought out the fact that Bernhard Boldt had exceptional success in that line the past season. A vase of Beauties exhibited by Mr. Boldt grown from these two-year-old plants was a very fine lot.

There was a fine exhibit of carnations and roses. The Colfax Avenue Floral Co., N. A. Benson, Mrs. R. Mauff, E. E. Peterson, Bernhard Boldt and The Park Floral Co., all of Denver, and J. B. Braidwood, of Colorado Springs, were exhibitors. Two plants of Adiantum cuneatum and O'Briani attracted universal attention. They were grown by Robert Kurth, foreman for The Colfax Avenue Floral Co., and were very handsome specimens. A vase of Carnation Adonis staged by E. E. Peterson was good enough to travel in any company.

The newly elected officers are: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver; first vice-president, Wm. Hy. Evans, Colorado Springs; second vice-president, G. Fleischer, Pueblo; treasurer, R. S. Mahan, Denver; secretary, N. A. Benson, 1352 South Sherman avenue, Denver.

The by-laws were amended making florists' employees eligible to membership and changing the date of the annual meeting to the second Tuesday in February each year.

DAVENPORT, IA.—The Otto Klingbiel bankruptcy case is slowly approaching a settlement. Labor claims have been allowed save some which were older than the three months' limitation in the bankruptcy law.

BUFFALO.

Various Comment.

Very wonderful days we have had; 80 degrees in the shade, but it did not last long. Plenty of flowers and business not enough to clear them all up. That hot spell put everybody on edge. They were going to have a garden right off. Vases were ordered filled with pansies, annuals sown, "I want my sweet bays and hydrangeas sent home," and all sorts of spring operations were thought of. They have cooled off with the weather.

The last of the Holland gentlemen called on us last week, Mr. Bartmann. His call is pleasant, for he takes with a smile and good humor your observation that you have already placed your order.

We took a bob-tailed trolley ride to Williamsville recently to see the new establishment of Byrne Bros., whose houses are near the "Falls" branch of the Lehigh Valley railroad. They have two houses, each 200 feet long, one twenty feet wide, the other thirty feet. The larger house is devoted to carnations, looking well, the other to Easter stock for their store. These first-class houses were erected by the King Construction Co., of Tonawanda. They are light, strong and most excellently heated with hot water, using 2-inch pipes. Considering the glass was not laid until October, the place is in good order. This young firm has started right, building substantially, and they have plenty of room to extend.

We availed ourselves of the pleasure of a call on Prof. Cowell yesterday with a few other florists. The sea breezes and the tropical sun of Panama had browned him up. He traveled the canal zone from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He brought back several things new to him and perhaps new to the botanical world. Among them is a nephrolepis which he says is a beauty, also a bromeliaceae. The professor has one of the best collections of these curious plants in this or any other country. He is not in love with the country and the mixture of Indian, negro and Spanish has not resulted in producing the finest specimens of the genus homo. They may, the Professor says, be better described as dark-skinned hoboes. But the canal will go through on an ocean level. He also brought a machete which looks like a good thing to prepare cabbage for sauer kraut or to behead a rat. The spacious conservatory looks well and it is gratifying to see the Buffalo folks out in goodly numbers to enjoy the curious or admire the flowers. W. S.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The market has been flooded with stock the past week. The bright weather has brought in probably the worst glut this city has ever seen. We are getting more home-grown stock every year and the increased number of wholesalers brings in an increased quantity from the outside, and the market at a time like this cannot possibly make use of all the receipts. While trade is as good as it ever is at this season, and as much or more stock than ever used, it does not make an impression on the quantity coming in. Best Beauties are selling at $3 per dozen, tea roses and carnations at buyers' prices, and bulbous stock you cannot give away. Trumpets and daffodils are in bloom in the gardens.

Various Notes.

Jos. Jordan, one of the old greenhouse men of this section, who has been supplying many of the retailers with ferns, died suddenly March 28.

E. E. Allen, of Blairsville, died last Monday.

Wm. Lauch, of Carrick, lost his barn by fire last Wednesday night. The horses and wagons were saved.

Ed. McGrath, of Breitenstein & Flemm, is looking pleasant these days. It is a boy.

Superintendent Wm. Hamilton, of the Allegheny parks, is preparing for the annual Easter flower display at the Phipps conservatory, Central park, and expects to have a larger and more beautiful display than usual, owing to the lateness of Easter. Tulips already are several inches above the ground and all bulbous flowers are expected to be in full bloom by April 20.

The private conservatories of A. R. Peacock, Highland and Wellesley avenues, and H. C. Frick, Penn and Homewood avenues, will be thrown open to the public on April 9. In the latter conservatory there will be a large display of orchids.

Justus Mulert, trustee in bankruptcy for Thomas M. Ulam, presented a petition in the United States district court for the confirmation of the sale of the entire stock and fixtures of the store to William M. Turner, a florist at 809 Penn avenue, Wilkesburg. Turner bought everything for $500 cash. The sale was confirmed. Hoo-Hoo.

HEADQUARTERS FOR

Easter Plants.

Now ready for instant shipment, blooming Easter week or one week before.

I am noted, and have a reputation for the past 15 years, for raising and shipping choice Easter plants of every description. 9 houses and 7 frames full of plants in better condition than ever before.

AZALEA INDICA a specialty. Of my own importation, 8 houses full of the cream of Ghent's production. We sell none in the fall, therefore the best is not picked out by fall sales. We force them only for our customers' Christmas and Easter trade. Mms. Van der Cruyssen, the people's choice, the best of all the pink. Plants are covered with bud and round as an apple. Price, 6-inch pots, 75c and $1.00. Specimen, 7-in., $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00 each. We also have the best of other varieties, such as Empress of India, Prof. Wolters, Jean Vervene, Sigismund Rucker, Paul Weber, illustre, Sov. de Van Houtte, Niobe, double white; Bernard Andre alba, white, Simon Mardner and others. Have some in bloom now for immediate sale if you wish. Price, 6-inch to 7-inch pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Lilium Harriall and Japan multiflorum, raised from bulbs of Henry F. Michell's special brand; 6-in. pots, 5 to 8 buds to a plant. 10 cents per bud. Under 5 buds, 12c per bud.

Cineraria hybrida. H. F. Michell's best special shades. Have 2,300 this year. 6-in. pots, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per dozen.

Begonia, President Carnot, Flambeau and other good varieties. 6-in. pots, $3.00 per dozen.

Begonias, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Spiraeas, 2 houses full of Spiraea floribunda, Blanda, Japonica, 6-in. pots, very large bushes, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per dozen. Compacta, 6-in., $2.00 to $3.00 per dozen. Gladstone, perfect jewel, covered with flowers or buds. $6.00, $9.00 to $12.00 per dozen.

Roses. American Beauties, in bud. 6-in. pots, 50c each; 5-in., 35c. Other hybrid roses, including Hermosa, 5 to 5 1/2-in. pots, $3.00 to $4.00 per dozen.

White daisies (or Marguerites), 6-in., $3.00 per dozen.

Hyacinths raised from first size bulbs of my own importation. Grand Maitre, single blue; King of the Blue; Gertrude, pink; La Grandesse, white, $12.00 per 100.

Double Von Sion narcissi or daffodils, double nosed, 3 in a 5 1/2-in. to 6-in. pot, $2.00 to $2.50 dozen pots.

Touneol Tulips, best double, 3 in a 4-in. pot, $1.50 per dozen pots.

Ficus elastica, 25 to 35 inches high, 6 to 7-in. pot, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Araucaria excelsa, 7-in. pots, 25 to 32 inches high, $1.50 each.

A. W. Smith hybrid Moonvines, $5.00 per 100.

Hydrangea Otaka—6 and 7-in. pots, $6, $9 to $12 per doz., few white among them.

Cash with order, please. No reference. All goods travel on purchasers' risk. 20 minutes by trolley from City Hall to my place, Germantown car on 13th and 8th Sts. Bell phone, Trioga 3669 A. Please read references.

GODFREY ASCHMANN,

1012 Ontario Street, PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia, March 21, 1905.

I never saw such cheap and fine stock of Easter plants as Mr. Aschmann has. I can recommend him to all our customers.

Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 29, 1904.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, Pa. Dear Sir: Many thanks for the prompt delivery and for the fine stock. The plants arrived all right. Yours very truly, Hoffmeister Floral Co.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

During the past month trade has been rather dull and, with the exception of funeral work, there was nothing doing. The supply of roses, carnations and other stock has been in excess of the demand and in consequence prices have been low. The outlook for Easter in the way of supply is good, as roses promise to be a full crop and carnations from all appearance will be plentiful. Lilies have in most cases turned out good, with a very small per cent of disease, Harrisii being particularly good. Bulbous stock of all kinds is very plentiful and of excellent quality but the demand is poor as compared with former years. Violets are a full crop and of a high grade but, like other lines, they go slow.

H. Hoffman has been cutting some very fine carnations and violets and his prospects for Easter are excellent.

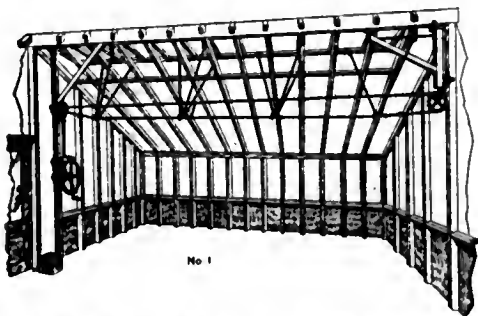

Fred La France has also been having some fine cuts of carnations and has been doing an excellent trade in potted plants, such as lilies, cyclamens and cinerarias.

M. Durand, of Rawson's, reports a fair trade and is looking forward to a good Easter, having plenty of stock to meet all demands.

The United States Cut Flower Co. is cutting large quantities of long-stemmed Beauties of the highest grade, which they are shipping to the larger cities of New York and Pennsylvania. They are also having a fine cut of teas and hybrid teas, which are in fair demand. Their crop of Harrisii is really fine and would compare favorably with anything in that line before we knew the disease. Carnations at this place are also fine and promise a heavy cut for Easter time. Superintendent Curran has moved into his new home on Lake street. Chas. F. Edgar, formerly of Philadelphia, has accepted a position with the United States Cut Flower Co. He has charge of the packing and shipping department and has already made a host of friends. R.

McKEESPORT, PA.—J. H. Orth, John Hodgson, J. M. Johnston and Charles T. Moore have taken steps to incorporate the McKeesport Floral Co. They propose to build two houses 25x300 feet to grow roses and carnations.

THE WOLF IMPROVED CABLE VENTILATING APPARATUS

Is now equipped with top gears, horizontal sprocket wheels, automatic safety locks. Single machines are now successfully operating from the end, houses with single lines of sash 370 feet long, houses with double lines of sash 200 feet long, houses with continuous sash 27 1/2 feet long, raising each and every sash exactly the same, being the most economical and powerful machine on the market.

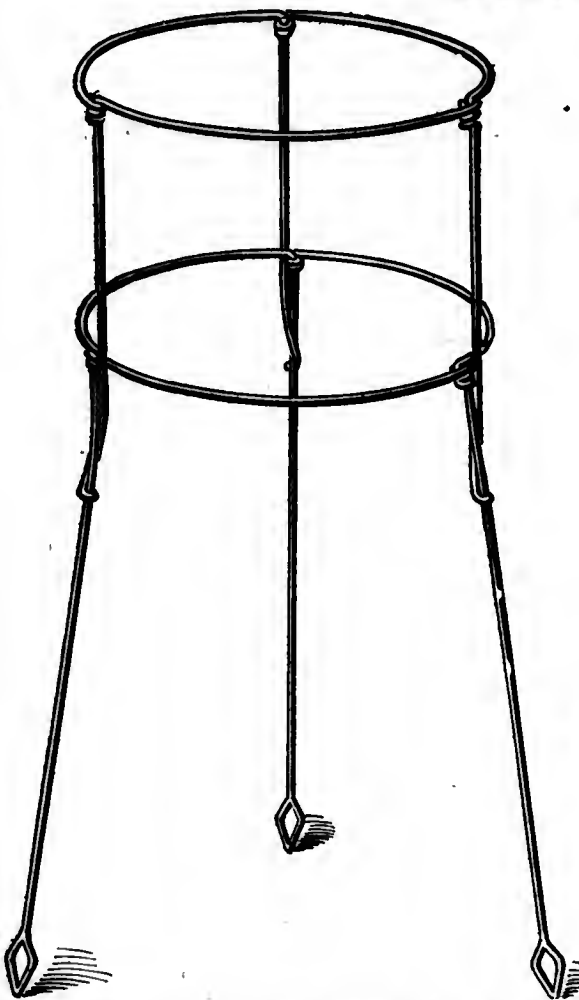

Machines fitted to suit each house before shipping, and sent out under a 10-year guarantee.

P EOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers will this year take out 6,000 feet of wooden gutters, which are only 5 years old, and replace the same with 6,000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind are our best references. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Warm spring weather still prevails, with the temperature going as high as 80 degrees now and then. The effect on greenhouse stock is well known and cannot be passed over lightly. Stock of all kinds is being forced into bloom prematurely and the end is not in sight. Flowers that should have been cut for Easter are blooming now and many of the growers are becoming alarmed. Bulbous stock, especially, is coming in great quantities and it is hard to move it at any price.

Perhaps the less said of business the better. The quantity of stock that is arriving is enormous. The wholesale houses are stacked full and there is scarcely room to move about. Prices are of the mid-summer variety. Carnations are being cut by the thousands and roses as well. Beauties, which have done so well, are now in oversupply. The price has been cut in two. Single violets are scarce but double ones are still with us in large lots. Outdoor jonquils are arriving by the thousands and sell at any old price. Sweet peas go fairly well.

The green goods market is also affected. Smilax does best.

Various Notes.

The growers in the Flower Market are reaping a harvest now. The beautiful Saturday afternoons bring out thousands of buyers and they have the goods and sell cheap enough to tempt all comers. Potted plants of the standard varieties are selling especially well.

Hardesty & Co. made up a bouquet of fresh vegetables last week which was not only unique but very appetizing.

Julius Baer has been keeping up the high standard of the window decorations at his new store and they are causing much comment. He reports his business as very good.

W. K. Partridge is displaying in his store windows vases of Brides, Maids, Gates, Ivory and Chatenay, all grown at his greenhouses, which are very fine.

C. J. OHMER.

I FIND the REVIEW very newsy and instructive; it should be on every florist's desk.—C. B. SHISLER, Williamsville, N. Y.

CHICAGO & NEW-YORK - APRIL 13, 1905

John Hackett, 107 Peach St., Philadelphia, has No. 4 Boiler bought in 1893. Carries 12,000 feet of glass; 1500 feet more than we rate it.

F. Klimmer, Waldheim, Ill., has No. 8 Boiler bought in 1895. Repairs to date—new fines in 1903. Bought another boiler in 1904.

John Fuhrman, Chicago, bought No. 4 Boiler in 1896. Repairs to date—two new fines.

Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago, has No. 12 Boiler bought in 1895. No repairs at all in ten years.

THIS IS OUR BOILER

We have sold it in every state of the Union and more florists use it than any other make. Don't buy a Boiler until you have had our catalogue. Sent free on request.

N. ZWEIFEL, No. Milwaukee, Wis., writes:—"I have 4 houses, each 28x200 feet, with a total of 27,000 sq. ft. of glass. I can get all the pipes warm in thirty minutes with one of your No. 13 Boilers, and it is easy firing."

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 29 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers, and do not worry about their breaking down."

DAMM BROS., Chicago, write:—"Bought a No. 12 Boiler in 1893. Only repairs in 12 years one set new tubes. Replaced four small boilers and saves $100.00 in coal each season." Carries 24,000 feet of glass; 1000 feet more than our rating.

WM. GREENE Kimberly, Wis., writes:—"I bought a No. 8 Boiler in 1901. We had a corrugated cast-iron fire box boiler and a sectional cast iron boiler before we bought yours in 1901. The cost of heating with this boiler is one-half less than it was with my cast-iron boilers. Your No. 8 Boiler, which we bought recently of you, is not being run to its capacity."

THE EVERLASTING GREENHOUSE BENCH

has been found. A Tile Bench with Tile Legs. Easy to put up. Movable. Never wears out. This Bench interlocks, which makes it solid, and the same as one piece.

(Patent applied for.)

THIS TILE BENCH is made in double compartment slabs fifteen inches wide and any length desired to 26 inches, according to the width of the bench.

The height of the bench is two feet to the top of the side-board, which makes the bench alone stand eighteen inches high. Write for Prices.

SOME GOOD POINTS:

Quicker to put up than wood.

Is no home for bugs.

It will last forever.

Will never sag or fall down, as it has about five times the support that a wooden bench has. It is porous.

Fancy Easter Lilies

We can furnish select blooms and which have been especially grown for us by one of the most successful Lily Growers in the country. Advise us as to number desired, either flowers or plants, and we will take pleasure in quoting. We ship direct from greenhouses, which means but one handling between grower and buyer, thereby eliminating to a very large extent, the chance of bruising in rehandling. Worth your while to consider this.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE EASTER BUSINESS.

Not long ago a Chicago retailer, one whose store is in a residence street, was quoted as saying that last Easter ninety-five per cent of his sales were plants. If not an exaggeration, that is certainly an exceptional case but it cannot be denied that the sale for flowering plants at both Christmas and Easter is increasing much faster than is the sale for cut flowers.

Just before Christmas, when the rush was at its height, a peculiarity which marked the sales in one of the leading retail stores of the country impressed itself on the writer. The telephone demanded almost constant attention and almost invariably the call was for roses or carnations. But out in the store the customer who had both the cut flowers and flowering plants on the counter for comparison in almost every instance chose the plants, even where the salesman offered no encouragement. It was simply that the telephone buyer did not know about the plants; even when the telephone salesman tried to tell about them he could not convey a clear idea of what an aucuba or even a pan of poinsettias would look like when delivered. But the cut flowers! That was different. Everyone knows what a box of roses or carnations is like, and the telephone buyer ordered them. But the customer who saw the plants chose them nearly every time.

One January day the following conversation took place in the same store:

"How much are the roses?"

"These are $2 and these are $3 a dozen."

"A dozen and a half of the shorter ones would do—but what a pretty plant! Is it a begonia?"

"Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. We sell that size, with crepe paper to cover the pot, for $3."

"How long will the flowers last?"

"Oh! Three or four days; maybe a week; possibly more. We do not guarantee it in any way."

"That's not encouraging, still the roses wouldn't last beyond tomorrow. I believe I'll try the begonia as it doesn't cost any more than the roses. What did you call it, Glory—?"

Easter the Plant Season.

Easter is preëminently the plant season, but it is not every retailer who can sell the magnificent specimens seen in the splendid stores in New York. Even in Chicago there is a limit to the cost and size of the plants which can be sold. The other day Frank Oechslin, of the Garfield Park Flower Co., which supplies the majority of large plants to leading Chicago retailers, said that last year he had a lot of large and finely flowered azaleas which he wholesaled at $10 and $12 each, but the retailers who bought them in most cases had them left unsold. This year Mr. Oechslin did not grow any azaleas to wholesale at above $8.

The leading stores throughout the country, and particularly in New York, may sell a few of the beautiful Ramblers, rhododendrons, great pans of lilies and other plants frequently illustrated in the pages of the REVIEW but the average reader is not able to supply himself with these plants if he would and could not sell them if he had them. Even in the best class of stores the sale for large plants is limited, by far the greater number of good-sized orders calling for arrangements of plants or cut flowers in hampers or baskets, of which so great a variety is now offered.

The Florists' Requisites.

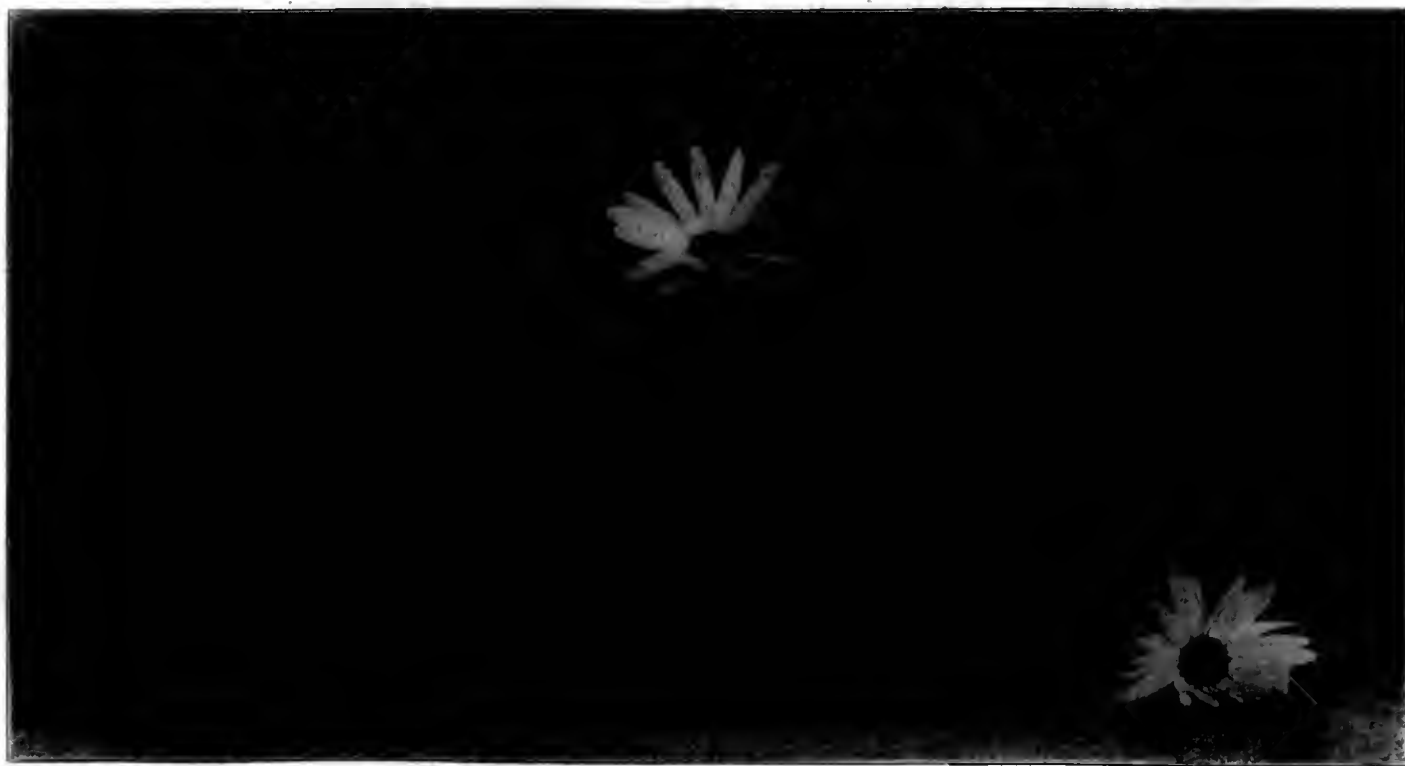

While few novelties in the plant line are offered, the dealers in florists' supplies annually provide many unique things to help the retailers present their wares in attractive shape. There is a great variety in hampers, boxes and baskets, so great in fact that no storekeeper has use for more than a few of the really good things at his disposal. The raffia hamper and basket is no longer a novelty; it has traveled the length and breadth of the land on its own merits. A last year's novelty which has come into general use this season is the twig basket in its many forms. Two of these shapes are shown in illustrations in this issue of the REVIEW.

The handled basket contains a zinc pan which will not leak and on the outside the zinc is stained dark brown so that it will not show between the small twigs which compose the sides of the basket. In this case the basket held some daisies and sweet peas with a little green and stood on the sales counter of one of the leading stores, where few customers failed to speak of its simplicity and grace. The other twig basket is round and low, with a cover. It contains a cocos, four primroses, three 3-inch adiantums and a dozen valley.

Chicks and Ducklings.

The same twig baskets are offered in many other shapes, including the form of birds' nests, and to go with the birds' nests, as well as for many other uses, thousands upon thousands of chicks and ducklings will be used. All the supply houses report them selling rapidly and going to all parts of the country. Last year a few of these were used and made a hit in many an Easter plant arrangement and box of flowers. The use of such accessories as these is rapidly increasing.

But no matter how many new or different pot covers there may be, the Porto Rican matting, a novelty of half a dozen years ago, will still be largely used; there is nothing better for covering the pot of an azalea. Green is the best color. The matting is also used for many other purposes, usually tied with a silk cord or narrow ribbon.

Crepe paper is the most largely used item in a retail florist's stock of supplies. It goes with everything, is inexpensive and its use on a plant always enhances the value far beyond the cost of the covering. It used to be the fashion to almost smother an azalea in crepe paper but that is no longer good form; only cover the pot and use only a narrow ribbon or a cord for fastening. Of course Azalea mollis is an exception. Being bare of foliage, its branches must be hidden and figured crepe paper is usually used for this. The paper also comes plaited, waterproof, etc.

Tulip the Easter Flower.

While the lily has been given the name of Easter, judged from the standpoint of some of the florists in the less free spending communities, the tulip and the hyacinth are really the important flowers of the day. A florist with a prosperous store in a residence district neither rich nor poor said the other day that last Easter he sold four pans of bulbous stock for every other sale of plants. His experience was typical. He found the best size to contain about six good hyacinths or from six to a dozen and a half tulips, the pan obscured by

This year the bulbous stock promises to be pretty well out of the running by Easter. But if tulips and hyacinths give out, there should be some lily of the valley available almost everywhere. Pans of this, appropriately decorated, are hard to beat for table centerpieces.

Other Easter Subjects.

Hydrangeas are among the best Easter plants and this year, the season being so late, some splendidly flowered specimens will be offered. Azaleas are with many too forward. In the east ericas are an important item but few are seen west of the Hudson.

A novelty is the Baby Rambler rose, of which a few are seen. But it is predicted for this that its greatest usefulness will be at Christmas. A good Easter plant and one not often seen is Primula veris, the old English cowslip, made new by careful greenhouse cultivation. The plant illustrated in this issue is typical but the picture was necessarily made some weeks before the plant was intended to be ready for sale. The tresses of lemon yellow flowers with their dark brown centers almost obscure the foliage when the plant is at its best. The flowers endure well and the plant is sure to take its place with the other primroses.

Easter Cut Flowers.

If the out-of-town florist finds that this late Easter is catching him short of stock, he can supply his needs in the and carnations, would have a better season than usual. There will be all the violets the retailers can use but quality will depend much on the weather for the two weeks preceding this latest of recent Easters.

COLOR CAUTIONS.

An utter disregard of the laws of color on the part of a large proportion of those in the trade leads not a few people to question whether these careless practices are due to a lack of taste in patrons or to the indifference of florists. There are artists among us—and let it be said to their everlasting credit—who could scarcely be hired to send out a basket of scarlet carnations tied with a lavender ribbon, and their number is increasing; but there are still those who cannot see more dollars and cents in a floral design which would pass muster with a colorist.

The whole blame can scarcely be saddled on the patronage, for, as a rule, they are people of a refined class. Nobody knows classified color laws any more than he knows the alphabet by instinct. It is a matter of study, experience and culture of the eye. While it is true that every designer must be a law unto himself in minor details, it is due to the community in which he lives for a man who pretends to send out floral designs and decorations, to appropriate such information as he may use from the great mass of literature on this subject. The knowledge of color is no secondary matter, even in the less pretentious establishments of the day and age. One must read, observe and experiment to obtain a practical knowledge of this science. Works like the two following may be had in almost any public library: Rood's "Text Book of Color," published by D. Appleton & Co.; "Color," by A. H. Church.

But better than any text books are the color studies and combinations in any flower which may come under one's observation. There are whole volumes in the coloring of a single pansy. Analyze its color composition; count its tints and shades; find the connection which binds them all in one; trace some one color principle through the whole flower; examine it through a magnifying glass or a microscope; figure out the proportion of different colors here so marvelously blended; make some observations and conclusions of your own. Don't forget these theories when you plan your next design, and ten to one it will be a better one than the last.

After a few experiments and some study of your own, read a little, and you will come across some fact which you have previously discovered by your own efforts and your interest will increase.

Search in flower and book to find out why scarlet and purple should not be used together, and why crimson and gold make a good combination.

If your ideas about scarlet are rather vague, and crimson is only red to you, set a Jacqueminot rose against an America or Crane carnation and try to figure out the difference. Here and there in the Jacqueminot rose you will find traces of blue mixed with the red, which makes purple, which being toned down with more red than blue makes crimson, the color of the Jacqueminot. In the carnations named there is no trace of blue, but in their intense, brilliant color the red is lightened by yellow or orange in its composition. That is scarlet.

the inevitable crepe paper or occasionally by a Porto Rican mat or a basket of raffia. While several hundred lilies were sold, they went largely for church decorations, whereas the pans of bulbs went to the buyer's home and the sales were limited only by the amount of good stock to be had.

great wholesale centers; there it is always possible to find something with which to do business. But the small supplies of flowering plants, the reduced stock of bulbous flowers, and the constantly increasing demand for flowers for Easter make it appear as though the wholesale grower of the staples, roses

Lilium Harrisii, the Typical Flower of the Florists' Harvest Season.

By placing the scarlet carnation against the crimson rose, the color of the rose is actually dulled and almost deadened, "killed" as the common expression has it. By comparisons of this kind it will become easier to avoid such combinations as bronze galax leaves and violets; pinks and blues, unless the blue be very dark and the pink light; pink and bright yellow; very dark blackish red with white; dark red or crimson with violet or purple; scarlet and pink; but rather you will select grey with violet, or white and grey; crimson and light pink. Grey as found in Florida moss, dusty miller leaves, carnation foliage, and birch bark combines well with violet, scarlet or light pink, as found respectively in violets, and purple hyacinths, brilliant red carnations or salvias, Bridesmaid roses or Enchantress carnations.

For a change try tying funeral sprays with material to match the foliage or harmonize with it, as well as with the flower. Find suggestions for coloring on the under side of leaves and stems. Bind a double bunch of Enchantress or Lawson carnations with a simple band of birch bark three or four inches wide, or a wisp of Florida moss.

In arranging funeral sprays of two colors, do not lay down a flower of one color and then one of another in turn. Make blotches and streaks of color. Run one color into another in thin lines. This will blend the two. The first method, of one and another, makes a patchy piece.

Upon being compelled to use colors together which you dislike, it is often possible to tone down one color by laying delicate green foliage over it, such as adiantum or asparagus. Separate the fighting colors at opposite ends or sides of the cluster or design.

A little used combination is crimson and gold. Make this by combining Meteor or Liberty roses with Narcissus incomparabilis or some of the light colored single varieties.

A vase or basket of different varieties of narcissi is attractive and salable. Grade the color from the brilliant yellow of the Von Sion into the jonquil yellow and from that through the soft single varieties of incomparabilis, poeticus and Paper White.

Freesia, white and yellow tulips and narcissi are pleasing, as is a cluster of blue or white Dutch hyacinths with a band of yellow pansies over the stem end of the bunch.

Avoid the brilliant but not the dark somber colors for funerals. Scarcely enough distinction is made in common practice between blues and purples. The one difference between these colors is that the latter have red in their make-up, which the blues lack. In window and store displays of plants which are now being made, of cinerarias, for instance, be careful to separate the purplish reds from the blues. Each will show to better advantage alone. Separate by placing one group at the front of the window or display space and the other at the back. Ferns or the foliage plants or some white flower in bloom will serve as a partition between these fighters.

Nowadays we are having blue pansies and blue Dutch hyacinths which, with white, are appropriate for a funeral piece, and a change from the all winter's pink and white repetitions. Avoid yellow with cinerarias and cyclamens except when the former are a pure blue, and if any yellow is introduced with the blue cineraria let it be of a mild type, as is seen in the light narcissi, or Perle roses, Narcissus poeticus or Chinese lilies.

Cyclamens, with their purplish pinks and reds, should be kept at a respectful distance from such a pink as is seen in Azalea Vervaneana. Treat the primulas the same way. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

GEN. PALMER'S MUNIFICENCE.

John Berry has left the Park Floral Co., Denver, after having been with it continuously for about seven years. He has been in charge of the outdoor work in the landscape line, and now goes to accept a position as superintendent of Monument park, at Colorado Springs. This is a park which is being made from an unsightly strip of ground in the center of Colorado Springs, including Monument Creek and its banks, and is the property of General Wm. J. Palmer, one of the founders of Colorado Springs and one of its wealthiest citizens. He is spending a great many thousands of dollars in the improvement of this particular piece of ground, with the intention of deeding it to the city when it has been transformed into a park.

The General's home at Glen Eyrie, about five miles from Colorado Springs, is probably the most beautiful mountain home in Colorado. A new residence has just been completed there at an expense of about $400,000. The landscape work there has been carried out strictly in accordance with the ideas of Gen. Palmer himself. He absolutely insists that no native shrub or flower of any description shall be destroyed to make room for artificial planting. He has insisted that nature shall be assisted, but that the natural beauty shall never be destroyed. He seems willing to spend thousands of dollars to carry out his own peculiar ideas, and this is well illustrated when it is said that in building the new house at Glen Eyrie the rock was quarried from the canon walls, but only so much of it was taken as had a natural exposure to the weather and was covered with moss and lichens. The rules strictly forbade rolling or sliding these down the slope, but every piece was carefully carried down in the hands of the workmen and laid in the walls of the house, so that the walls now present a moss-covered appearance as if the house had been there for centuries.

A tunnel has been constructed sloping upward through the mountain to a point perhaps 500 feet above the house, and through this all smoke, all the odors from the kitchen, and even the dust from the patent sweeping machines are carried to the top of the mountain where they give no annoyance.

The work is by all odds the most conscientious and the most expensive piece of work of its kind which has ever been undertaken in this state, and General Palmer is one of the very broad-minded men who has spent his money without stint to promote the interest of the state and to beautify Colorado Springs and the country adjacent.

Monument park, mentioned above, is but one of his gifts to Colorado Springs. There is another very rough and at present barren tract of ground two or three miles north of the city which the General is beautifying and converting into a park of a more rugged nature, confining his planting there to such things as are native and will thrive without irrigation. This is also destined to go ultimately by deed to Colorado Springs when the work is completed.

lost is the profit gone on two similar ones sold.

The florist with the salesroom attached to his houses is sure to be removed from the city's throng, but he has a great advantage in handling his plants, for he can keep an assortment of his offerings dressed and fixed up in his salesroom and plenty of reserve in his houses. And if you have no salesroom at all, but merely your greenhouses, then devote one house or part of a house to your chief display.

Embellishing the Plants.

There may be a difference of opinion how far it is good taste to decorate a plant with ribbons. As mentioned above, the great majority of our Easter sales go to a friend of the purchaser, and first impressions are everything. So if you can add a dollar to the price of a plant by using 50 cents' worth of ribbon, by all means do it. Perhaps, from an artist's eye, or the best taste, a ribbon cannot add to the beauty of a plant. A white or pink ribbon tied on our native hawthorne in the woods would certainly be no embellishment, but our plants are artificially grown, often artificially tied and shaped, and therefore there is nothing of bad taste to further add the artificial.

While on this subject, let me say that it is not fair or right for the wholesale grower to send to the city storekeeper a lot of plants with dirty pots. They should be washed. The grower has every facility to do this, and the storekeeper has not. How we have altered in our way of sending out our products! The bills for flower boxes and fine paper of many kinds now form a big item of expense, but every other retail business does the same, and the man who thinks he can save on these items and does not keep up with re-

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Easter and Its History.

It is good for the exercise of thought and management by the florists that Easter occurs on a movable date. It may be accompanied by warm, balmy spring, and then again sleet, snow and fridity may be its handmaiden. Just a word about this great Christian festival, the central event in the Christian church. A thousand years before the Christian era began the ancient Jews commemorated Easter as the advent of spring, and the pagan Gauls and barbarians of central Europe held their spring festival. The Easter egg of the Germans is a relic of the distant past. The early Christians of different denominations held bitter controversies as to what date to fix certain events. At last, about the fourth century, it was decided that the moon should settle it. Like all scriptural dates, Easter is legendary, uncertain and mythical. But let us be thankful that it has come down to us, for it is as necessary as the sunshine that we should have times of relaxation and rest. Aside from some pious souls, Easter is chiefly looked forward to for the advent of new suits and dainty bonnets. For a number of years our particular business has been enormously benefited by the present laudable fashion of sending plants and flowers to friends. Christmas is a busy time with us, but I think it does not approach Easter in volume of business.

Change in Easter Demand.

Some twenty-five years ago church decorations were our leading Easter business. Not only did the "committee on decorations" give the order to a florist for the whole job, but elaborate designs were sent by members of the congregation as memorials of friends gone before. All this is altered, and there is nothing to regret on the part of the florist. Plants and flowers are sent to the churches by individuals, and the ladies arrange them. But it will be admitted by all that the great bulk of our Easter business is now the exchange of Easter greetings and good wishes, which take the form of a pretty plant or a box of flowers. When we decorated churches, the gift, instead of a plant, was a card. The card is gone and the plants and flowers are king; long may they reign.

There is a difference in the way some of us do business. There is the strictly store man, the man who has a store with houses at his back, and also the man who does all the business in his houses. It seems to me there is no time in all the year when system is so necessary as in the week preceding Easter. Above all, practice that old adage, "Leave nothing for tomorrow that can be done today," for as the week advances tomorrow will bring more work than you can crowd into it.

The Value of Space.

The retail storekeeper will be fearfully crowded, and his window, his best advertisement, should be a bower of beauty. Keep no unsightly or unsalable plant visible. Every plant should be on dress parade, and in large stores, where there may be $1,000 worth of plants at one time, it pays to assign one intelligent young man to their care. Too many retail salesmen have not the feeling of a gardener in their make-up, and it does not make them weep to see an azalea, spiraea or rose drooping its wings for want of a drink. Many of our Easter plants have been forced. Others are a mass of roots, and they are in no condition to stand neglect. Every plant quirements of the business will soon be in the fear of the procession.

But a few years ago a piece of wrapping paper around the pot was all-sufficient, and off went the plant. Nowadays, not only at Easter but every day of the year, the simplest plant, let it be only a hyacinth or a primrose, must have some colored tissue paper around the pot and tied with baby ribbon, and for larger or more expensive plants a more elaborate covering of the plebian pot is an essential. Take, for instance, a 10-inch pan of hyacinths. Silk paper, or the crepe, tied around the pan tastefully has cost little, but to the eye of the customer it added wonderfully, and you can get well paid for your trouble. Anyway, it is now demanded.

Make Early Preparation.

Put nothing off for tomorrow. You can't make purchasers come to your place until they feel like it, and it seems to me our customers, at any rate the most of them, delay the buying of their plants until the rush of Friday and Saturday. The better you are prepared for this rush, the fewer mistakes will occur, and delays in delivering, which is so important a part of our Easter labor. You always have to call in extra help to wait on customers, and it is an excellent plan to have all your plants plainly marked with the price of each. This may not be necessary with all your plants—lilies, for instance—but with azaleas, Rambler roses and others it is necessary, and a great convenience to all parties.

Flower boxes are wanted every day, and by the hundreds on Saturday night. There is no excuse for not having hundreds put together and put in some dry, clean place, waiting your demand. There is no excuse for the greenhouse man who does not wash the pots of all plants that are likely to sell at Easter time, and if he should brighten up a few hundred that did not sell he will be forgiven. And if any plant, such as a lily, wants a stake and tie, do it at once and do not wait until you are driven off your legs.

The Value of System.

Now, I can't help repeating what I have often said before, and that is, have some system, and stick to it, with regard to getting off your orders. Our experience is that on the Thursday, Friday and Saturday before Easter we are kept busy waiting on customers and sending out the deliveries of the previous day, and business that demands immediate attention. And the wrapping, tying up and addressing is done after the doors are locked. A few men undisturbed can do a lot of that work and do it coolly and correctly. What a pleasure it would be if a customer selected a plant, paid for it and took it along with him—or, mostly, her. No such luck!

Our best customers drive up, select an azalea and perhaps a Crimson Rambler, and then it begins: "Send the azalea to Mrs. Roosevelt, with Mrs. Booker Washington's card, and send the rose to Judge Dunne with my card." Now, such orders are likely to end in a mix-up of cards, where perhaps one person will leave an order for a dozen plants, each one going to a different person, and perhaps some little greeting written on each card. The cards are filed, and all we can do at the time is to put the plants away on a space devoted to Thursday, Friday, Saturday or Sunday delivery, and each plant tagged with the name of the purchaser. Of course the salesman has taken an accurate item of the order and that is filed away with, say, Saturday's delivery, which will be wrapped and all ready for delivery on Friday night.

When the boss comes to the order Friday night he knows who took the order and the cards and addresses, and the order is handed to the man who made the sale, and there is no excuse for there being a mistake. The order is brought back as executed, and filed away. You may have a better system, evolved from your own experience, but do have a system of some kind, and adhere to it. You can stand a lot of work and short hours in bed if all goes pleasantly, but a few call-downs over the telephone and grumbling at mistakes will wreck your nervous system far more than hard work.

Holiday Delivery.

The delivery is a most important part of the whole business, and every endeavor should be made to get your sales to their destination on the day promised, and in good order. A man who knows the city well should be entrusted with the job of "routing" the loads. It does not pay to drive two miles in one direction and then three miles in another. Let each load contain deliveries for a certain section, and for no other, and don't wait for too big a load. I have seen a wagon kept an hour waiting for a few more plants, when half the load could have been delivered and the team back again, much to the benefit of the plants.

Hampers of Plants.

Except in our very large cities, the combination plant baskets are not in great demand, but it is well to have a few made up. If they sell, more can soon be fixed up. Azaleas, heaths, lilies, hyacinths, Primula obconica, genista and a liberal mixture of ferns are all good plants for baskets, and your taste must guide the arrangement. How fortunate for many of us that it is lovely flowers we handle, for with all the crudeness and poor taste of many of us, it is difficult to arrange a basket that is really ugly.

It is impossible to foretell what will be in most demand at Easter. At present it seems the lily will be plentiful. Azaleas have almost been the leading Easter plant for several years, and they are not so plentiful on account of the late date and plenty of fine, bright weather. As a decorative plant, the Boston fern or Pieris or Scottii is sure to lead over palms, pandanus, dracaenas or rubbers.

The public has learned what glorious house plants these nephrolepis are, and you should be well supplied with fine, moderate-sized plants. A great many cut lilies are sold at Easter for different purposes, and if you have any that you think will not keep until Easter Sunday, cut them and put the stems in water in a cool, dark place. They will keep longer than on the plants.

It seems almost impossible to expect cold weather, but there is no certainty of anything. For a warm, calm, if not bright day, let us fervently hope.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CREDIT WHERE DUE.

Some men seem never ready to give credit where credit is due. And this seems particularly true with regard to the grower in his relations with his commission man. A great many growers seem disposed to regard the commission house as a necessary evil instead of as one of the greatest factors in building up the cut flower industry to the huge proportions it has now attained.

Two growers near Chicago were overheard, the other day, discussing their experiences with commission men. One of them ships to Blank, and this was a scrap of the conversation:

"Every few days Blank's boy comes chasing out to my place along in the afternoon and wants a thousand carnations."

"And do you let him have them?"

"Yea-s-s," slowly, as if doubtful of the propriety of his action.

Great Jehoshaphat! Does he let him have them? Doesn't he know that if, at any time in the last month, Blank happened to be sold out when a late order came in, all he had to do was to run into Smith's next door and get what he wanted at a price which would, to say the least, pay him commission? Doesn't he think hard enough to realize that Blank is going to considerable trouble purely for the good of the grower? Did it never occur to him that Blank had an order and wanted his grower to have the advantage of it, not knowing what he could do with the stock when it came into the house with all the other consignments of the next morning? Fortunate is the grower, in these days of large production and job lot sales of the surplus, who is located where his commission man can get at him in case of a call at the close of the day's business.

It is quite a common thing for Chicago wholesalers, and those of other cities, to send to the greenhouses whenever possible, instead of buying of each other, as they used to do in the days when the supply was no greater than the legitimate demand. Is it a favor to let them have the stock? Well, hardly! The shoe is on the other foot.

THE DAHLIA, PAST AND PRESENT.

[A paper by W. W. Willmore, read before the Colorado Society of Floriculturists at Denver, March 24, 1905.]

History of the Dahlia.

This most useful and popular flower, the dahlia, derives its name from the Swedish botanist, Dr. Dahl, but for a time was also known under the name of georgina, after Prof. George, of St. Petersburg.

Its earliest known history is not yet very old. About the year 1657 Francisco Hernandez, a Spanish physician, wrote a book on plants, and among the plants described he mentions Dahlia variabilis, the species from which most, if not all, of our present varieties have originated. At that time it is probable that it was only known as one of the great multitude of botanical plants, without much, if any, thought of its future usefulness, for we find nothing further in print for 130 years. It is quite probable, however, that some effort was made to improve and domesticate the plant toward the close of the eighteenth century, for in 1787 a Frenchman published an account of the dahlias he had seen growing in gardens in Mexico. Two years later, 1789, seeds were sent from the Botanic Gardens of Mexico to the Royal Gardens at Madrid, Spain, where it was given its present name. This lot of seedlings was lost two years later, as were several other lots sent to various places. But their stay, though brief, awakened a deep interest in the plant and its possibilities, and further attempts at its cultivation were now made in several European countries and it soon became quite popular. The work bestowed upon it, however, seems to have been more in the nature of a fad rather than intelligent study. Difficulty seems to have been encountered also in knowing how to keep the roots over to the next season.

It should be borne in mind that up to this time all the varieties were single, the variegated and striped varieties leading in popular favor.

The history of the first double forms is told as follows: M. Donkelaar, of Louvain, began a series of experiments with northern-grown seed in 1812. His first crop of seedlings was still quite single, but seed saved from these gave him some semi-double flowers in 1813, and seed saved from these again gave fully double flowers in 1814, the third generation of the northern-grown seed. These varieties continued to produce double flowers and the dahlia now became immensely popular.

The question naturally arises here: Why should northern-grown seed produce double flowers? A theory gives this answer: Nature, always alert to perpetuate itself, throws out extra petals to protect the tender seeds from the chill of the northern atmosphere. Be this true or not, certain it is that double varieties show a decided tendency in warm climates to become semi-double and single varieties in the north are hard to keep in true form.

Is of Easy Culture.

The dahlia possesses a happy, easy-going disposition and seems to be at home in almost every country, location and soil. I have customers variously situated from a few feet above sea level to an altitude of 8,500 feet, some on clear sand, some on loam and some on the heaviest of clay; yet all give flattering reports of success. But for convenience in cultivation and digging, a light soil is preferable. I might also say that the dahlia is a favorite among all people of all countries, and I know of no reason why it should not be. Its easy culture, varied forms, almost boundless range of color and the wealth of bloom at a season when most needed, should appeal strongly to both amateur and professional.

The dahlia, if properly treated, will begin to bloom in this latitude in about seventy-five days from date of planting dormant tubers. They may be had much earlier, of course, if started under glass, but if this method is employed, great care should be exercised to keep the plants free from red spider, as it is almost impossible to rid the plants of them when once infested. I have always preferred planting direct to the open ground, and usually count on two and one-half to three months of bloom, which is ample to repay all labor and space given.

As this audience is not one of amateurs it will not be necessary for me to go into details of cultivation, manure, water, etc., further than to say that dahlias may be grown much closer than generally practiced; that they require less manure than generally supposed; that they will stand a great deal more cultivation than generally given, and should be watered as often as they need it, and not otherwise.

Florists' Varieties.

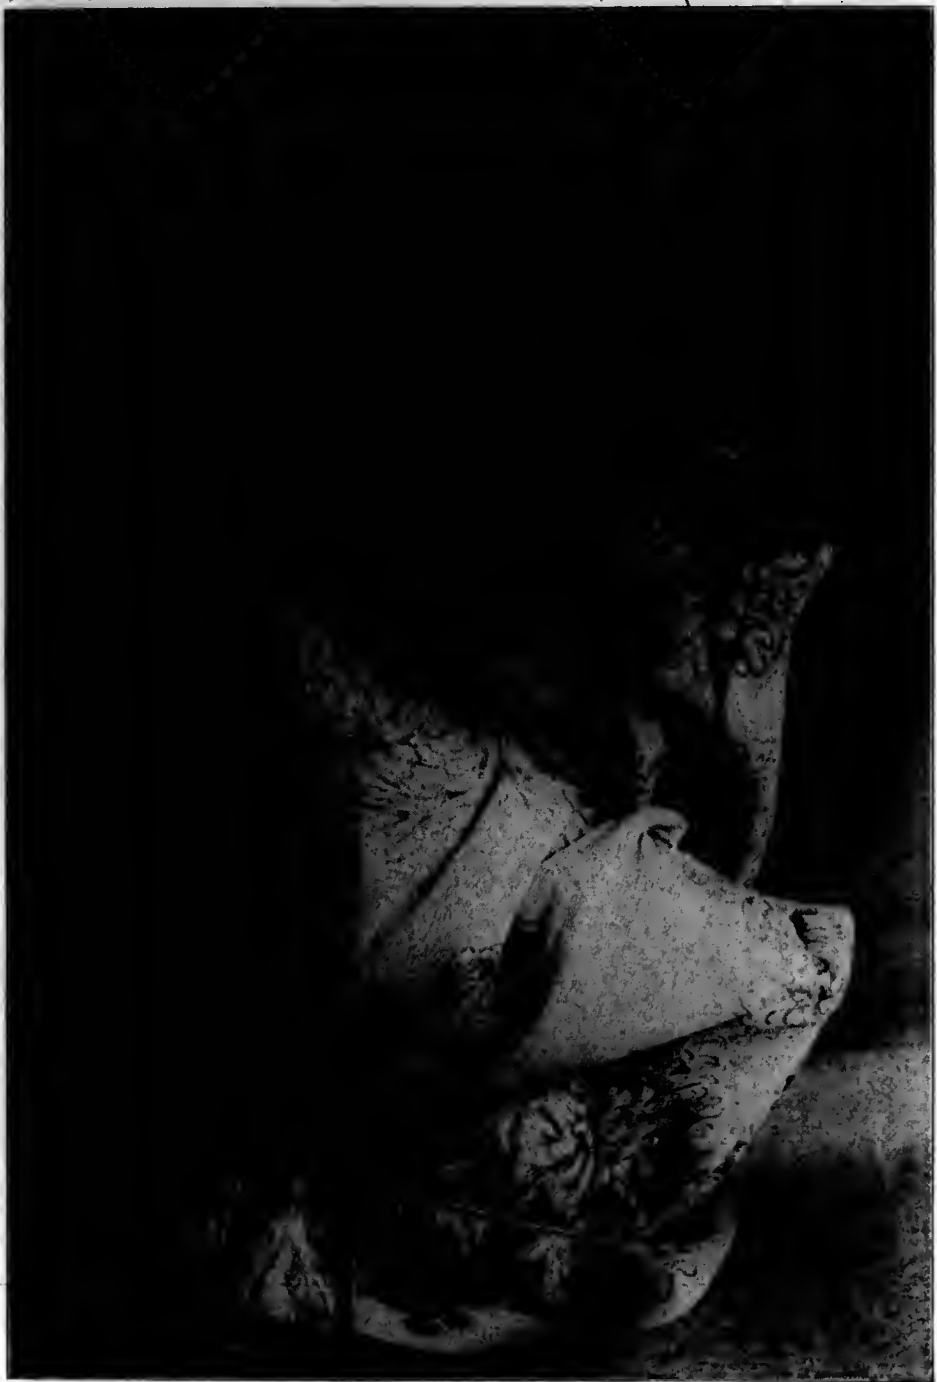

As to varieties for florists' use, I would say that a few varieties are preferable to many, and these should be clear, bright, self-colored flowers, though not necessarily deep colors; but should be selected to conform to the popular color tastes of the day. I would say that six to eight good varieties would meet the requirements of the cut flower trade, say red, scarlet, yellow, two shades of pink, and two white, one large and one small for design work. The latter need not have a long stem, but the others should have stems from twelve to eighteen inches in length, and as much longer as they may be had.

But it should not be forgotten that the dahlia has other uses beside the funeral wreath and the house decoration. The park, cemetery and private grounds consume an immense number, far greater than does the cut flower trade. Here the lines as to color and stem are not so critically drawn. Many of the shorter-stemmed varieties, variegated colors and neutral shades may be profitably used here.

The Cactus Dahlia.

The show and fancy types, so popular a generation ago, seem to have reached the limit of their possibilities. It is the cactus and decorative varieties, but more especially the cactus, which has caused the present popular favor, and yet it is plainly evident that the show and fancy types will still hold their places for many years to come. There is a real worth back of them not yet found in some of the new varieties even though popular.

The first cactus dahlia originated in 1872, but was not placed upon the market until 1880. It seems to have been a chance seedling, but may be a separate species. The original specimen was a bright scarlet of fine form but very short stem, but was nevertheless a very welcome addition, and I adopted it as the central figure of my trade mark. It was introduced under the name of Juarezi, after Pres. Juarez, of Mexico, and is still listed in some of the catalogues. From this chance plant there has descended a mighty troop that has held the center of the dahlia stage for the past twenty years, and the type is still showing marked improvement each year. Where it will end no one can say. The type embraces all the colors of the other types, in size from a small pompon to a diameter of seven inches, some with petals as narrow as a blade of grass, giving the flower more the appearance of a chrysanthemum than a dahlia. At first the type was deficient in stems, they being either short and stiff or thin and weakly, but in recent years much improvement has been made, and there are a goodly number now with fine stems, twelve to eighteen inches long, which hold the flower quite erect. And while the stem is under discussion, let me say that some of the weak-stemmed varieties, while useless as a cut flower, are yet very valuable for garden plants. The drooping stem permits the flower to swing free of the plant, and when combined with the dark green foliage presents a picture of wonderful grace not seen in the more erect-growing plants.

For cutting purposes I cannot say that the cactus dahlias are at present a success, taking them as a whole, although there are some varieties that are simply grand, but speaking of them as a class they have a tendency to wilt too quickly, excepting in the late fall, when the flowers develop slowly; then nearly all the varieties are good. Neither are the single varieties in favor as cut flowers. They stand up well, but drop their petals too soon. I make an exception, however, of Twentieth Century, which is as remarkable for keeping as it is in other respects. This one is decidedly the best of the singles in general use.

Too Many Varieties.

A question of much importance to both amateur and professional is the selection of varieties. Were there but a few dozen to select from it would not be difficult, but such is not the case, and a serious fault lies at the door of the commercial grower who holds with one hand to the old varieties and reaches with the other for the new ones, with the result that the prospective purchaser is bewildered with a possible selection of 1,500 varieties, all claimed to be good. One European grower who sends me his 1905 list, names 697 varieties; another 676. In the latter list I find 326 cactus varieties, and of these 135 are some shade of red. Surely it cannot be claimed that all these varieties are necessary. Surely among the 135 reds there must be some that are very inferior to others; and if inferior, why not discard them and shorten the list? I venture the opinion that if thirty-five of the best reds were taken out, the remaining 100 would be a rather inferior looking lot. Years ago I recommended, through the trade press, cutting down the list, but without result. In the past twenty years I have tested fully 1,000 named varieties, but now have less than 200 and my list is still too long and I am ready to shorten it just as soon as the public quits calling for back numbers. A very large proportion of the commercial dahlias of today are to the up-to-date grower just what the Lizzie McGowan and Portia carnations would be to the up-to-date carnation grower.

As a rule I think the purchaser, unless he is familiar with the varieties, will do well to leave the selection to the grower, simply naming the colors wanted and stating the use to which they are to be put. If the grower or dealer is honest and all dahlia growers are supposed to be, he will do his best to please.

The dahlia has always been notorious for sportive habits, and many and curious are the freaks to be seen. This is not only true of variegated varieties, but often appearing among varieties supposed to be quite staid and fixed in their colors. Some of the fancy varieties are very popular because of this wide variance in color, which keeps the grower guessing what is coming next. But while sports are common as stated above, yet all attempts to fix a sport into a new variety have been fruitless, for sooner or later they return to the parent color.

cessful with any one plant, if he turned his attention to another, he met with the same success. Call to mind some of the growers who supply the markets of Philadelphia, New York and Boston. It is not one species of plant they turn out so perfect, but all they handle are near perfection, and all guided by one brain. Gardeners, not merely specialists, reign over these establishments.

In Europe the ambition of the young gardener who travels from place to place in search of knowledge and experience is to obtain the position of head gardener at some extensive private establishment, a good restful life; but unless you could look for advancement or free scope to improve the garden, build modern houses or experiment with latest introductions, it would be a life of sameness, and some minds would as likely decay as advance in such a position.

It is worth mentioning that these positions are very much more numerous in this country than they were thirty years ago, and are daily coming into existence. A marvelous change has come over the country in a few short years, especially in the east. Our millionaires must have fine country seats. It is the proper thing to do, and if they do not inherit a taste for fine gardening, they are not fools by a very large majority, and they know that ability for any purpose demands good pay.

Then, again, the numberless parks, large and small, that are being formed in our cities of all sizes call for men of liberal gardening education. So it seems for a long future that the demand for good all-round gardeners will be far in excess of the supply. This is optimistic, yet I feel sure will be true.

Let us return to our theme. It is the commercial business that affords the brightest opening to our young men. When employed by another, they should look forward to the time when they will have a place of their own, and when they are possessors of a few houses they will be dreaming of building more houses, improving and branching out to an unknown end. This dreaming is essentially right. It is the most pleasant part of life. Dreaming is followed by ambition, and what would the world be without ambition?

Hope springs eternal in the human breast.
Man never is, but always to be, blessed.

IS OUR TRADE NOT ATTRACTIVE?

GOOD FLORISTS ARE SCARCE.

It is evident to any observer that boys who might make valuable greenhouse help are more and more shunning the business, and young men who have a general knowledge and experience with the stock usually found in a place of from 20,000 to 50,000 square feet of glass are very scarce. The business having largely evolved into the hands of specialists is partly accountable for this, but not entirely. Write to a large rose or carnation or perhaps palm grower for a man well up in these specialties and you will most likely be accommodated, but look for a young man to take charge of 30,000 feet of glass and direct all departments of a general plant and cut flower trade, and you will look a long while in vain.

Division of labor we know is the order of the day, and it is the most up-to-date and economical method of production, but I dislike to think of our business as a mechanical one. In the growing the mechanical is a small part compared to the mental. The vast majority of the men who are employed making up designs, such as wreaths, crosses and pillows, are simply mechanics. Ninety-nine out of every hundred are merely copyists, and their handiwork, when finished, has a very mechanical look. Not so with the good grower, the lover of his plants and their welfare. Think what little mechanical labor enters into the life of our plants, no matter whether it is a lily, a rose or a house of forcing grapes. The lily bulb is put into the soil in a very few seconds. That is truly a mechanical operation. Then come six months of care, ventilation, temperature, water, fighting insects, condition of plant relative to prospective market, and other points.

These are all mental, and make the real gardener's calling a profession.

Decline of Specialization.

The medical profession has run to special lines of practice very much of late until it is overdone, and young "M. D.'s," for fear of starving, are going back to general practice, and profess to be specialists on anything, from curing "housemaid's knee" (a specific disease in Europe) to putting in metallic windpipes.

It is doubtless true that with continual practice and undivided care a man must become very proficient at his specialty, but you have all noticed in our business that when a man was very suc-

Twig Basket Filled with Primula, Adiantum, Valley, etc.

Why Does Youth Stand Aloof?

Time was when boys, after graduating from our grammar schools, asked for work in our greenhouses. They were not set to wheeling coal and throwing out ashes, but carrying away flats of plants and taught to set them on the bench straight and level. If they had any aptitude for the business they gradually acquired the mechanical parts of the business, and if they drew your attention to some plants wanting water or a house needing ventilation and, above all, if they were endowed with the divine attribute of order, then they made gardeners, and with sincere joy and gratitude we can point to several young men now in business or holding good positions whom your humble servant first taught to set a plant level or handle the hose.

Why we have few or none of this kind now I know not. Is it because the youths of today want to wear good clothes and not dirty their hands, or is it because they see no money in the job? If the latter, it is a mistake, for I claim that any bright young man who can take charge of three or four houses, without expecting to know everything, will command as good, if not better, wages than the ordinary mechanic, and far better wages than the ordinary well-dressed clerk or salesman in most mercantile businesses.

As for social standing, that depends entirely on the individual himself. Of course ability has everything to do with wages and advancement, as in every other business, but in few as much as in ours. A builder can tell in five minutes whether a man is a carpenter, or bricklayer, or painter. We can tell whether a man can shift a plant neatly and quickly, but that is a small part of it. The same man may let a house of plants burn up or shrivel for want of water. A man or boy who will pass an azalea with its flowers drooping and dying for want of water with indifference or without wincing with pain will never be a gardener worth his salt, and should at once enter the ministry.

Our fine flower store clerks or shopmen are mostly evolved from the errand boy, and a very good way it is. From delivering parcels they get a new suit, are larger in stature, and assist behind the counter, and in time, if their ability keeps pace with their ambition, they are known as Messrs. Jones & Bro.'s artist. You can easily get lads for errand boys, and young men as assistants in the store, because the latter is more "genteel" than working among the plants, but I doubt if there is as much chance for promotion or an equal opportunity to gain a lucrative and independent position.

A Word to Employers.

Perhaps the shyness of lads to work in our houses is a good deal the employer's own fault. There is no need of making a drudge of a young boy. It breaks his heart, figuratively speaking. Praise good work as well as correct that which is slovenly. Alas! we are not all alike, nor any two alike, and you cannot put brains into a boy if they were not a birthday gift; but this gift, much or little, can be cultivated and encouraged. This, however, is too big and deep a phase of the subject.

You never saw a really great gardener or horticulturist who was not liberally endowed with brains. He could not be one without the other, so do not expect that every lad you start working is an embryo Loudon and Lindley. There is room for many young men at good wages who can handle plants dexterously and diligently, even if somebody else has to do the thinking for them.

You may ask what induced W. S. to write this screed. It is because I have noticed at home, and heard from those who travel, how scarce are good greenhouse men, and if boys had been taking hold of the business the past ten years this would not be the case.

We have noticed of late a lot of old laborers in a greenhouse—good, worthy men with the hoe and spade and the rake—but as much out of place in a greenhouse as the powerful bull in a china shop. Young boys, there is a bright opportunity for you in horticulture, especially in this country. It is only in its infancy as yet. The measure of your success will be in proportion to your diligence, application and intelligence. For one you may meet with who does not know when he has a good man, there are ten who do, and who will pay you all that you are worth.

And, employer, study. Study the youthful, plastic mind. Teach and encourage and show him with your own hands how things ought to be done, and if there is any good at all in the boy he will bless you in years to come. And the respect and good wishes of those you have employed are not the least of blessings to cherish.

The Demands We Make.

We ask but little of our greenhouse gardener, compared with the all-round gardener of fifty years ago. A man competent to take charge of a fine private garden in Great Britain would be expected to be well versed in a wide field of horticulture, and many a worthy man we can call to mind, and some with reverence, who were landscape gardeners of a high order, grew all kinds of hardy fruits and every culinary vegetable, forced exotic fruits of many kinds, as well as grapes, pineapples, peaches, nectarines and strawberries under glass, grew all the species of palms then known, as well as most of the economic plants, kept the conservatories gay the year round with flowers, acres in the flower garden, and add to this a so-called American garden, a hardy fernery, a tropical one, houses devoted to ericas, another to camellias and cool house plants, another to the Victoria Regia and other aquatics, and a hundred other features that converted fifty acres into a paradise. All this a head gardener was supposed to be, and in many cases was, master of. We don't ask the modern gardener to know all this, and we don't ask our greenhouse manager to know one-tenth of it. We only ask studious, up-to-date knowledge and practice of how to handle the plants wanted in our business, and it seems at present as if few had any inclination to learn that little.

I am not pessimistic; quite the reverse! I am no believer in "the good old times." No time in the world's history was as good as the present, and in a hundred years hence it will be better still. It must be, as any one can learn who reads the past. Superstition, hypocrisy and dishonesty are fading away, and charity, truth and honesty are taking their places. We simply know more about what is going on in the world nowadays that makes moss-grown minds speak of "the good old times," and with other progress let us encourage bright boys in the love of plants and flowers and their cultivation.

TUBEROUS BEGONIAS.

The accompanying illustration shows a house of tuberous begonias at the establishment of Blackmore & Langdon, the Ewerton Hill Nursery, Bath, England. This is reproduced from a photograph taken just before the plants were packed and sent to the great Temple show in London, where they were awarded the only gold medal given by the Royal Horticultural Society for begonias, June 2, 1903, an award which was repeated in 1904. These are new varieties, very large-flowered with a variety of colors and distinct character. They are as easily grown as the ordinary type of single or double tuberous begonias so generally used for bedding in England with such splendid effect. The use of tuberous begonias is rapidly increasing in the United States and the opportunity to try this type under our climatic conditions will be awaited and watched for by the many dealers and planters.

DEPARTMENT STORE FLOWER SALES.

A LIVE ISSUE.

So frequently of late have criticisms appeared of department store methods as applied to the flower business that the REVIEW has gathered the facts and opinions of those best qualified to judge of the effect these sales have upon our trade. Kansas City was one of the first places to have the department store flower sale, now so common all over the country. In Kansas City these sales have been held regularly in season for years and, while some of the less firmly established florists condemn them roundly, those who believe that department store participation in the flower business is hastening our trade on its way to the bow-wows will have to skip these pages or amend their views:

As the Sales Manager Sees It.

There are few department stores which have made a greater feature of flower sales than the Emery, Bird, Thayer Dry Goods Co., of Kansas City. This is one of the largest institutions of its kind west of Chicago. It has no regular flower department. The accompanying illustration shows a flower sale in progress at ten o'clock in the morning of Saturday, March 18. The following details as to the purpose and method of conducting the sales are applied by F. W. Gremmels, of the Emery, Bird, Thayer Co.:

"We take a section of counter space which can be spared or condensed for one day and establish our flower sale there. Saturday is the best day for such a sale and we take care that the place chosen is in an easily accessible part of the store. We have advertised the sale in the evening papers of the day before and we put up legible but not too large signs around the flower 'department.' We see that plenty of clerks are provided to handle the crowd and wrap up the stock as quickly as possible and save it from injury as much as may be, but we make no effort to do more than sell the loose cut flowers.

"Of course we sell at low prices, for the purpose is to attract people to the store and in that we have found these flower sales very successful. They are a great drawing card. We have sold as high as 60,000 carnations in one day, at 1 cent and 2 cents each. We put only a part of the stock on the counters at one time and replenish from reserve stock kept in water in a cool room. We buy our stock from the various wholesale florists in St. Louis and Chicago, as our local growers are unable to supply us.

"We sell any flower in season, such as carnations, roses, violets, mums or lilies, but of course we can only make the sales attractive when we can get the stock at a price, using a quantity. We can use these flower sales at any time in the cool months of the year, say from October to May, but stock is not often sufficiently plentiful in the winter months, so that we are in a measure limited to spring and fall, when the cut flower markets are overstocked. But we also hold these sales on palms, ferns, fern balls, etc. Probably we could use many other things if they could be offered at a price which would serve our purpose of attracting a crowd."

As the Retailer Sees It.

In order to set forth the effect of the department store flower sales on the retail flower stores, the retailers at Kansas City, who have had as much experience of this "competition" as anyone, were appealed to for their views. Samuel Murray, who does a large business and is a heavy buyer in the same markets as those drawn upon by the department stores, writes as follows:

"In regard to the special sales of cut flowers by the Emery, Bird, Thayer Co. and others, I do not think that they attract many of the people who patronize the better class of flower stores; maybe some, but on the whole they do the retail florists good by reaching a new class of people and creating in them a love for the beautiful and for flowers. Later these people will come to be regular patrons of the florists, buying to adorn their own homes but especially buying flowers for gifts to those in suffering and sadness, something they had not thought of until the cheap sale awoke in them the love of flowers. I feel that every flower brought into the home, be it rich or poor, brings just so much sunshine. I was very much pleased last Saturday (March 18) to see so many people in town carrying bunches of carnations and violets from one of these sales."

W. L. Rock is one of the representative florists of the west. He writes as follows:

"It is our candid opinion that these department store flower sales are a benefit to the retail florist, providing they go no farther than having special sales on, say, one day in the week. The sales certainly do us no harm. The class of people buying the department store flowers buy them because they think they are a bargain, and sometimes they are bargains. This class of people would not buy of the legitimate florist if there were no sale. The only danger we can see is that these sales, when well patronized, may have a tendency to tempt the department stores to place cheap flowers on sale regularly, or every day during the spring season, when stock of this character is plentiful and cheap.

"We have two large department stores here which have flower sales nearly every Saturday. Still our business increases each year, especially so on Saturdays, as that day is made up largely of transient business.

"We have had a few special sales ourselves and find they bring the people into our store, but we don't advocate having them oftener than once or twice a season and then giving the public a sure-enough bargain, something they will talk about.

"We understand that the Emery, Bird, Thayer Co. have contracted with some Chicago firm for 5,000 lilies and 15,000 fancy carnations to sell the Saturday before Easter at 15 cents for lilies and 2 cents for carnations. Such a sale as this is apt to hurt the smaller retail stores but not the stores where the higher class patronage goes. We only regret that such sales occur for the reason that they cannot handle lilies as an experienced florist can handle them and the result is that a lot of people will be disappointed Easter Sunday, and a number of smaller florists also disappointed in their sales, and no one benefited, for the department store has made no profit and the grower most likely could have sold them to the florists.

"These sales usually wear themselves out; just let them alone. The people are becoming better educated each year as to quality. Those who are buying cheap flowers this year may be the regular florists' customers next year. So on the whole I think these sales a benefit."

As the Wholesalers See It.

"There can be no doubt of the value of these special sales to the wholesale markets and the growers," said a leading Chicago wholesaler. "They are a good thing for the market in that whenever the production is so great that prices get down to a certain level there is an assurance that everything at that price will be cleaned up on at least one day, which serves to establish a bottom price for Thursday and Friday and cleaning up the market has the effect that on Saturday and Sunday values are well maintained. And it is not only the man whose stock goes to fill the big order who is benefited; the whole market feels the benefit. I always like to hear that these orders are in town, whether I get them or not."

"It is not right to refer to these department store orders as 'cheap orders,'" said another wholesaler. "We have found these people ready to pay fair prices. Of course they do not buy until prices are down to a low level, but then they buy in big lots and pay just as good prices as any florist will pay who can use a thousand of 'our selection.' Naturally the department store buyer wants to get his stock as cheaply as he can and underbidding makes him shift his order from one house to another. But if no more than $7.50 is now sometimes paid for a thousand carnations it is because of the seller's anxiety to sell. He might as easily get $12.50 if nobody would pack up stock for less."

"If one of my customers tells me that department store sales are hurting the Saturday business," said a commission man, "I tell him to go fight the devil with fire. If a florist who has anything like a central location does not approve of the department store sales, it won't be hard to stop them. Have a special sale of your own on the same day as the department store. Advertise just as widely, sell just as cheaply (you can buy as cheaply) and put the goods up in better shape. Hardly any department stores expect to make money on flower sales; it's to draw the crowd they have them. Go them one better and the crowd will come your way and the general store will find flower sales of no value to them. A great many florists are doing it. Notice the dozens of thousand-lot orders that go out of Chicago and other large cities every Friday."

Said another house: "We believe that we ship as many flowers to Kansas City as any firm in Chicago. We ship to the leading retailers, to the fellows with less elaborate fixtures, but who nevertheless do business, and we ship to the department stores. And there is one thing we can truthfully say, that there is no place from Pittsburg to Denver, or from the Twin Cities to New Orleans, where the florist's business is increasing at the rate it is in Kansas City, the city where the department stores sell cut flowers by the wagon load at cost every Saturday in spring."

THE USE OF CONCRETE.

Can one of the readers instruct me which materials and how much of them it will take to make a good mixture for concrete? My boiler cellar will have to be six feet deep in the ground.

R. A. V.

This is a question that is of interest and importance. For greenhouse benches, walls of greenhouse, imitation blocks of stone for house basements and many other purposes, cement and sand are fast displacing the natural stone or bricks. As an instance of this, our locality is blessed with an abundance of limestone for building purposes, and there are also several large manufacturers of hydraulic cement, sold here at 75 cents per barrel. Yet the great Lackawanna Steel Co., in erecting their mammoth buildings on the outskirts of this city, used exclusively cement for foundations and walls, and the foundations of their largest building costing $80,000 for concrete alone.

We have used concrete for the floors of stoke holes and for the walls of same. For walls of stoke holes or any cellar where little weight is carried eight inches is thick enough. Use four parts of sand to one part of cement. Now, there are several kinds of this hydraulic cement. There is our common cement, which is probably manufactured in many localities. Then there is the American Portland, and there is also sold the genuine English Portland, which is not made from a rock at all and is altogether too expensive for our use. The common cement is all you want. In mixing with sand for use, first thoroughly mix the sand and the dry cement, then add the water, mixing with a hoe as you add the water, and be sure not to make it too wet. It should appear to you rather on the dry side. Its proper consistency is this: When you shovel it into the wall and tamp it with a wooden rammer, if moisture, or perhaps I should say water, appears on the surface, then you have it right. For a dwelling house cellar floor or a cellar where you are going to keep flowers, this concrete will do very well, but should be finished off with a coat of one-fourth inch of half cement and half sand finely sifted and made quite thin, so that it will make a smooth, perfectly even surface.

Now, for a stoke hole or boiler house floor, where heavy lumps of coal are smashing around, and more especially shoveling is continually going on, I much prefer a brick floor. Make the surface quite even, but with a slight grade to the sewer. Then spread half an inch or so of dry sand over it, so that your bricks make an even surface. Let there be a half-inch space between each brick, which, of course, should be laid flat. When your bricks are in place, mix some cement half and half with sand and wet until very thin. Spread it on the brick floor with a scoop shovel or pail and sweep into the spaces between the bricks with a corn broom and you will have a floor that will last longer than you will.

You must excuse me, Mr. Editor, for going into this cement business at much greater length than the plain question required, yet there may be a hint for some other beginner in cement construction, and I do feel slightly competent to have an opinion, for during the first few years of my American education it was my pleasure (?) to mix and lay several hundred barrels of cement for cellar floors and very recently I have used the same material for cellar walls and low walls for greenhouse beds. While four parts of sand to one of cement is the thing for a wall of, say, six to eight feet in height, a little wall for a rose or carnation bed, which is seldom over a foot in height by four inches thick, can be five parts of sand to one of cement and will be amply strong.

MECHANICAL WATERING.

Since the sub-irrigation idea became pretty thoroughly exploded, at least so far as concerns commercial growers, attention has been turned toward mechanical and semi-automatic devices for watering the plants on or in greenhouse benches. The best invention of this character to date is that of C. W. Skinner, Troy, O. This, as is quite well understood, consists of a line of pipe with small patent nozzles inserted at short intervals, producing a rain-like spray. This pipe is fitted to turn on a swivel, so that the spray may be directed over a large radius. The device has not yet been thoroughly tested for use in plant houses or cut flower houses, but its application to vegetable houses, particularly where lettuce is grown, was successful from the first.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows the establishment of S. B. Chester, the president of the Cleveland Market Gardeners' Association, and one of the most progressive of the younger growers in that section. He has the Skinner device in four connected houses 30x150 feet, which are used exclusively for lettuce. There are no benches in these houses and the heating is by hot water from two Furman boilers, the piping being on the posts which support the gutters. As is shown in one of the other pictures, the irrigation is by two lines of pipe running the full length of each house, about six feet from the surface of the beds. The small nozzles, with spray caps, are placed along these pipes about three feet apart and at the end of each pipe there is a swivel joint and handle to enable the operator to direct the spray in any direction desired. The spraying nozzle with water under high pressure breaks up the stream into very fine mist. By means of the two pipes the house may be literally filled with moisture.

One of the accompanying pictures shows one line of pipe in operation. There are valves so that any part of the house may be watered, thus obviating any chance for having dry spots or too wet places in any part. One of the other illustrations shows a nearer view of the irrigation line, showing the spray and nozzles and also showing the valve and swivel handle. One of the advantages of the system is that the newly planted stock may be watered at once and not beaten down, but revived very quickly under the light fall of water like a heavy dew. It is also said to be an advantage that by this spraying process the water becomes thoroughly aerated by being so broken up.

While it is, of course, possible to operate this watering device by any means to insure a water pressure of not less than forty pounds, Mr. Chester finds nothing more satisfactory than the gasoline pumping engine made by the Standard Pump and Engine Co., which is used in so many greenhouse establishments. He gets his water from a well eighteen feet deep, with a capacity of 800 barrels, forcing it through the pipe line with the one and one-half horse-power pumping engine shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. This machine has a capacity of twenty gallons per minute and is capable of working against a pressure of ninety pounds per square inch, pumping direct into the pipe line and furnishing a constant high pressure. This engine is of sufficient capacity to supply 150 of these nozzles at one time with sufficient pressure for good work and can be operated all day on two gallons of gasoline. Mr. Chester also uses the pump for washing the lettuce for market and for pumping water into the heating boilers. It can be started instantly and is an ever ready protection from fire and can be used for any kind of pumping about a greenhouse.

Mr. Chester has an acre of outdoor space fitted with the Skinner system of irrigation, using spraying nozzles alone without the caps which are used to break up the stream into mist. Two hundred nozzles are sufficient to take care of one acre during very dry weather.

This system has served him so well that a number of his neighbors and others who have seen it are planning to install it in their places this summer.

SNAPDRAGONS.

Will you please let me know what to do for snapdragons that curl up at the top of the stalks? I have examined them with a magnifying glass but cannot find any insects. I have tried fumigating with tobacco but it does no good. Do you recommend red pepper for fumigating?
G. R. P.

We have never been troubled with this "curling up" of the shoots. I hope some extensive growers of antirrhinums can enlighten G. R. P. as to what the trouble is. We have never used red pepper for fumigating, but a few weeks ago in the columns of the REVIEW a prominent rose grower recommended its use for destroying red spider and gave directions. Vaporizing with Nicotinic acid and fumigating by burning tobacco dust in pie dishes keeps down all insect life. And if these do not answer, the hydrocyanic acid gas is sure death to all of them. That bulletin on the white fly issued by the Department of Agriculture published in last week's REVIEW should be cut out and framed for there you will learn all about this most useful gas.

ASTER BEETLE.

The last two years we have been unable to raise asters on account of a black beetle about a half inch long. Can you give us a remedy for this pest? They dig right in the center of the flower and do not seem to injure the foliage.
A. J. S.

No doubt the regular aster beetle is meant. He is not all black and we think he does chew and puncture the leaves before the flower is formed. When once the buds begin to expand the young, tender petals are their favorite diet and the leaves are deserted. If nothing is done to keep down these beetles until the buds are ready to open, then it is our experience nothing can be done. As soon as the plants have a good hold of the soil outdoors, syringe them with Paris green, a teaspoonful in a common pail of water, and do it every two weeks until the plants flower. I do not know the life history of these beetles but possibly it is like that of the potato beetle. A few old roosters and their wives have survived the winter and begin business with the warm June sun and if let alone in their domestic bliss will wax strong and multiply exceedingly, as the Mormons did in the land of Utah. Give them a sleeping powder before they can raise a family. W. S.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Field Preparation.

We are getting near the time of planting young stock in the field. Some may have begun already but our experience has been that it is best to wait until there is less danger of damage by frost. While the carnation is classed as hardy it would be unreasonable to suppose that plants reared under glass would relish exposure to frost. If planted a sufficient time to become pretty well established before a freeze came, they would probably pull through, but it is not a question of how much a carnation can stand but what treatment will suit it best.

In Connecticut the first week in May can be taken as an average time to put stock in the field. Meanwhile the land should be got into condition to receive it.

It is a good plan to arrange for at least two pieces of ground in which to plant. By this means a different plot can be used each year. While one is in use the other can be so treated as to be in prime condition the following year; but this will be touched on later.

This may be the first year with some growers and no preparations made last fall. In that case it would be advisable to make use of land on which some cultivated crop was raised last year, corn or potatoes, for instance. It will depend on how much manure was used last year, what amount is needed at this time, but it is not likely any great quantity will be required. You want enough to keep them growing sturdily but remember they are not to stop long and, in comparison with many crops, remove but little from the soil. Too much manure is believed to bring about conditions favorable to stem-rot. We use no bone meal in the field, preferring to reserve it for use in the benches.

Probably no advice is necessary in regard to the use of plows, harrows, etc., as you understand them thoroughly, so employ your best skill and make a first-class job.

Now as to preparations for the future. Choose a piece of sod that will raise a good farm crop and so handle it. This will necessitate stirring the soil all summer, getting it into good mechanical condition; besides the crop will take off the raw edges produced by the combination of decayed sod and the manure you would plow in.

If you are located where crimson clover will not winter-kill and do not care to bother with a cultivated crop, the land could be harrowed several times during the summer to keep down weeds, then about the middle of August sow the clover. Some land is unsuited to clover or said to be clover-sick. In this case an application of lime will help matters and in any case I would treat the seed with nitro-culture. Crimson clover starts very early in the spring and grows rapidly. Plowed in as early as the ground can be worked it will quickly decay and prove an inexpensive method of adding nitrogen to the soil.

It will be readily seen by the above how two plots of land can be handled to advantage and as most growers lift their plants before August 15 there is time to follow with clover or some other cover crop. Those obliged to use the same ground two years in succession will see a way to benefit their plants.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Seasonable Details.

It will be several weeks, probably, in our locality, before we will be able to plant our young carnations in the field. It may not freeze hard enough to hurt them after April 20, but along about that time we usually have a rainy spell which prevents planting for a week or two longer. Whatever you do, don't plow your ground when it is too wet, for you will have trouble all summer. The soil will be stiff and too lumpy to plant right and you will have trouble in cultivating later on. Neither will the plants thrive as they should.

Bed of Canna Egandale Edged with Pennisetum Ruppellii.

Bed of Canna Souvenir de Antoine Crozy Edged with Pennisetum Longistylum.

Many growers of carnations are also growers of geraniums and such stock and this is the time of year when these growers begrudge the young carnation stock every foot of space it takes up. It is a great mistake, of course, but nevertheless one that is made frequently, to the grower's sorrow later. If you have some hotbed sash you can remedy this evil by putting all your young carnations that are well established in pots out in cold frames. It will not likely freeze hard enough after this date to injure young carnations that have glass or board protection. They will, in fact, be much benefited by being out there, as it ripens the growth somewhat and they will take hold quicker when planted out, and without wilting any. You must take just as good care of them, though, as you would inside. In fact, they will need more attention and work, as you will have to raise all the sash on bright days, or, better still, take them off altogether and put them back on in the evening if the temperature is likely to go below 40 degrees. Don't shut them down tight, except to keep the frost out. They will take more watering, too, as they will dry out more rapidly than they do inside. By all means run your water pipes out to the frames, so you can water with the hose. If you plunge the pots to the rim in sand it will help them to hold moisture.

APHIDES AND ANTS.

I am sending a piece of a carnation plant to show the insects on it. Please tell me what to do to get rid of them. We never had any trouble with them until about two weeks ago. Our carnations also show the effect of little red ants that get inside the calyxes and damage the petals. What shall we do to them?

P. M.

The samples you sent were pretty well dried up by the time they reached me and the insects were all dead and pressed flat. I could see, however, that they are no other than aphides and you should experience no difficulty in ridding your place of them. Buy a pint (or a gallon if you care to keep it on hand for constant use) of any good extract of nicotine and spray as per directions on the can every other morning for ten days and you will find no live aphides by that time, even if they are entrenched between the young foliage. After that spray all your plants once a week and you will always have your plants clean. While we are talking insects and spraying let me say a word about one of our worst enemies, which is thrips. This is the time of year when they are usually the worst and if allowed to go unchecked they play havoc with your crop of blooms in a hurry. Some varieties are troubled more by them than others, Mrs. Lawson being one of the worst. You will notice their presence by those white spots around the edges of the petals up to now, but as the sun gets stronger these spots turn brown and make the blooms look rusty and bruised. We used to have much trouble with these, but this year we are spraying once each week with the Tobacco-ine liquid, and we have not been troubled with thrips at all so far. I am satisfied that this will keep them down when applied regularly. It certainly has kept our plants cleaner this season than we have ever been able to keep them by fumigating.

GENESEO, ILL.—Leroy Hill & Bro. are starting in the greenhouse business here.

PENNISETUM FOR EDGING.

For the edging of beds of many moderately tall growing plants there is no better material than the pennisetum. The name comes from penna, a feather, and seta, a bristle, and is aptly descriptive, for at a distance the effect is feather-like, while the spike is composed of bearded bristles. P. longistylum of gardeners is P. villosum, Brown, of botany. It is, perhaps the finest grass commonly grown for its flowers. At Lincoln park, Chicago, last season the P. longistylum and P. Ruppellii, Steud., Rupelianum in some books, were used to very good effect as edging for beds of cannas. The results would have been even better had it been a season of normal growth for the cannas. It would have carried the flowers a little further above the grass. Egandale in particular failed to reach its usual height by quite a little.

The plants of pennisetum may be obtained from seed each year but early sowing is necessary in order to get a showing before the season is over. The old plants may be taken up and wintered anywhere that frost is not admitted. In the spring divide into pieces for a 3-inch pot, set in flats of soil in a greenhouse to start growth, then pot, later move to a cold frame and you have less need for care and an earlier showering.

GERANIUM DISEASE.

I send a geranium. If you can tell me what is the matter with it, and the remedy, I will be much obliged. In a lot of 500 or 600 about 100 have gone to the bad in this manner. I had a few last year that crinkled up like the one I send you and I kept them and set them out but they produced no blooms but kept on growing. This peculiar growth of disease appears all over the bed. It does not confine itself to any one variety. It did not show this season until I had most of them in 4-inch pots. H. M. M.

We recognize the trouble very readily from the specimens sent and have often had to discard varieties because a number of the plants were affected by it. It may be called a disease, but what I don't know. It is not caused by any external trouble. It is in the constitution of the plant. The terminal growth of a shoot makes a number of, small, abortive leaves and numerous small lateral growths. Altogether the plant is useless. Some varieties we have grown for twenty years and not a plant ever showed signs of this trouble. Other varieties, notably that fine old pink, Emile de Girardine; we had to discard. I feel sure it is sound advice to say that when any variety assumes this habit, throw it away and start with a newer and more vigorous variety. W. S.

THE USE OF PLANT FOODS.

The importance of liquid feeding at this season of the year is so fully recognized by growers that in directing attention to its use there is little necessity for discussing its merits. Even the beginner must be aware that when judiciously applied it must possess a highly stimulating power upon the growth, development of the bud and general health of the plant. The experienced grower who, by practice, is convinced of these facts makes use of this knowledge and by a close study of conditions during the different stages of growth can produce results which are little short of marvelous.

In applying liquid food to roses at this time of the year a technical knowledge of the composition of the fertilizers is absolutely necessary if success is to be attained. It must be remembered that the roots of roses under glass are, or should be, in full activity and are capable of absorbing large quantities of food and must do so to sustain the rank growth which is now in progress, and when this food is presented in its most assimilable form great care must be exercised in the selection, quality and strength of the preparation. As the depth of soil is so limited it is far from safe to have any constituents in the supply which are not at once available, thus preventing an accumulation of salts, which might be detrimental to the general health of the plant.

It is always safe to rely on organic or barnyard manure, as it usually possesses the essential elements of plant life in safe and proper proportions, but it is frequently beneficial to supplement this class of manure with others of a more concentrated nature and which contain the elements wanted at that particular stage of development.

Those crops under glass sometimes require an additional fertilizer in the form of ammonia, potash or phosphoric acid and these elements are contained in bone flour, wood ashes, etc., and can be applied in quantities to meet the present requirements of the plant if the grower possesses sufficient knowledge of their qualities so that he can act with safety.

When quick acting and easily soluble fertilizers like nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia and superphosphates are to be used it is best to have plenty of fiber in the soil, as this class of soil absorbs quickly and gives up slowly. When the roots are very active the proportion of nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia or superphosphate should be fifteen ounces to ten gallons of water per 100 square feet of bench. When root action is slow it is safer to refrain from the use of all chemical foods.

If the growth is reaching and the foliage is of good color but the wood weak and spindling, the need of lime and potash is apparent, as the rose plant requires these elements in the building up of plant tissues. In a case like this the use of nitrogenous manures should be avoided.

Potash can be supplied by giving a light top-dressing of wood ashes, but as this is a very concentrated form of food it must be supplied sparingly, five pounds to 100 square feet of bench being sufficient for a first application.

If the plants persist in making wood and refuse to set buds reduce the quantity of nitrogenous food and give phosphoric acid in the form of bone meal, using about five pounds to each 100 square feet of bench. It must ever be remembered that bone, lime and wood ashes should never be used in combination under any circumstances, as this releases more ammonia than the rose has any use for.

Where the soil is a stiff, heavy clay it is very unsafe to use chemical fertilizers and if used at all should be diluted at least one-third more than usually recommended for ordinary soils.

The frequency of applications depends entirely on the stage of growth and weather and the student will have to govern himself by these conditions to obtain success. It is always safe to give at least one thorough watering with clear water between applications of liquid feeding.

Nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash are rarely found in sufficient quantities in ordinary soils and therefore have to be added in proper quantities by the experimenter. They are also quickly exhausted and difficult and costly to restore. RIBES.

ROSE QUERIES.

At the last meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' Club the question box contained a number of queries on rose growing. Here are some of the questions and the answers supplied by expert growers:

1.—When should roses be planted? How should sulphur be applied as a preventive for mildew? Is there anything better? Why is it Bridesmaids vary so much in color, planted in the same house and given the same treatment, some a nice shade of pink, others so light in color?

Roses for winter blooming may be benched any time up to July 20. Flowers of sulphur mixed with linseed oil to a paste and brushed on the steam-pipes is the best preventive of mildew. If we could have all our plants of Bridesmaid in the same healthy, vigorous growing condition the color would probably be the same in all the flowers.

2.—What varieties of roses are the best sellers throughout the season?

Maid, Bride, Meteor, Liberty, Perle and Cusin, with Kaiserin and Gate in season, are undoubtedly the most staple goods, while there are any number of good roses which will sell just as well if they have the right kind of a salesman behind them. One of the cries is for "something new" in roses and yet when they are to be had, with a few exceptions, the stores are afraid to handle them because their trade does not ask for them.

3.—Name the twelve best roses for summer blooming, outside of the regular June blooming roses.

Maman Cochet, pink; Maman Cochet, white; Gruss An Teplitz, red; Clothilde Souper, white and pink; Pres. Carnot, white; Malmaison, shell pink; Duchess of Albany, dark pink; Balduin, crimson; La France, light pink; Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, white; Etoile de Lyon, yellow; Souv. de Wootton, red.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Every grower who is planning for the best results for next year has taken his stock before this, and probably has the first batch out of the propagating bed and into the flats. Be sure and keep your "pedigreed" stock securely and accurately labeled, so that no mistakes can possibly be made, remembering that mistakes or carelessness mean that you are set back at least one year, to say nothing about making your records of much less value, even if they are not worthless.

After getting the stock transplanted into the flats, do not think that they can take care of themselves just as well as not, because you have so much else at this time of the year to take your attention. If neglected now, or your vigilance relaxed, and they are permitted to halt in their proper development, if not very noticeable at the present, it will become apparent next season, when the weather and conditions are unfavorable for plant growth and development. For this reason you should see that they have plenty of good fresh air as soon as they become established and have taken hold of the soil.

Do not allow them to become drawn or weak for lack of good light, or too warm houses with an over-abundance of water. You might almost give them too little water and too much air if you are in danger, from circumstances, of doing one or the other. A soft, sleepy plant, if I may be allowed to call it so, will be in no shape later to either plant in the borders or outdoors, for such a plant shrivels up and is gone at the first rise of the sun, or the first breaths of a dry, hot wind, with the result that you have had all your labor for your pains. So I say again, take proper care of your stock every day, even if you lose one or two Easter sales.

If for any reason it has been really impossible to get your stock worked up before this, and the weather stays as cool as we are now having, you might still take your stock rather than trust to buying, as the chances are that it would be as good or better than any you could buy, for the reason, as I have frequently stated before, new stock takes one or two years to get acclimated.

You will have to use even more than ordinary care lest your cuttings receive some check, and it is best to use all precautions you can, so at the very start, when taking the cuttings off the plants, throw them as removed from the old plants at once into a pail of cold water. This not only keeps them from wilting and hardens them up, but it gives them a good washing, removing dirt (and bugs, perhaps), making them in good order to go into the propagating bed, and they should have watchful care here in watering, shading, airing, etc., or else you may find them suddenly damped off, to your dismay and undoing.

Another don't: Don't give them some old, dirty propagating bed. Use new, fresh soil in the flats when they come out of the bed ready to be pricked out. You may think, if they are so late coming out of the propagating bed, and you have your border ready to plant, why not plant them directly into the border and not take the trouble to put them into flats? But our advice would be, do not do so. You will probably gain in the end by giving them a chance to get established in the flats, and you can shade and control the temperature and other conditions here, and can not in the border. Planting directly into the border never seems to be a success.

PHALAEOPSIS.

The different species of phalaenopsis are among the most beautiful of all winter flowering orchids. Coming, as they do, from the islands of the Malay archipelago and some of the eastern provinces of India, they need tropical treatment. No one should essay their culture who has not at least a plant stove where a winter minimum of 60 and 65 degrees can be maintained. If a small division can be given up to them all the better. We find the plants succeed well in square baskets, hung moderately near the roof, where direct currents of cold air cannot strike them. For compost good osmunda fiber and a surfacing of living sphagnum is suitable. The plants are also fond of lumpy charcoal.

An abundance of water is needed during the growing season, from March to September. The plants need plenty of light. Winter sun from December 1 to February 15 will not hurt them. The rest of the year some shading is necessary. If the shade is a movable one all the better. It is a great mistake to grow the plants under heavy shade; beautiful leaves are produced but much poorer spikes of flowers. Like miltonias, these plants easily fall a prey to thrips. Sponging with tobacco water will keep these in check, but heavy fumigation will injure the plants seriously.

P. Schilleriana is the finest of all the moth orchids. The flowers are of a beautiful rosy pink color. Racemes carrying eighty to 125 flowers have been produced under cultivation. Some of our plants this season carried racemes over three feet long, with eight branches and sixty flowers. These plants have done service for over twenty years. Other beautiful and desirable sorts are P. Aphrodite (also called P. amabilis), P. Stuartiana, P. Sanderiana, P. violacea and P. Sumatrana. W. N. CRAIG.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Cucumbers, 35c to $1.75 doz.; leaf lettuce, 45c to 50c case; head lettuce, $2 to $4 bbl.

NEW YORK, April 10.—No. 1 cucumbers, $1 to $1.25 doz.; lettuce, 35c to 75c doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 60c lb.; tomatoes, 10c to 30c lb.; radishes, $2 to $3 per 100 bunches; parsley, $2 to $3 per 100 bunches.

BOSTON, April 10.—Cucumbers, $3 to $8.50 box; tomatoes, 40c to 50c lb.; lettuce, 50c to $1 doz.; mushrooms, 75c to $1 lb.; asparagus, 30c to 40c bunch; rhubarb, 3c to 4c lb.; mint, 50c doz. bunches; parsley, 80c to $1 doz. bunches.

LETTUCE IN FRAMES.

During catchy weather it is sometimes quite troublesome to regulate the airing of cold frames. It hardly pays to have a man running around them the whole day long; still it is better to have someone convenient in case of sudden changes of temperature.

I have often in this column advocated the cold frame for lettuce in spring and fall, but I was rather surprised to read in a recent issue of the REVIEW that W. W. Rawson, with such a width of glass at his disposal, uses something like 1,200 sash in the growing of lettuce. This in itself is quite an argument in favor of the cold frame.

The plants are sometimes a little slow in starting when unfavorable weather prevails, but once they get under way it is gratifying to see them grow. Seldom, if ever, is there any trouble with fungus diseases or any of the many troubles that prevail in the greenhouse; the lettuce plants simply seem to revel in the conditions here provided and with ordinary care never fail to produce satisfactory results.

W. S. CROYDON.

CUCUMBERS.

Plants recently set in the beds should be kept growing as freely as possible. Though little fire heat will be necessary in another month or so, it will pay to use some coal now to give the plants a good start, for if they once get stunted it is a hard matter to get them back into a healthy, free-growing condition. As a rule, the days are bright enough now and the sun heat is sufficient to maintain the necessary temperature, which should be as near 80 degrees as possible, but on dull or wet days fire heat will, of course, be needed. Though on such days 80 degrees need hardly be maintained, it will not do any harm to run from 70 to 75 degrees. Earlier in the season, when a high temperature is maintained through the day by fire heat alone the plants are apt to become drawn and weakly, but now a dull spell can only be of short duration and the bright sunlight can be depended on to counteract any tendency to softness.

There is a good deal more in proper firing than many people take time to think. A good deal of sun heat can be retained by closing up the house early, and the fire should be started while the house is still warm, so that by the time the temperature drops to the night figure, 65 degrees, the pipes are warm enough to prevent further decline. It is poor policy to wait until the temperature is running down before starting the fire, as it is apt to go down too low and more fire is necessary to raise it to the required figure than would have been needed to keep the fire going an hour or two earlier in the day.

A moist atmosphere should be maintained as much as possible through the day and frequent syringing should be given to ward off the attacks of red spider, which is the worst insect enemy to which cucumbers are subject. Care should be used, however, to use a very fine spray as the leaves are tender and easily lacerated.

W. S. CROYDON.

PROPAGATION.

While there is lots of time yet in which to propagate chrysanthemums, still it is well to have all the early and mid-season kinds rooted this month, so that they will be nice stock to plant by June 1. The operation of propagating is simple enough, and too well known to need any description, but from now on cuttings in the bench will need more attention as to spraying and watering than did stock rooted earlier in the year.

Every day the sun increases in strength and if, as is usually the case, the cuttings are being rooted in an odd corner of the house, where other plants are growing, the cuttings will need shading and daily watering to keep them from wilting. When a cutting gets hard and woody, as it will if dried but a few times, it does not root readily and will never make a satisfactory plant. Those growers who have a north side propagating house do not experience much difficulty in this direction for some time yet but we do not all have an ideal propagating house.

When the sand in the bench is coarse, cuttings inserted in such sand need much more water than they would if the sand were of a finer texture. Some growers are very particular to insist on the sand being sharp, absolutely clean, etc., but as a matter of fact chrysanthemums never do better than when the sand has a certain proportion of loam through it, such as is found alongside of almost any stream in the country.

One thing that is important is to get the cuttings out of the sand just as soon as the young rootlets are an inch long.

There is no nourishment in sand for a plant to live on and when potting up is too long delayed the plant makes a thin, spindly top and long, wiry roots, and thereby incurs a check at the outset of its career.

All these may seem like small items to write about but they are among the little things that go to make ultimate success or failure.

The Cold Frame.

From now on the cold frame is a boon to the grower. After the middle of the month it is perfectly safe, in most localities, to put the young mums out in the frame. If a cold night comes along they may, of course, need some protection, but they will do much better in the frame than they will in a house, not to mention the fact of the valuable space that is gained for bedding plants and such-like stock.

Even though I did not need the space, if I had a frame I would rather have my young stock in it, because it is a more natural condition for a chrysanthemum to be cold and airy, and when grown in this manner the growth is stocky and short-jointed and will give much better results.

When plants are out in a frame it is a difficult matter to fumigate, so that it is well to see that they are clean before putting them outside. The black fly is an inseparable companion of the mum and the plants must be lightly but persistently fumigated.

Exhibition Stock.

Exhibition growers generally now have their stock rooted and into 2-inch or 3-inch pots, some that I know even having their plants set out where they are intended to flower. While this seems a waste of room and time to the commercial grower, the results obtained from the longer season of growth seem to justify the additional time and care. Competition is keen nowadays in the eastern shows and he who would come out a winner has got to get in the game early and stay there. Where there was one expert grower five years ago there are now a dozen and their numbers are increasing every year.

Rust.

Rust is still with us to a greater or less extent and a little attention just now will clean the plants of this disease. Where it is showing on the young stock the best thing to do is to take off the green healthy top and strike it again and throw away the old plant. By this means it can be cleaned right out of the stock and will give no further trouble.

If the variety is a valued one, and scarce, and it is not advisable to throw the plants away, they may be sprayed with potassium sulphide, half an ounce to a gallon of water which, if thoroughly done, will clean out the rust, but where possible I would say—make a clean, new start entirely.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

PRIMULA HIS MAJESTY.

Primula His Majesty is an exceptionally fine double white Chinese primula, the result of many years of careful selection to secure a really giant-flowered double form. The flowers have splendid texture and are finely fringed. His Majesty was exhibited before the Royal Horticultural Society of England on February 14 of this year and received an award of merit. The photograph comes from Sutton & Sons, Reading, England, who are the introducers of this fine variety.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While we have had quiet days, and rather druggy ones, we cannot complain of business being bad for this season of the year. For the Lenten season there has been quite a little social activity in our city and trade is much better than a year ago at this time. Indications point to a good Easter supply of everything in the cut flower line except violets. Any who are fortunate enough to be able to hold back a supply of these will secure excellent prices for them. The coming holiday, unless all signs fail, will be more than ever a plant Easter.

Roses continue in abundant supply, without much change from previous quotations. Carnations also remain about the same, from $1 to $2.50 being about the usual prices secured, a few going lower and higher. Violets are getting scarce and good stock readily brings 75 cents per hundred. Bulbous stock is plentiful, but sells very well. Callas, Easter lilies and lily of the valley are all in good supply. Some very good stocks, antirrhinum and Spanish iris are coming in. Sweet peas are abundant. While poor grades are lower, high quality flowers, like those Wm. Sim brings in, sell well. Asparagus and adiantum are each coming of better quality. A good many pot plants of bulbous stock, roses, lilies, spiræas, azaleas, etc., are being brought in.

Various Notes.

William Nicholson reports a very heavy sale for young stock of his large flowering white marguerite. He continues to bring in, among other carnations, remarkably fine Prosperity, in the culture of which he is particularly successful.

Houghton & Clark, on Boylston street, are showing some extra well grown plants of Gardenia florida and Erica Cavendishiana. In cut flowers they have some excellent Lycaste Skinneri of a very dark color, and superb antirrhinums.

E. N. Peirce & Co. are forwarding quantities of pot-grown Brunner roses and Lilium longiflorum to the Park street market. They are the largest growers of the latter for the Boston market and their immense stock this year is in prime condition for Easter.

N. F. McCarthy & Co.'s auction sales of Dutch and American grown nursery stock started on April 7. Hybrid perpetual roses, bay trees and a general assortment of evergreen and deciduous trees and shrubs is included.

J. W. Manning, who recently took over the Reading Nursery, so long managed by his father, is receiving immense importations of trees and shrubs from the leading European growers. His monograph on berry producing plants recently mailed to his customers is very interesting.

William Anderson, of South Lancaster, was operated on for appendicitis on April 2. We are pleased to learn he is progressing satisfactorily, although some weeks will elapse ere he is able to be around again.

M. H. Walsh is receiving numerous orders for his new Rambler roses as a result of the grand group he put up in Boston recently. Those who want to see hybrid perpetual roses well grown should visit Woods Hole about the end of June and a week or two later to see his beautiful hardy Ramblers.

Supt. J. A. Pettigrew, of the Boston park system, says that he finds a good deal of damage done to trees and shrubs, especially evergreens. Rhododendrons and hemlock pine have suffered badly. The long, severe winter, added to the dry weather of the last two years, he considers is largely accountable for it.

Welch Bros. anticipate the biggest Easter business in their history and will have considerable additional floor space for handling their enormous quantity of supplies. Their boxes of Easter lily plants, twenty-five in a box, are making quite a hit.

Mann Bros. are shipping very fine pots of Pink and Crimson Rambler roses to the Park street market, in addition to azaleas and rhododendrons.

J. T. Scott, representing F. R. Pierson Co., Geo. F. Struck with Lager & Hurrell, and A. Hans, with H. J. Kuyk, of Ghent, Belgium, were with us the past week. All report good business.

Joseph Tailby & Son have had Spanish iris in season for several weeks. What they are now shipping to the new market is remarkably fine.

While most of the growers' single violets are done, Kidder Bros. are still selling splendid Princess of Wales at the Park street market. They are planning to considerably increase their area of violets for another season.

Duncan Finlayson has returned from a trip to Washington, where he was superintending the landscaping around the new Larz Anderson mansion.

E. O. Orpet reports heavy damage to trees and shrubs from field mice at South Lancaster, large quantities being girdled. Digitalis purpurea and other biennials, as well as some perennials, are nearly all eaten.

Peter Murray gave a very practical talk on "Begonias and Their Culture" before the New Bedford Horticultural Society on April 11. Mr. Murray is a fine grower of that sterling variety, Gloire de Lorraine. He reports excellent business since he started commercially on March 1.

Indications point to White Lawson and Lady Bountiful being the most planted of their color here next season. The Queen also will be quite largely grown. Where it does well it is hard to beat.

The Brides and Maids being sent in from Montrose Greenhouses to our market are of grand quality at present. Some of them secured first premiums at the late show.

Carbone has a quantity of pink saxifragas in pots, which are something of a novelty to many. He also has some very fine ericas and azaleas, varieties of the latter especially which are not often seen.

W. E. Doyle is showing some fine spikes of Crinum Macowani. Wellesley and Killarney roses are favorites with him. He is getting some very fine Liberties, also. He anticipates a big Easter trade.

An additional house has just been given up to orchids at Mrs. R. C. Hooper's, in Manchester, where William Swan has charge. Phalænopsis, calanthes and Vanda cœrulea are to be grown in addition to the cattleyas already on hand. Carnations are splendid here, Enchantress, White Lawson, Lady Bountiful and Lawson being all superb.

Out at Waverly W. W. Edgar has a grand lot of plants which will be just right for Easter. Roses in variety, azaleas, genistas, acacias and other seasonable sorts are grown in quantity.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club occurs on April 18. A number of new members will be elected and there will be interesting talks. It will pay every member to be present.

The next prize exhibition at Horticultural Hall occurs on April 29. Classes are provided for Azalea indica, pelargoniums in variety, calceolarias, tulips, narcissi, pansies and native plants, also a variety of forced vegetables.

Seed stores have been rushed to the limit of late and overtime has been the rule for everyone. More early orders are now sent in than used to be the case. Nurserymen are also having a strenuous time of it shipping stock and are hoping for a cool month to retard vegetation and thus prolong their season.

At the new market N. E. Comley, Malcolm Orr and Edward Wood are still shipping in first-class violets. New stallholders at this market are John Husband, of Cambridge, and J. W. Cavanaugh. The latter is handling quantities of May flowers, which are now abundant. Mrs. David Fisher, of Montvale, has started to sell Asparagus Sprengeri and adiantum at the same market.

Alexander McKay, of South Framingham, has bought material for his new houses, to be erected on land recently acquired, and is busy with preparatory work. Blair, of South Framingham, will have a new house built by Lord & Burnham Co.

William Sim cuts over 5,000 sweet peas daily, but cannot half supply his orders. He is just starting to pick Princess of Wales violets from his frames. Of these he has three, each 360 feet long, which will give him a heavy picking for Easter. He is getting $1 per hundred for all his best.

We regret that John Walsh, of the Park street market, is again a victim of rheumatism and hope for his speedy recovery.

Thomas Pegler, who sells for Oscar L. Dorn, handles some 10,000 Campbell violets daily at present. He expects to have about 60,000 for Easter.

Waban Conservatories will plant their new rose Wellesley heavily this season, as it has been very popular. They have received orders for stock from all sections of the country.

J. W. Foote and A. Roper are sending grand Fair Maids to the new market. The latter's flowers are from plants carried over a second year. Mr. Roper's new seedling, Chester Roper, continues to produce heavily. From 2,400 plants he has averaged over 2,500 flowers per week for the past ten weeks. W. N. CRAIG.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week there was little change from the last report. The weather has been cool, showing frost in the mornings, but not enough for any damage in this locality. This does not seem to help the retail business and another dull week will have to be reported.

The commission men are still receiving an abundance of fine stock in roses, carnations and bulbous material. The latter is a great glut and at the rate it is coming in very little will be had for Easter. Narcissi and lilac from the south have increased the supply at the wholesale houses.

Good roses were sold below the quotations. Brides and Maids are very plentiful. Golden Gates, Meteors, Perles and Beauties in all grades can be had in large quantities at any of the wholesale houses. The best of these are sent in by Vesey, Ammann, Canfield and Wilcox. If the supply and quality as it is at present will be the same at Easter we will all be happy.

Extra fine stock in carnations is noted at this writing, with the best as low as $2.50 per hundred. All varieties are plentiful. Lawson, Enchantress, Estelle and any good white have the call. Poor stock is going to waste in big lots. Violets are all gone, none to be had at any of the wholesalers'. Sweet peas are coming in more plentifully and the chance is good for a big supply for Easter. The supply of Dutch bulbous stock is larger than ever. This stock is selling very slowly. Von Sions are down to $2 per hundred, with Harrisii and callas at your own price, tulips and Paper Whites also. Dutch hyacinths are a glut. Most of the growers think that this stock will be almost cut out by Easter.

The plant trade among the west end florists is reported good, all their show houses being filled with extra fine blooming stock, spiraeas, rhododendrons, hybrid roses, bulbous stock in pots and pans, and hydrangeas. Union Market stands are also showing blooming plants of all kinds. In this line business is reported as fine.

Various Notes.

Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., spent a few days with the trade the past week on his way home from Frisco. He reports a very successful trip.

George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., spent a day with us the past week.

C. Young & Sons Co. is making a great show of Harrisii lilies in full bloom at the downtown store. They report the plant and seed department very busy.

George Angermueller, the new wholesaler, reports satisfactory trade the first week, with plenty of good stock to supply the demand.

Henry Berning has been sick abed the past week. From last reports he was improving.

Charlie Kuehn and Frank Ellis report quite a lot of shipping orders in for Easter. Supply orders are also numerous.

The Florists' Club meeting this week Thursday promises to be well attended.

Carl Beyer has been laid up for ten days with a sprained leg. The lay-up cost Carl about twenty pounds of flesh.

The bowling league has closed and the florists who took part all had good averages. A. Y. Ellison, with 174, leads. Next in order is Beneke, 163; Kuehn, 162, and Carl Beyer, 160. They will now bowl every Monday night with the Florists' Club.

A. Jablonsky, at Wellston, has a fine supply of blooming Easter stock.

Henry Ostertag was all smiles after Tuesday's election. He says everything is coming his way. Business at his place he reports as fairly good during this Lenten season.

Quite a number of the florists served as judges during the election on last Tuesday. Among them were Chas. A. Juengel, C. C. Sanders, Theo. Miller, Will Kalisch, Robt. Beyer, George Windler and J. J. Beneke. The vote stands four democrats and three republicans.

H. Weber & Sons, C. C. Sanders and H. W. Schuette report heavy orders for tree planting.

J. H. Billington has sold his place on Easton avenue to Joe Hensel, who has a store at Taylor and Olive streets and will run both places. Mr. Billington will soon leave for Washington, where he has secured a position in the Agricultural Department.

Mrs. A. Berdan, wife of the well known florist at Kirkwood, has a very bad attack of paralysis. Mrs. Berdan is over 70 years of age and a complete recovery is very uncertain. Mr. Berdan, who is one of our oldest florists, has the sympathy of the trade.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Committee Meeting.

The executive committee of the Society of American Florists convened at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., on April 4. Vice-President J. R. Freeman, of Washington, presided over the several sessions in the absence of the president. The members of the executive committee present were H. B. Beatty, of Pittsburg, treasurer; W. J. Stewart, of Boston, secretary; Theodore Wirth, Hartford, Conn.; W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass.; E. V. Hallock, Queens, N. Y., and H. M. Altick, of Dayton, O. Retiring president Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, was also present, as were ex-Presidents Wm. R. Smith and Wm. F. Gude, of Washington. The latter is now president of the Washington Florists' Club and in general charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the society when it meets for its twenty-first time.

The committee selected August 15 to 18 as the dates for the convention. The opening session will take place on the afternoon of Tuesday and that evening will be given to the usual reception. Nomination of officers and the selection of a place of meeting for 1906 will occur on Wednesday and on Friday the election will take place. The fourth day will probably see the bowling contests. Arrangements were made with regard to the trade exhibit, which promises to be considerably the largest the society has ever seen, because of the convention being close to the cities in which those who have previously been the large exhibitors are doing business.

The executive committee was entertained at dinner at the New Willard on the evening of April 5, among the guests being several of the chiefs of staff at the Department of Agriculture.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—Wm. Fendley will build four houses 21x200, using the King Company's style of connected construction.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The conditions in the cut flower market are improving a little, with good prospects for the last fortnight of the month. Roses are plentiful and prices low but averaging a trifle better than a week ago. About the same conditions appear in the carnation centers. The expected advance is not likely to come before next week and then it is not likely to be as pronounced as usual. Single violets are about over. Doubles are expected to hold out until Easter, but it depends on the weather and in any event they will not be plentiful.

A goodly quantity of tulips and daffodils is sold, but at awfully low prices. The warm weather has brought lilies in that were intended for later. Callas are also too numerous at present. The novelties are some superb Dendrobium Jamesonii sent by Alphonse Pericat, the well known orchid specialist, to S. S. Pennock, and lavender sweet peas at E. Bernheimer's. The first cornflowers, blue and white, were at the Bellevue-Stratford, J. J. Habermehl's Sons. They came from S. S. Pennock.

Sharon Hill.

Competent judges believe that the largest stock of Easter lilies in or near Philadelphia this season is to be found at Robert Scott & Son's. Their stock of Japan-grown longiflorums is in fine condition, of good height, clean, with good foliage. The plants are graded and in different temperatures to secure uniformity in flowering for next week. Their stock of Crimson Ramblers is as handsome as could be desired, both in the large and medium sizes. The third section of the Easter division is composed of the hybrid roses in pots, Ulrich Brunner, Magna Charta and American Beauty. The latter is something of a novelty at this time. The plants are two years old, forced until the holidays, cut back, dug up and potted. They are now full of buds. Mr. Scott sold one firm 1,500 of these plants some time ago for spring sales. His attention had been drawn to the possibilities of the Beauty outdoors two years ago by a large bed at Willow Grove in full bloom in August.

The gardenia constitutes the fourth section, a fine lot of plants full of buds showing to advantage. Mr. Scott's ambition to be able to cut gardenias in quantity from Thanksgiving day until the end of the season seems rapidly nearing realization. Adiantum Croweanum is planted in two long narrow houses and is prized as a "doer." Beside it are some plants of its graceful taller growing sister, robust and vigorous.

Kaiserin Augusta Victoria is most prominent today among the forcing roses. There is a house for today full of bloom, a house for next week and a house for the week after, all in good shape. The one-year-old Kaiserins are staked but not so the two-year-olds. The old plan of using the space for some other crop in winter has been abandoned, the plants being rested where they are to flower. Liberty is being grown right along, instead of cropped for Easter as before. Beauty has done well. Grafted Brides and Maids are full of vigor. One large house is devoted to a fine lot of young roses and a number of smaller ones to miscellaneous plants, geraniums, chrysanthemums, etc.

Wm. F. Gude.

(President Washington Florists' Club.)

A new house mentioned in the REVIEW some weeks ago is well under way and it is expected will be completed in June. It is designed on the Briarelliff-Edgely ideas, at a carefully considered angle, 180x154 feet, of Lord & Burnham material, and will be planted with 5,000 Beauties. Most of the stock of this place is distributed by Samuel S. Pennock and Edward Reid.

Bowling.

Two teams of three players each recently contested a spirited series of the best three in five games for bowling supremacy. One team was composed of three brothers, Leo, Arthur A. and Frank Niessen. The players opposing them were Clarence J. Watson, Ralph G. Sheigley and John Wilson. The hand of victory on the compass score sheet turned from N. and pointed directly at W. S. W. Messrs. Watson, Sheigley and Wilson will be happy to bowl any trio of florists in the city.

Various Notes.

George Burton has sent the Leo Niessen Co. nearly 50,000 Meteors from a single house about 25x150 so far this season.

The Floral Exchange received first prizes for Queen of Edgely, Golden Gate and Ivory at the rose show.

Edward A. Stroud has a system of bookkeeping at the Strafford Flower Farm by which he can tell at any time just how each variety of carnation pays.

A prominent salesman on being asked who was the largest buyer of cut flowers in this city today, instantly replied, "Davis."

A well known wholesaler, on opening a consignment during the glut, found a slip marked: "These carnations must bring $3 a hundred straight." He replied: "Would not consider an offer below $5 a hundred."

Reading G. Palmer, the well known grower of Brides and Maids, has given up his place at Doylestown and retired from the ranks.

A. Farenwald, of Hillside, has two of the prettiest houses of Beauties one could wish to see. The plants have been cut back and are now a sheet of buds. The average is at least ten buds to each plant, borne on stout stems of medium length. The Liberties, which comprise five-sixths of the place, have maintained their owner's high standard throughout the season. They are still in good condition, producing a goodly number of "specials."

Hugh Graham has probably the finest lot of hyacinths offered for the Easter market.

William Warner Harper is making the name of the Andorra Nurseries popular all over the country.

M. Rice & Co.'s facilities are being taxed to their utmost getting their Easter orders off. They just received one of the largest importations of chiffon bands ever brought to this country.

John F. Andre, of Doylestown, has received six letters of inquiry regarding his new white rose, described in the REVIEW of March 16. Wait a little, gentlemen! Too much attention may spoil a youngster, even though he be a real sport.

One of the brightest of our visitors from Holland remarks that rebuilding greenhouses is bad for bulb sales. There's a fact in a nutshell.

Herbert Baker has been growing some good Beauties at J. Henry Bartram's.

Henry J. Faust, of Merion, has a very nice lot of lilies for Easter.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have a good thing in their twig nests, which the florists have been quick to appreciate. To all appearances their business has been extraordinarily heavy this Easter.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. experienced the largest day in the history of their seed house recently.

The Leo Niessen Co. expects to have enough lilies to meet the demand. They believe good carnations will be in fair supply.

A department store is offering American Beauties, rose plants, cut back, eyes just starting, at "two for a quarter." They are said to have come from Chicago.

Hugh Graham has one of the largest if not the largest stock of azaleas about this city.

William J. Baker is receiving fine white daisies from A. & G. Rosbach, of Pemberton, and white and yellow daisies from Theodore Edwards, of Bridge-ton, N. J.

Joseph I. Black's Sons, Heightstown, N. J., are sending some nice carnations to the Flower Market.

William J. Muth states that the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. will be strong in Kaisers for Easter. PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

A notable feature of the market this season is its resilience, an attribute with which it has never before been attributed and one which keeps the wholesalers on the alert that they be not caught napping by the change in either direction. Heretofore when the market was once down it staid there for some time, but this season there comes a depressing day, or series of them, and then the rebound comes with unexpected suddenness, stock cleans up and prices, if low, are at least stable. Such was the experience at the close of last week. Wednesday was one of the poorest days this season, with a large stock carried over, which Thursday did nothing to relieve, but on Friday from an almost breaking strain the market sprang back to a condition of fair activity.

This week started with reduced receipts, particularly in tea roses. There are still rather too many long Beauties for the legitimate demand, but the condition is not so bad as it was a week ago. Teas are a trifle soft and smaller. Some splendid Chatenay are offered. Liberty is not in so large supply.

There is not much let-up to the steady influx of carnations but the demand has taken all in sight at moderate prices the past few days. It has come so that the growers expect a low place in the middle of the week and in a measure regulate their shipments accordingly. Quality is very good.

There are fewer tulips but still the buckets of single whites obstruct the counters. The outdoor stock will be along soon; indeed, outdoor narcissi are now received so heavily that it is impossible to clean up one shipment before another arrives. Lilac is coming but is not good. Harrisii lilies are abundant and selling slowly. Callas continue a glut. Sweet peas are doing fairly well. Single violets are not often seen. Doubles show the lateness of the season. Valley has shortened in supply.

Green goods, especially smilax, are more plentiful but not in so large demand as a fortnight ago. For the first time in years the price of common ferns is weakening as Easter approaches.

Bulbous Stock.

The cooler weather of the past few days has been very welcome to the growers of bulbous stuff. Temperatures have been down to normal, or below, except on Sunday, which was hot, and Dutch bulbs have advanced but little, which has improved the prospect for an Easter supply. Stollery Bros. report hyacinths designed for Easter as having pretty much come into flower and been sold, but tulips are going to be all right. Sam Pearce also has a good supply of tulips in sight. With the Garfield Park people all bulb stock is pretty well over, but they have a good lot of lilies, hydrangeas and other subjects.

No May Moving.

It looks as though moving day would go by with no changes in the wholesale market. Available locations are hard to find, and although rents in the wholesale district are becoming a matter for serious consideration, none of the wholesalers feels like breaking away and going out of the locality so long recognized as the cut flower center of the west. Early in the year L. A. Roy interviewed a number of the wholesalers with regard to a florists' building. This is a project which has been up several times and which will go through when the right plan is presented. Mr. Roy has the Athenæum building, which is to be vacated May 1 and which he proposed to remodel for florists' purposes, making it up-to-date in every respect. The plan had several disadvantages. It is not so favorably located for transportation facilities, nor is it in a cheaper locality. Again, it is not large enough to accommodate all in the trade but Mr. Roy was told to come again when he had a larger structure and a location better suited to the needs of the trade.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling is a believer in publicity as applied to the cut flower business and he sees an evidence in its favor in the large number of new buyers who came in at once when word went out that the market was so heavily stocked that bargains were to be had on large lots of "our selection." He thinks that if wholesale prices of cut flowers were quoted in the daily papers, the same as of fruits and vegetables, the public would buy heavily when stock is cheap just as they now buy fruits when they see the prices are within their reach.

Bassett & Washburn have decided to put up a steel stack for their new central boiler plant. It is to be 150 feet high and eight feet six inches in diameter at the top. Steel costs a little more than brick but has several advantages and only one disadvantage, that it should be painted inside and out every year or two.

Harry Papworth, of New Orleans, has been in town this week. He is figuring on putting up a range of sixteen greenhouses for cut flowers in the Crescent City and has visited the big growers to study their plants and called on the builders to study their plans and estimates.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of Amling's, was called to Cincinnati Monday, with his family, by the death of his father.

The rule against flowers in the city council chamber was amended at the last meeting to permit of testimonials to the new mayor and city clerk. The display was not nearly so large as on some previous occasions, because flowers for aldermen were barred, but a good many big pieces were seen.

In spite of the very big glut of callas lately one grower says that he has taken 80 cents per plant off of his bench of callas. They brought good money for a long time early in the season.

Sol. Garland has a white sport of Enchantress of which he proposes to work up stock as fast as possible.

Jacob Schurer, 2291 Mozart street, was struck by a Lincoln avenue electric car one night last week and quite badly injured.

Wietor Bros. have become possessed of the desire to dabble in new roses and have ordered a lot of European novelties. One good one pays for a lot of disappointment.

Henry Philips, in Rogers Park, has eight houses in roses, only three varieties, Chatenay, Ivory and Maid. Of the former he is cutting some extra stock. He ships to E. H. Hunt.

The society columns of the daily papers are full of announcements of spring weddings and a good many orders for decorations after Easter are already booked by the leading retailers.

H. Bauske is sending the A. L. Randall Co. the first of a very fine crop of Liberties which he expects to see hold out for Easter.

Geo. F. Crabb was over from Grand Rapids last week taking Easter orders.

Carl Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., is counting on a visit to his old home in Pennsylvania after Easter to recuperate. He has not been feeling well for many weeks.

A. Dietsch, who has, as usual, spent the winter in Mexico, has started homeward by easy stages but will not reach Chicago much before June 1.

The greenhouse builders around Chicago are now nearly all using galvanized nails to guard against rust.

L. Baumann, the supply man, is planning a three months' European trip, combining business and a honeymoon.

C. H. Fisk is building some apartments above his store on the west side.

Regular Florists' Club meeting tonight.

WITH EASTER SO LATE Good Stock is sure to be in greater demand than ever before. There will be large supplies of low grade material and a lively hustle after good stock. Our supplies this season have been of a high quality throughout and are holding up finely in spite of the warm weather.

OUR GROWERS KNOW THEIR BUSINESS

We shall have plenty Brides and Maids; also Beauties and other roses, of a quality that will meet your approval. Carnations are off crop with some, but we can take care of the largest orders and send stock that was never beaten for so late a date. Our Lilies are of extra fine quality and we have enough for all.

We have large supplies of Smilax and Asparagus, long heavy strings, just the thing for Easter decorations. Plenty hardy Ferns for all demands.

Let us have your EASTER ORDER early, but don't hesitate to telegraph or telephone if you find yourself running short at the last moment. We can supply you.

The Market.

Cool weather the past week retarded spring planting, kept the cut flower market in a stagnant condition and piled the ice boxes and the wholesale stores with stock which at times was hard to move at any sacrifice. Stock is of excellent quality in all lines and the indications point to an abundant supply for Easter. It is probable that the present average of values will hold during the week, but will begin to improve by Saturday and gradually advance to reasonable figures by Easter.

Arbutus again disputes with violets the attention of the sidewalk merchants, and their number this year is legion. These buyers are now looked upon as a god-send by the overwhelmed wholesalers, who depend upon this class entirely for the cleaning up and closing out feature of their unique business. The south still sends its daffodils in shoals and lilacs next will crowd the local supply to the wall. It is a peaceful invasion from Dixie, but it conquers the home product and opens the eyes of the bulb growers around us.

Violets have completely lost prestige. The streets are blue with them, and so must be the men who grow them when returns of late come in; $1 per thousand looks high some mornings for the remnants of the night before. There may be hardly any violets for Easter.

Some fine valley is seen that calls for 4 cents, but there isn't much of it. Smilax is scarce and so is wild smilax. Roses have evidently decided to assert themselves, both as to quality and quantity, seldom finer and never more plentiful. Carnations are in the same boat.

The orchid men are not complaining except as to lack of supply. There will be a scarcity for Easter. The taste for orchids is spreading. All the big cities are sending for them and some of the little ones.

We look for no exorbitant prices for anything at Easter, no pickling and a good, fair, happy and paying experience for everyone, wholesaler and retailer, in every department of the business. It is certainly due after so poor a winter season.

Florists' Club Meeting.

About forty members were present at the club meeting Monday night, President Traendly in the chair. Prof. W. G. Johnson was elected a member of the club and Mr. Dreyer, Jr., proposed. An interesting discussion as to a change in the by-laws was participated in by many members.

The exhibit of blooming plants was one of the best ever seen in the club-rooms and met with the approbation of every member. Hearty votes of thanks were accorded the exhibitors. The committee on awards, through Chairman O'Mara, announced for the Hinode Co.'s exhibit of Crimson Ramblers a certificate of excellence for culture. Several grand plants were staged, one in the form of a basket, and two large bush plants.

Mr. Dupuy, of Whitestone, was accorded a certificate of excellence for culture on his ericas, acaecias, lilacs, marguerites, blue hydrangeas and Baby Ramblers. A certificate of merit was given for Crassula coccinea. Mr. Dupuy's whole display was of rare interest.

An award of merit for culture was given Thos. DeVoy & Son, of Poughkeepsie, for their new geranium, Telegraph, a fine specimen plant in an 8-inch pot having been brought to the meeting by Mr. DeVoy, Jr.

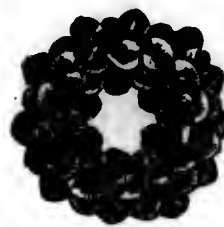

An award of excellence for culture was given Pankok & Schumacher, of Whitestone, for a magnificent specimen bougainvillea.

Mr. DeVoy spoke for Telegraph, saying that as a bedder and greenhouse plant in its class it had never been equaled. Notwithstanding the difficulty of carrying so large a plant it arrived in perfect condition. Mr. Dupuy gave a very interesting address concerning his extensive exhibit and at considerable length dilated upon the blue hydrangea, which he grows in soil imported for the purpose, and of crassula, which from one plant brought over from France six years ago he now has a stock of over 6,000.

President Traendly addressed the club on the exclusion of children from the greenhouses in Prospect park, Brooklyn, which he called an outrage and a committee was appointed to draw up a protest to the park authorities.

From the question box the first query was: "Why are carnation growers more progressive than rose growers?" C. W. Ward, who had been appointed by the president to address the club on the subject, was out of the city and made his reply by letter, in which he said in part that liberality, energy and determination were the chief characteristics of the carnation grower. The letter was full of humor and most interesting. A long discussion followed.

The second question, "Is floriculture as far advanced in the United States as in Europe," was answered in the negative by Jas. T. Scott, of Tarrytown, who read a most interesting paper on the subject.

The next session of the club, the second Monday evening in May, will be bedding plant night and under the supervision and coaching of John Birnie.

Various Notes.

Jos. Fenrich was married April 5 to the charming daughter of the veteran, Le Moul, of the Bowery, one of the pioneer retail florists of New York. It is a happy union of wholesale and retail interests. Capt. Fenrich is overwhelmed with congratulations.

David Clarke's Sons are already in shipshape for Easter, their six houses at Fordham Heights supplying them with blooming plants in abundance. Their big store is a bower of beauty. The La France rose is still a standby here.

Alex. J. Guttman reports many orders for cuttings of Carnation Victory. It grows in popularity. He will have several thousand violet plants as usual for Easter.

Ford Bros. have some grand marguerites and other plants in their new store for Easter and are preparing for a big shipping trade. Their new quarters please them greatly and will make a permanent home for a score of years.

Traendly & Schenck have had a banner year. Their claim holds good that never since their business began, except in sickness or absence from the city, have they failed to be on deck at 7 a. m.

James McManus has proven during the past year the value of enterprising advertising. He is known as the orchid king from Maine to California and is shipping cut orchids to every big city in the country.

James T. Hammond will have his usual supply of orange trees for Easter.

John J. Perkins is celebrating his thirty-third Easter in the cut flower business and bids fair to hold the fort for another generation.

Wm. Ghormley is receiving tremendous quantities of stock. The year has been a wonderful one in the aggregate. Few would care to count the number of flowers of every kind he handles in a season. He has fully recovered his health.

J. K. Allen grows younger as the Easters come and go. For a score of years 6 a. m. has found him at his post. I expect to write about him in 1950.

Reed & Keller are tremendously busy. They report the call for novelties more insistent than ever.

James Hart has the record, thirty-four years of wholesale cut flower business in New York. He ships to many out-of-town patrons who were on his books a quarter of a century ago. James Jr. is a fine lieutenant and popular.

N. Lecakes will soon be back from Athens with his Grecian bride. Meantime John Foley manages the combined interests with commendable ability.

Wm. H. Gunther is happy in the return of his brother, Jack, in time for the Easter trade.

The blooming plants at Charles Millang's hardly have time to get warm before they have to march out to fill New York retailers' orders and yet the big conservatory is always full. The cut flower department maintains its place, however, as usual.

The F. R. Pierson Co. is having a wonderful carnation season, the demand for their many superb novelties far exceeding their expectations. Their new fern, Tarrytown elegantissima, is now in the market and its beauty is universally acknowledged.

The Clucas & Boddington Co. reports a busy spring and the large warehouse is full of goods and workers. Mr. Clucas says the nursery gives promise of wonderful development and has a great future.

Henry A. Stone, the violet specialist of Kingston, was in the city Saturday. He has the largest violet house in this country, 25x250. Young & Nugent handle his shipments.

J. B. Nugent, Sr., celebrated his eighty-third birthday on Saturday evening, a large number of his friends in the trade joining in the reception. Mr. Nugent is still hale and hearty and enjoys the honor of being the oldest active florist in New York City if not in America.

A. C. Zvolanek, of Grand View, N. J., the sweet pea grower, visited his wholesaler, J. K. Allen, last week and consummated the christening of his new varieties, in which honor Mr. Allen and his faithful lieutenant were not forgotten.

Messrs. Welch and Edgar, the potentates from Boston, were also here, Arthur Cowee, the gladiolus grower, and Mr. Clements, one of Pittsburg's retailers.

Carl Jurgens, Jr., of Newport, passed through on his way to Washington, where he was married on Monday.

The Parker-Bruen Co. find the opening of their new office at 1133 Broadway a great convenience for themselves and their customers.

Schloss Bros. and Lion & Wertheimer report a big trade in Easter ribbons.

John Young will have 10,000 lily plants for Easter and, as usual, the Cottage Gardens output of carnations, Robert Craig holding the front of the procession.

The Geller Florists' Supply Co. has been incorporated and will open a store on West Twenty-ninth street shortly, with F. and S. Richards and C. Geller as directors and Sigmund Geller as manager. The Sigmund Geller stock was sold at auction last week.

At Miller's auction rooms last week ten shares of the Fleischman Co. were sold at $5 a share.

A small tornado visited Westfield, N. J., on Friday and in its path were the greenhouses of J. D. Woodruff, through two of which it cut an opening fifteen feet wide.

Quite a ripple in the retail sea came on Friday in the Barney-Alexander wedding, the most elaborate of the month. The Rosary and Thorley did the church and home decorations.

The retail stores are already beautiful with the profusion of Easter stock. There is one thing sure. If ever there was a plant Easter this one will be pre-eminent, and never was there a grander supply to select from than is afforded by the skilled plantmen in and around New York. Hardly a thing of value in bloom has been left unsold. Lilies are still a problem, so much depending on the weather and the supply. The top price seems fixed at 12 cents.

R. Dreyer's new plant between Woodside and Corona already covers 25,000 square feet and is yet in its infancy. In the center of twenty acres of splendid land, only four miles from Thirty-fourth street ferry, there is no telling where this enterprise will end. The stock of Easter plants here and at Woodside, in the old place, is enormous.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are again receiving fine Queen of Edgely roses.

Only four bowlers showed up for practice last Monday. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There was some improvement in business the past week and the cooler weather cut down the supply slightly. Carnations seem to have shortened up considerably and today, Monday, there seems to be a shortage.

Heavy Hail.

We had a severe hail storm Monday which seems to have covered this whole section and did a great deal of damage. It sounds like a big story but the hail looked like snowballs when they broke on the ground. Most of our greenhouse men suffered some loss. A. W. Smith lost about 4,000 lights. Geddis & Blind Brothers lost most of the glass in a 100-foot house attached to their south side store. At Schenley conservatories about one-fifth of the glass is gone, with some damage to the Easter flower show. Randolph & McClements report about 6,000 lights gone in the Forbes street houses and some in the Highland avenue houses. John Bader reports a slight loss. Among the private places hit are those of H. C. Frick and A. R. Peacock. It was the worst storm since May, 1893, when a number of our people were wiped out of existence. E. C. Reineman lost all of his glass at that time.

Various Notes.

One of Mr. Burki's drivers was too close to a post that was struck by lightning the morning of the storm and the horses and driver were knocked down, but excepting the shock were not injured.

The Florists' Club met last Tuesday evening; subject for discussion, Easter plants. It was a very interesting meeting. H. Blind & Brothers had pans of tulips and some other Easter plant arrangements which were very attractive. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, made a grand display of baskets and Easter novelties which attracted considerable attention. The Valley Greenhouse Co. had some very fine pot lilies. John Bader had a specially fine display of azaleas. Supt. Geo. Burke, of Schenley park, sent in a grand display of bulbous stock which covered one entire side of the hall. Our club meetings are very well attended and every meeting is an interesting one. Members who cannot find time to attend anything but the smokers and social affairs are missing much and are liable to get behind the times.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, which has been located on the second floor at 228 Diamond street, has leased the entire building and has remodeled the street floor for its occupancy. They have built a new and very large refrigerator.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. reports a good call for green goods, which are none too plentiful in this market at present. Hoo-Hoo.

GERANIUMS.

I have a greenhouse 22x60 running northeast and southwest, built three-quarters span, long side facing south-east, size glass 16x24. In the house we have some geraniums which up to the first of March were doing well. Then the leaves began to fade and the plants all run to flower, making no leaf growth whatever. When they began to go back I gave the glass a light shading with whitewash, so they got very little bright sun. They have not changed much and I do not understand why they do not grow. I put them in different kinds of soil, so I do not think that has anything to do with it. The house is heated by a Furnam boiler (hot water) and I have run the house at about 55 degrees night temperature. If from what I have written you can tell me wherein the trouble lies and how I can grow geraniums in a house like this I would be greatly obliged.

S. W. P.

It is not easy to say just what is the matter with your zonal geraniums. Your greenhouse as described would grow anything. We do know, however, that you are or have been keeping them too warm at night. Forty-five degrees is high enough for winter nights. Now, when you can leave on ventilation at night, it may be 50 to 55 degrees. The shading is all wrong, especially so early in the season. Bedding zonal geraniums should now begin. 3½ or 4-inch pots need no shade whatever and all the ventilation you can give them.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held on April 7. There was the usual floral display and William Read, head gardener to the Colgates, read a paper on "Herbaceous Perennials for the Open Border," which impressed his hearers so favorably that it was decided by the society to publish it in its transactions for the year. Two new members were elected and M. J. McKernan was made an honorary member.

The retirement was noted of John Farrell, gardener for William Barr for thirty years, a gardener for fifty and an honorary member of this society. Mr. Farrell has received between seventy and eighty first certificates during this time.

THE GLASS MARKET.

A New York report says that while the glass market is only moderately active, it is in a strong position which indicates that there will be no surplus glass after the present fire. This is at variance with reports in Chicago. Glass prices, which usually advance as spring and the end of the fire approach, are this year showing still further recession in April. Glass is cheaper now than it was two weeks ago and there is no immediate prospect of an advance. There are large supplies of greenhouse sizes, the only exception being 20-inch glass, which is worth a little more money.

One report says the cause of the present weakness of the market is a story to the effect that the American Window Glass Co., commonly called the trust, has its glass blowing machine now perfected and making window glass in greenhouse sizes. At first the machines only made the 8x12 and 10x12 sizes, but they are steadily making larger glass. It is reported that with the machines glass production will continue all summer, an extra price being paid to the flatteners and cutters to keep the factories running. If this is true not only may cheap glass be looked for this summer, but cheaper glass in years to come.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1905.

PRICES on Paper Whites in France are expected to be a shade easier this fall.

CALIFORNIA has not in years been so well cleaned up on seed stocks as at present.

CALADIUMS have moved out at a great rate the past fortnight and many stocks are well cleaned up.

ARNOLD RINGIER, of W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, has returned from a trip to the Pacific coast.

THE Vegetable Growers' Association of Ontario was organized March 25. W. C. Emory, of Aldershot, is president.

THE mail order seed houses report business to date well ahead of last year, but the season is fully three weeks early.

THE Vilmorins of Paris, and Jas. H. Veitch, of London, were elected honorary members of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society April 1.

STOCK seed of peas and beans are now being forwarded to the growing points. Contracting with the farmers is about completed and the sowing of peas will soon begin.

IN Great Britain the pharmacy act against the sale of poisons is held to apply to insecticides containing nicotine or other poisons and leading seed houses have recently been fined for violations.

THERE is no end to the sale of onion seed, and no beginning to the sale of seed potatoes. Onions will be low next year and potatoes high. There is yet time for the wise grower to get in line.

SEED for onion sets is going into the ground rapidly in the vicinity of Chicago. It looks at present as though the work of sowing will be finished this year earlier than the date at which it was begun last season.

It is said that Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, a general mail order house, contemplate securing properly equipped greenhouses and grounds in order to add plants and nursery stock to their seed department the coming year.

THE Leonard Seed Co. reports the market garden trade at Chicago far ahead of last year. It began with a rush about the middle of January and has continued unusually brisk up to the present, with no apparent falling off in sight.

A SEEDSMAN who reads books during his vacation says: "Counter trade suffers during the cool days that work themselves in between the bright warm ones in the springtime, but the lull occasioned by this is to the seedsman as the oasis is to the traveler in the desert."

A GROWING field for the seedsman catering to market gardeners is in southern Texas. J. K. Robertson says it is a safe prophesy that within a season or two the Beeville section alone will ship north during the season solid cars of onions, radishes, beets, lettuce, turnips, spinach and other "bunch" crops.

REPORTS from all sections up to date show business considerably ahead of last year. The phenomenal trade during the last half of March is given credit for this.

THE onion set jobbers report sales at the tail end of the season as active as at the beginning. Two weeks ago we intimated in this column that the effort to clean up at the more southern centers had a tendency to lower prices somewhat. The steady demand, however, kept the bottom from falling out and the prices have rested at $2 per bushel for red and yellow, and $2.50 for whites.

A NOTICEABLE feature in the trade this year is the great increase in the Canadian demand for onion sets.

De Giorgi Brothers, 81 Dearborn avenue, Chicago, is a new seed firm. They aim to reach the Bohemian farmers of the central and northwestern states. They issue their catalogue in the Bohemian language and report that the venture is meeting with much success, the only drawback being inability to keep up with the orders, many of which call for seed miscellanies not usually carried in quantity on this side of the ocean.

It is a general report that gladioli have been in stronger demand than usual this spring. The same report comes from Holland.

SEED jobbers generally report the shelves emptier than they have been at this time of the year for many seasons. The smaller dealers throughout the country, it is reported, are still passing in their orders for supplies. In a general way it seems as though 1905 should be a satisfactory year for all concerned.

CALIFORNIA SEED INDUSTRY.

According to figures of the Riverside, Cal., Enterprise, the area devoted to seed growing in Santa Clara, San Joaquin and Sacramento counties is 14,500 acres. The average annual return is put at $3,000,000. The same authority says that the cost per acre of growing onion seed is from $90 to $100. At one point there are

CABBAGE SEEDS.

Those who grow cabbages for seeds find it very necessary to exercise the greatest care to keep the types distinct, so that the crops may be uniform in character. If selections of seed parents are not made with the greatest care every year, the types lose their individuality, and degenerate; they come leafy and devoid of close, firm hearts. Cabbage seeds having to be grown in very large quantities, if the seed plants are not very carefully selected, there would naturally result deterioration and a mixture of characters; then there would be different forms, not so much as a result of insect fertilization as a result of natural deterioration. It is therefore very important that a growing crop for seed be carefully inspected on two or three occasions, and all inferior cabbages taken out, even if it should lead to the destruction of one-half of the crop in order to secure a uniform type of the best character. It is found in practice that the roughest cabbages produce the greatest amount of seeds, which is an additional reason for eliminating them from the crop. According to Richard Dean, in the Horticultural Trade Journal, the produce of cabbage seeds may range from five hundredweights to ten hundredweights per acre according to the season.

ITALIAN SEEDS.

An Italian correspondent of the Gardeners' Chronicle sends the following from Naples:

Since the middle of November there has been a succession of hard frosts almost without intermission, and owing to their unusual severity during the past months they have caused great damage even to the less delicate plants.

Cauliflower.—The breadth put out for seed-supply have specially suffered, and it is anticipated that not more than a fourth of the plants will yield seed.

Onion.—English seedsmen are so much dependent upon Italian growers for the Tripoli and Improved Silver-skinned types, that they will regret to learn that the crop will be short all around.

Garden Besna.—Here again will be a great shortage of crop, and no hope of improvement.

Flower Seeds.—The autumn sowing of these has suffered severely, and any quotations of prices which may be made are for prompt orders, but without any guarantee as to the quantities to be supplied.

FISCHER'S GRAND FREESIA PURITY.

A magnificent, snowy, glistening white, of very large size and great length and strength of stem: a dozen sprays making as fine a showing as a dozen large white carnations, and can be used wherever carnations can be used for decorative purposes. A truss bears from eight to eleven buds, of which six are frequently open at one time, making an immense flower. It is of great substance and bears shipping without bruising. Stems can be cut two feet long and are as rigid as sticks. It is very prolific in bloom, producing three to four side shoots of eight buds each besides the main flower. Bulbs no bigger than dried wax beans produce as large a flower as the largest bulb, only the stems are shorter. It propagates very freely, producing from four to eight bulbs, all of which will flower the next year.

All growers of freesia should try this queen of freesia for when once grown you will want no other.

Price for large bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

Discount on 5000 and over.

BURPEE'S "Fordhook Finest" Lawn Grass AT ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

The Only Gold Medal for Lawn Grass at St. Louis World's Fair was awarded to us for the lawns produced from BURPEE'S 'FORDHOOK FINEST' LAWN GRASS. This is the HIGHEST AWARD POSSIBLE. The seed from which these lawns were produced was EXACTLY THE SAME 'PRESCRIPTION' AND QUALITY as supplied regularly to our trade. If you would have the best lawn it is possible to produce you should order this UNEQUALED 'GOLD MEDAL' MIXTURE. 35c per lb. box, postpaid. By express or freight, 20c per lb.; 25 lbs. or more at 18c per lb. It is the cleanest and heaviest seed on the market; WEIGHS 25 TO 27 LBS. PER MEASURED BUSHEL.

A GRAND PRIZE for Vegetables at ST. LOUIS was won by the products of Burpee's "Seeds that Grow"

If you Garden you want the BEST, and we shall be pleased to mail you Burpee's Farm Annual for 1905—an elegant new book of 178 PAGES, which tells the plain truth, with hundreds of illustrations, beautiful colored plates and describes SUPERB NOVELTIES of unusual merit.

Florists and Market Gardeners should ask also for Burpee's Blue List

This is mailed only to those who "plant for profit" and is the most complete of Wholesale Catalogues. Elegantly printed with photogravure illustrations, it is A BOOK OF 104 PAGES and gives practical information about all the BEST SEEDS THAT GROW! Unlike most seedsmen we are actual GROWERS of seeds, having our own farms in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, supplemented by private contracts throughout America and Europe, subject also to our careful personal inspection. A postal card will do, while it is sufficient to address simply PEONY TESTS.

At its last meeting the American Peony Society arranged for a test of varieties in co-operation with Cornell University. A circular was issued, and printed in the REVIEW at the time, inviting growers to send plants, the committee in charge consisting of John Craig, C. J. Maloy, John A. Charlton, J. F. Rosenfield and A. H. Fewkes. The following numbers of plants were received:

A. Dessert, Chenonceaux, France.....200
De Graff Bros., Leyden, Holland.....124
Cronx Bros., Chateaux, France.....78
L. Paillet, Chateaux, France.....189
L. Van Leeuwen, Sassenheim, Holland.....43

A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.....36

The committee now sends out the following report of its work to date:

"Your committee is pleased to state that an excellent beginning in the important study outlined above has been made. Soon after the announcement was issued, a brisk correspondence sprang up with peony growers regarding the scope and purpose of this comprehensive study. This resulted in securing, before cold weather arrived, a fine collection of plants—probably one of the largest ever got together, as will be seen from the list below. The work has been materially aided by European peony growers who have become interested in the enterprise mainly through the good offices of President C. W. Ward, who has labored both indefatigably and effectively in the cause.

The field chosen is a short distance from the site of the new State College of Agriculture. It is about five hundred feet above Lake Cayuga and slopes gently to the south, being protected by an elevated bluff and wooded land to the north. The soil is a light clay loam, as nearly uniform as it was possible to secure.

As each consignment arrived it was unpacked, the roots of the varieties described, classified alphabetically, and planted as promptly as possible. The first alphabetical scheme was soon filled up, and another one started. Had it been possible to secure the plants all at one time, a well systematized plan might have been carried out. However, the present arrangement will simply give the peony student a little more work. The plants were set, with crowns two inches below the surface, in rows four feet apart and three feet apart in the row.

As the roots were set, a planting record was made and a temporary wooden label assigned to each plant. Before freezing, the rows were covered with a mulch of mucky soil or stable manure. When the supply of the latter gave out, the muck was used. So far as one can tell by early spring examination, the roots have wintered well.

Intending contributors should forward consignments promptly so that the plants set this spring may be placed on terms as even as possible with those set last fall.

The committee is most grateful for the hearty

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[Another Hardy Garden Book, by Helena Rutherford Ely; the Macmillan Co., New York.]

Prompted no doubt by the success which attended her first venture into the fast developing field of gardening literature, Mrs. Ely has written "Another Hardy Garden Book" for the Macmillans. The title is something of a misnomer, as many of the things touched upon would have no place in a hardy garden, but both the author and the publisher may be pardoned for the desire to reap the advantage of a previous success. And then, the present work is supplementary of the first, taking up subjects there neglected.

In her preface Mrs. Ely says that she gives only the result of her own experiences in raising vegetables, fruits and flowers, and concludes by saying that "if it gives any help to those who are already cultivating their own gardens, or causes others to make a beginning in the fascinating art, its object will have been accomplished." If the book does either of these things, it is worthy of a good word by every one who is interested in a business way in extending the ancient art of gardening.

In the introduction the author calls attention to a discovery her own: "Most men who care for gardening devote themselves rather to the utilitarian side of the craft. They are deeply interested and generally successful in producing the finest vegetables and fruits, while flowers come as a secondary consideration. A woman's heart in gardening is with her flowers and the raising of vegetables is often a propitiatory offering to the other members of the family." Possibly it is as a propitiatory offering to the other sex that Mrs. Ely devotes the first chapter of her present volume to the vegetable garden.

Other chapters deal with fruits, trees, perennials and other flowers, a garden of lilies and irises, autumn work in the flower garden and the flower garden in spring. There are half a hundred half-tone illustrations and something of interest on every page of the book.

DETROIT, MICH.—George W. Davis, who left home about a year ago while hard pressed by creditors, has returned. Mrs. Davis has run the business during his absence and it did not lose anything by the change.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

BUFFALO.

Various Notes.

Cool, dry weather has been the order of things for the last ten days and that probably suits the large majority of florists. It is an early spring, however, and thirty large steamers sailed from our docks within a few days laden with anthracite to fill the coal bins of Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth and other rural western towns.

I promised myself a ride in my Packard to interview the various firms regarding their Easter prospects, but to tell the truth (?) it has been so calm of late there was not wind enough to fill the tires so we had to hoof it. We found Mr. Schoenhut, the busy east side florist, with his houses filled up with azaleas, lilies and hybrid roses right in the nick of time. Their able manager, Karl Risch, is all there every day in the year. Schwerdt & Berner, of The Forks, Erie Co., have succeeded in getting a fine lot of giganteum lilies up to thirty inches high. W. J. Palmer & Son, of Lancaster, have a grand assortment of every seasonable plant. Particularly fine are 1,000 azaleas held back until they are just right. S. A. Anderson prides himself on a splendid lot of lilies and azaleas. J. H. Rebstock is abundantly fixed for good stock and making a lead on hybrid roses. Wm. Belsey is strong on Rambler roses and rhododendrons.

The Wm. Scott Co. has its usual assortment. We found Aleck watering pansy beds to get them fit for vase filling, William B. scheming to keep back azaleas already in full flower, David contemplating how to make his Bridesmaid buds larger and Robert A. figuring up what they owe and were owed. C. F. Christenson has dropped Easter plants almost entirely, devoting his houses to carnations, followed by unequaled growing of bedding plants. "Yes, my dear boy, come and look at my bench of mignonette. Have you had your snooser this morning?" His mignonette is grand and he will cut thousands at Easter and this is the third crop from the plants. From others we hear good accounts and there will be no lack of good stuff to meet what the writer believes will be a record-breaking demand.

The bright Harry Bunyard called last week and says business with Mr. Bodington is great. Hope it is, for Arthur and Harry are a good combination.

Death of Donald McMillan Newlands.

Buffalo last week lost one of its brightest and best young men, Donald McMillan Newlands. By profession he was a civil engineer, but through poor health had to retire from the services of railroads and a few years ago returned home to relieve his mother of the care of her growing business. They had four houses on West Delavan avenue, opposite the principal entrance to Buffalo city cemetery, better known as Forest Lawn. It is impossible for the writer to speak too highly of the character of young Mr. Newlands. He was respected and honored by every soul who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. Although lacking the early training of a florist, his integrity and natural ability would have been followed by increasing success, but it was not to be and he was carried away at the early age of 32 years.

Donald was a nephew of the lamented Wm. McMillan, so many years Buffalo's park superintendent, who had a national fame. There was a very large attendance of florists at the funeral and poor Donald rests in beautiful Forest Lawn. We must not question the ways of the Divine author, yet it seems that some of us old chaps could better be spared than this estimable young life. W. S.

LEBANON, PA.—C. C. Yost will build another house 30x50.

PACIFIC COAST.

FRUITVALE, CAL.—The Lacy Co. is putting in a stock of orchids for cut flowers.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.—C. W. Philips has the contract for improving the park at Waitsburg.

PORTLAND, ORE.—George Otten has contributed an article on annuals to the Sunday Oregonian which was good advertising for the trade.

PORTLAND, ORE.—J. J. Butzer says that this season has been a record breaker for his business and that he is looking for a larger store. The bedding season is just beginning. The Lewis and Clark Exposition promises to draw a great many people here this summer.

LOS ANGELES.

The annual floral festival at the end of March attracted a great many visitors to this city and did something in the way of increasing the sales of the florists. Flowers were used in great profusion at the festival, many of the booths being decorated with them and thousands upon thousands of carnations were sent in from Ocean Park.

THE PLANT HOSPITAL.

One of the many vexations with which the retail florist has to worry is the care of sick plants. The general mass of the plant-buying public has an idea that all that is necessary to do to a sick or half-dead pot plant, or one that is out of bloom for the season, is to bring it in to the florist who is unfortunate enough to own a greenhouse and if he will but put it in among his collections it will speedily recover and be as good as ever in a week or two. The florist of course hates to tell his customer that the plant is all but dead and the easiest way to solve the difficulty is to throw it on the scrap pile. If he does get courage enough to give the lady the straight tip she will say: "Well, I bought that plant from you two weeks ago and you told me it was all right. I have taken good care of it but it must have been sick at the time, as it never seemed to look healthy after I took it home."

If the florist should mildly remonstrate with her and call her attention to the fact that probably she did not remember to water it regularly, or it stood in a jardiniere of water without any drainage, or it was kept completely away from air and sunlight, or there was too much gas in the room, or any other cause for its sickly appearance, which in many cases is very easy to discover, he generally gets himself in trouble, as the lady invariably tells him she took entire care of the plant herself and observed all the rules regarding its good health. The upshot of the entire proposition is that the poor florist keeps the plant and the lady tells him she will call in a couple of weeks and take the rejuvenated specimen home.

Generally with a muttered curse the poor florist takes the freak plant and puts it in his greenhouse and notes the fact that he already has several dozen in various degrees of decrepitude left there by his many customers for their resuscitation:

Kentia palms with only a part of a leaf left, aspidistras well scissored at the ends, latanias much the worse for abuse, and various varieties of ferns the fronds of which are noticeable by their absence. All of these have small tags in the pots denoting from whom they were received and generally the date as well.

In a couple of weeks my lady telephones and asks the florist to send up her plants, as she wants to use them for an afternoon tea and as they have been there several weeks already they must be almost as good as when she first received them. If she be a good customer the florist generally sends her good plants to replace the others and the next day she often telephones and thanks him for being such a clever plantsman and further wounds his sensitive feelings by telling him that she knew that all that was necessary to have the plants revived thoroughly was to leave them for a few days with a man who thoroughly understood his business.

One of the larger retailers in San Francisco who has a good trade among our wealthy ladies, has a small greenhouse set aside over the door of which he has a sign on which is painted the word "Hospital." It is almost entirely filled with all sorts of mistreated and maltreated plant life. He makes a small charge for keeping the plants and finds that it pays him very well. The ladies to whom the various articles belong often ask to see their plants and it is a good object lesson for them and calls to their attention the fact that it is easier to put a plant out of commission in two weeks than it is to restore it to anything like its former beauty in two years. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Notwithstanding we are yet in the midst of the Lenten season business continues very fair, although not quite as brisk as it was last week. Flowers of all kinds have become a shade more plentiful, although the price remains stationary, as it undoubtedly will for a couple of weeks more. I do not think there will be any scarcity of Easter lilies this year, but the majority of the benches I have seen appear to be coming rather weak and short and as a consequence we are going to have a great amount of second quality flowers. Valley is in good supply but all other kinds of bulbous stock is out of season. Outside flowers are becoming more plentiful daily and before long will be a factor in the business.

Various Notes.

Domoto Bros. have handled a large quantity of tree peony flowers this season.

Elaborate preparations are being made to make the approaching flower show of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society the greatest in the history of the organization. It will open on May 5. Among the many exhibitors will be Sydney Clack, M. Lynch, P. C. Meyer, Jas. L. Flood, Timothy Hopkins, Joseph A.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

THE nurserymen are strong on Crim-son Rambler rose.

STOCKS of two-year cherry trees are reported as not large.

THERE are many surplus offers of June budded peach for lining out.

THE Pleasant Grove Nurseries, Pleasant Grove, Ill., are going out of business.

THE importations of European nursery stock have been coming to hand in first-class condition this season.

THE Huntsville Wholesale Nursery reports the sale of 270,000 Kieffer pear two years old, in the fall of 1904 and spring of 1905.

A PLANTER recently asked seven representative nurseries to recommend eight roses and in every reply Mrs. John Laing headed the list.

THERE is a revival in interest in the Spitzenberg apple. It is not a good grower and it is recommended that it be top worked on vigorous stocks.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has published C. L. Marlatt's report on the gypsy moth, the result of investigations near Boston, as circular No. 58, Bureau of Entomology.

W. W. LILLEY has bought a tract of land at Hankinson, N. D., and will do business as the Lilley Nursery Co. He will plant considerable stock this season and put a number of agents on the road next fall.

OF all good apples for winter market few are equal to the Rhode Island Greening but the real article is becoming scarcer each year and the average nursery would have hard work to supply a hundred three-quarter inch trees to a planter.

THOSE who decry the use of the Carolina poplar should inspect the row of trees along Stony Island avenue, Chicago, planted as a part of the work of restoration after the World's Fair. They have reached a foot in caliper and are splendid specimens of a very useful tree.

THE second annual report of the park commissioners of Lowell, Mass., is a most interesting volume. Besides park statistics it gives half-tone views to show the great damage done by linemen and by neglect to the fine old elms of that city. By act of legislature the street trees have been placed under the care of the park officials.

IT is proposed to invite the American Association of Nurserymen, at its West Baden meeting, to wrestle with the question of uniform grading of nursery stock. The Society of American Florists had the same question as applied to plants before it at St. Louis last summer, but declined to tackle so large a job. However, with many kinds of nursery stock the point to be defined is nothing more than where to apply the calipers.

HARDY ROSES IN ILLINOIS.

What hardy roses in red, white and pink are recommended for the climate of Illinois? We are often asked this question by those who wish such plants for the cemetery, etc. They want varieties that will live and bloom with little attention. Is April the month for putting out when we have them in pots? C. M. B.

I have grown the following varieties year after year in this climate with much success: Pink, Mrs. John Laing, Baroness Rothschild, Magna Charta and Mrs. R. G. Sharman-Crawford. Red, Alfred Colomb, General Jacqueminot, Ulrich Brunner and Marshall P. Wilder. White, Merveille de Lyon, Mme. Plantier and Mabel Morrison. Rose, John Hopper, Anne de Diesbach and Paul Neyron.

While the above are quite hardy anywhere in Illinois, a little covering of leaves or other suitable material during the winter months is recommended. There are perhaps thirty or forty equally hardy varieties, but those enumerated are among the best. In order to secure an abundance of bloom, prune these roses down to three or four eyes, as soon as the severe frosts are over in the spring.

About May 5 is a good time to set out roses that have been kept in pots in the greenhouse. E. A. KANST.

THE NURSERYMAN LANDSCAPER

A great many of the large retail nurseries have in recent years added landscape departments and found them valuable in many features of their business. In an address before the Chicago Architectural Club Howard E. Weed, a landscape architect, paid his compliments to the nurserymen landscapers, as follows:

"It is unfortunate that there are at the present time so many men engaged in the work of planting trees and shrubs who are entirely without training and whose knowledge of nursery stock is limited to the names of a few flowers. These gardeners can necessarily see no professional side to their work. Lacking any artistic training or appreciation of the beautiful, they look upon their work simply as a business proposition. Too often this may be said of nurserymen who attempt to do landscape work. The time is coming when a discriminating public will be very careful into whose hands they place the making of their surrounding landscape. The average estate owner knows practically nothing about trees and shrubs and has no means of knowing whether his landscape architect is giving him his money's worth or 'holding him up.'"

"The nursery stock is ordered by the landscape architect, generally from various nurseries, depending upon where the best stock of the different varieties can be obtained for the money. The landscape architect should make it his business to keep in touch with the stock of all the nurseries, paying each an annual visit. In this way he is able to save his clients considerable in the purchase of the nursery stock and especially to guard against the shipment of small or poorly grown stock."

MT. VERNON, IND.—Wm. Kirkham, of Chicago, has rented a place here and started in business on his own account.

OMAHA, NEB.—N. O. Ward, formerly with the Union Pacific, has resigned to devote all his attention to his plant business at 717 Cook avenue. He will do both a wholesale and retail trade.

SHENANDOAH IA.—The Stevens greenhouses made an exhibit of dahlias at the St. Louis World's Fair and as a result have just shipped an order for $150 worth of roots to a florist in New Jersey.

THE COAL MARKET.

April is usually too busy a month for the florist for him to give any attention to so remote a necessity as his next season's coal supply. Still it is the month when the forehanders are able to save considerable money. Coal prices are usually at the lowest level during the month of April and steadily rise from that time until mid-winter. This year is no exception to the rule and April finds the open market affording bargains to those who are prepared to take in and pay for quantities. The bituminous coal mines of the middle west have had a poor season. There has been a surplus in the steam coal grades most of the winter and business in many cases has not been heavy enough to keep the mines running full time. With the summer season coming on nearly all jobbers are anxious to do business.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Nic Beckley has succeeded to the business of his uncle, Chris Lichtmann.

HOUSTON, TEX.—T. F. Hudson had a very successful opening of his new store at 4617 Washington street, April 7.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Henry Smith is quoted as saying that locally, at least, cut flowers will be plentiful for Easter.

Introduction 1905

There is nothing in the fern line that is as handsome as this beautiful fern when well grown. It is a wonderful improvement over Nephrolepis Piersoni in every respect both in regard to beauty and habit of growth. It is a sport from the Pierson Fern (Nephrolepis Piersoni), but it is very much more beautiful and of greater value. It is as different from the Pierson Fern as that is from the Boston. The small side pinnae are again subdivided, producing an exquisite and beautiful effect, changing the entire character of the fronds, which measure less than half the length and about twice the breadth of the fronds of the Pierson Fern. The fronds also assume an entirely different form, the side pinnae standing at right angles to the mid-rib of the frond, on edge rather than flat, as is usual, making both sides of the frond equally beautiful—entirely different from any other fern. The Plant is very dwarf, only about half the height of the Pierson Fern, and of very much more compact habit. Taking it altogether it makes one of the most exquisite plants and one of the most valuable for table and house decoration that has ever been introduced. The cut fronds, on account of their beauty, will be in great demand for table decoration. Well-grown plants make most magnificent specimens.

Prices: 2¼-inch pots, $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 60c each; 100 at 50c each; 500 at 45c each; 1000 at 40c each.

LARGE PLANTS -- 5-inch pots, $18.00 per doz.; 6-inch pots, $24.00 per doz.; 8-inch pots, $36.00 per doz.; 10-inch pots, $60.00 per doz.

The Market.

Market conditions have changed decidedly since last week, and greatly for the better. A decided lowering of the temperature, together with rains, put a check on stock and the market quickly went back to normal and some lines were short of demand.

With the decrease in the supply of stock, prices and trade increased in proportion and everything is moving along very satisfactorily. Beauties suffered the largest decrease and prices raised to normal. Other varieties of roses are just about equal to the demand. There is a brisk demand for carnations and the price steadied a good deal. There were very few job lots and Saturday found all the wholesale houses cleared out. Bulbous stock goes much better and at advanced prices. Lilies were shy at times. Good Dutch hyacinths sell best. There is a good demand for outdoor jonquils which continue to come in by the thousands.

Violets from Virginia continue to arrive in large numbers and of good quality but the sale for them is slow, as they are devoid of fragrance. Smilax sells well, as do all kinds of green goods. Asparagus of all kinds is scarce.

Various Notes.

Saturday was the regular meeting night of the Florists' Society but as no quorum was present the meeting was not held. All the growers were so busy hustling spring stock and getting ready for Easter that they could scarcely spare the time to attend the meeting.

C. L. Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn., was a visitor. He is making a tour of some of the northern flower centers.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of Amling's, Chicago, is here, called by the death of his father. C. J. OHMER.

ORDERS BY WIRE.

The advertisement in the REVIEW sold all my rose stock by wire the first day.—JAS. C. MURRAY, Peoria, Ill.

Please discontinue my advertisement of ferns; one insertion did the business. Before my own paper came from the office a telegram arrived, saying, "Hold Boston ferns for me; check on the way." So I had my money just four days from the time I penned the advertisement. That's good enough for me.—T. G. YALE, Wellington, O.

We find the REVIEW very satisfactory and would not want to be without it.—A. MASSEY, Elmhurst, Cal.

Red Sport CARNATION.

The great "bread and butter" Holly berry red

Early and continuous, sure crop for Christmas, never splits, strong healthy grower, 2½ to 3-inch flower on very long, stems that well support the bloom, an easy doer and an all-round money-maker. 'Nough said.

Price for immediate delivery, 12 for $1.50; 25 for $2.50; 50 for $4.00, all pots paid. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Queen Louise, the standard white, strong, healthy, well rooted, $1.25 per 100, postpaid, $10.00 per 1000.

COMPOST FLOWER POT MACHINE

Every grower knows the difficulty of transferring from pot to ground of cuttings or slips. growth is checked and young plants suffer and sometimes succumb entirely by the disturbance of the roots and abrupt change of soil.

OUR COMPOST FLOWER POTS OVERCOME THESE DIFFICULTIES.

They are put directly into the ground without touching the young plants in them. Pots are made of common garden soil and cow manure, dried in the open air under sheds, after which they become hard and strong, able to stand handling and watering.

SIMPLE, PRACTICAL, INVALUABLE.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The past week has been one of more than usual activity with the trade. Roses, carnations and bulbous stock are coming in large quantities, but are moving along in good shape, as very little stock is left over. American Beauties are looking good. Kaiserins are looking fine. Perles are not up to standard, while Brides and Maids are first-class. There are some very fine Lawson, Boston Market, Lady Bountiful, Mrs. Bradt and Enchantress carnations, which are bringing good prices. Calla lilies, Harrisii, hyacinths, tulips, jonquils, narcissi and Von Sions are selling well. Valley and violets are very scarce and command big prices. Plant stuff at present outlook will be scarce for Easter, and the indications point to an exceedingly brisk season.

Various Notes.

The shops are putting on their holiday dress, notably those of W. L. Rock, Sam Murray, Lawrence Schwager, Miss Dalley and Miss Murray.

Arthur Newell is doing a rushing business these days. His store is one of the handsomest on the street.

Miss Clara Motter, with the Kansas City Floral Co., reports business as increasing and is placing large orders with the wholesale dealers for Easter novelties.

D. Freudenthal is stocking up with some very fine plant stuff for the spring trade and reports business as increasing.

Alfred Barbe is sending in some fine bulb stock and has some very good stock for spring market.

Wm. Sharp, with Sam Murray, is showing some of the finest lilies to be seen in Kansas City and has the best hydrangeas and plant novelties.

John Vesey, of Denver avenue, is in the market with some very fine H. P. roses and is disposing of them rapidly.

The market these days is a very lively place, being well stocked with bedding stuff and all seem to do a rushing business.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

The demand keeps up fairly well for all kinds of cut flowers and the weather is all one could wish for. Considering the Lenten season, business has been fairly active and the wholesale demand is using up most all good flowers coming in. There really has not been what you might call a glut of any kind of flowers, with the exception of southern daffodils, which already have made their appearance in great quantities and put home-grown ones down below the cost of the bulbs, and they cannot all be moved, even at that, for the ones shipped from the south can be bought by the single thousand at $1.50, and less in large lots. Most of them are handled by the fakirs, but one of our large department stores had them advertised in the daily papers for certain hours of the day at two dozen for 5 cents and all other hours at 5 cents per dozen.

Both single and double violets are showing the effect of the warm weather and chances are that they will be done for by Easter. The retail stores and also the market men are making large displays of all kinds of plants intended for Easter, for the recent warm weather brought quite a lot of them into bloom which could not be held back. But judging from the stock of a number of growers, there will be a good lot of Harrisii and other bulbous stock.

Greens continue to be very scarce and smilax is out of the question.

Various Notes.

C. E. Smith & Co., 121 North Liberty street, have completed their new store front and also a fine conservatory in the rear of the store. They now have one of the most up-to-date stores in the city.

C. Erdmann, of Belair road, is going to build five new greenhouses 20x100 and will plant them in roses and carnations and general Easter stock, of which he already makes a specialty. A. F.

PITTSBURG, PA.—In the petition in bankruptcy filed by Thomas McKenna Ulam his liabilities are stated to be $10,235 and his assets as $4,458.35.

OCEANIC, N. J.

At a meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society April 7 it was decided to hold a rose, sweet-pea and strawberry show on June 16. At the meeting of this date N. Butterbach will read a paper on "Hybrid Tea and Tea Roses for Bedding Purposes."

Mr. Hale exhibited some excellent Amaryllis Enchantress of India and two other hybrids, which received ninety points, also some Euphorbia Jacquinæ-flora, scoring eighty points. Mr. Brunton, gardener to Mr. Hess, showed some finely colored Prosperity carnations, scoring ninety points, and his Enchantress received eighty.

The prizes for the essays on rose culture were presented to the winners. H. A. Kettel surprised the winner of the first prize, Charles Wengerter, with a beautiful silver cup and N. Butterbach presented the winner of the second prize, Joseph G. P. Kennedy, with a silver shaving cup and brush. The recipients responded with boxes of cigars.

The judges of the evening were W. W. Kennedy, J. A. Kennedy and Wm. Turner.

FAIRBURY, ILL.—Kring Bros. are putting up another large house. They have seven houses, a total of 45,000 feet of glass.

EUREKA, ILL.—C. E. Brady & Co., who are growing carnations and lettuce, contemplate a considerable addition to their glass this summer.

HARTFORD CITY, IND.—John Leach has had a fine run of funeral work, especially for the Isaiah Gilbert funeral, which called for reproducing many society emblems in flowers.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The First Spring Show.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana held its first annual spring exhibition in the Horticultural rooms at the State House on April 4 and scored a success. Nearly $100 were offered in premiums and they brought out some very fine exhibits, the stock in all classes being of extraordinary quality. The show was free to the public and the way the people attended was very gratifying. The society sent out through the local members invitations to the flower buyers of the city to come and view the exhibits. One of the prettiest displays in the exhibit was that made by A. Wiegand & Sons not for competition. It consisted of a high bank of green plants, studded with blooming plants and baskets and vases of cut blooms. No better advertisement could have been got up.

The premiums awarded were as follows: Hyacinths, Huckriede & Son, first; H. W. Rieman, second. Tulips and daffodils, Bertermann Bros., first; Huckriede, second. On cinerarias, cyclamens, azaleas and lilacs, Bertermann was first and Rieman second, except on cyclamens, where no second was awarded. On spiraeas Rieman was first and Huckriede second. For general display Bertermann was first, Rieman second. Sweet peas, Baur & Smith first.

W. W. Coles, Kokomo, was both first and second for white roses, first for red and pink; E. A. Nelson being second for pink. For "any other color" Nelson was first, Coles second.

On carnations Baur & Smith were first for white, E. G. Hill Co. second. Pink, J. Hartje first, Baur & Smith second. Light pink, W. W. Coles first. Red, E. G. Hill Co. first. "Any other color," J. Hartje first, Bertermann second.

The E. G. Hill Co. was awarded a certificate of merit on Carnation Cardinal. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., were awarded certificates of merit on My Maryland, a grand white, and Jessica, a fine large variegated. In the Bertermann general display they showed a fine bunch of Hill's new rose, Rosalind Orr English. For color and general beauty this rose is hard to beat and it surely will find a place among the standard cut flower sorts. J. Hartje and the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. showed a vase of their new pink, Carnation Candace, a beautiful shade of bright pink of good size, form and a fine commercial variety in every respect. They did not enter it for certificate, so it was not scored.

HEADQUARTERS FOR

Easter Plants.

Now ready for instant shipment, blooming Easter week or one week before.

I am noted, and have a reputation for the past 15 years, for raising and shipping choice Easter plants of every description. 9 houses and 7 frames full of plants in better condition than ever before.

AZALEA INDICA a specialty. Of my own importation, 8 houses full of the cream of Ghent's production. We sell none in the fall, therefore the best is not picked out by fall sales. We force them only for our customers' Christmas and Easter trade. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, the people's choice, the best of all the pink. Plants are covered with bud and round as an apple. Price, 6-inch pots, 75c and $1.00. Specimen, 7-in., $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00 each. We also have the best of other varieties, such as Empress of India, Prof. Wolters, Jean Vervene, Sigismund Rucker, Paul Weber, Illustrate, Sov. de Van Houtte; Niobe, double white; Bernard Andre alba, white, Simon Mardner and others. Have some in bloom now for immediate sale if you wish. Price, 6-inch to 7-inch pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Lilium Harriail and Japan multiflorum, raised from bulbs of Henry F. Mitchell's special brand; 6-in. pots, 5 to 8 buds to a plant. 10 cents per bud. Under 5 buds, 12c per bud. Cineraria hybrida. H. F. Mitchell's best special shades. Have 2,300 this year. 6-in. pots, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per dozen.

Begonia, President Carnot, Flambeau and other good varieties. 6-in. pots, $3.00 per dozen.

Begonias, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz. Spiraeas, 2 houses full of Spiraea floribunda, Blanda, Japonica. 6-in. pots, very large bushes, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per dozen. Compacta, 6-in., $2.00 to $3.00 per dozen. Gladstone, perfect jewel, covered with flowers or buds. $8.00, $9.00 to $12.00 per dozen.

Roses. American Beauties, in bud. 6-in. pots, 50c each; 5-in., 35c. Other hybrid roses, including Hermosa, 5 to 5½-in. pots, $3.00 to $4.00 per dozen.

White daisies (or Marguerites), 6-in., $3.00 per dozen.

Hyacinths raised from first size bulbs of my own importation. Grand Maitre, single blue; King of the Blue; Gertrude, pink; La Grandesse, white. $12.00 per 100.

Double Von Sion narcissal or daffodils, double nosed, 3 in a 5½-in. to 6-in. pot, $2.00 to $2.50 dozen pots.

Touresol Tulips, best double, 3 in a 4-in. pot, $1.50 per dozen pots.

Ficus elastica, 25 to 35 inches high, 6 to 7-in. pot, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each. Araucaria excelsa, 7-in. pots, 25 to 32 inches high, $1.50 each.

A. W. Smith hybrid Moonvines, $5.00 per 100. Hydrangea Otaka—6 and 7-in. pots, $6, $9 to $12 per doz., few white among them.

Cash with order, please. No reference. All goods travel on purchasers' risk. 20 minutes by trolley from City Hall to my place, Germantown car on 18th and 8th Sts. Bell phone, Tloga 3669 A. Please read references.

Announce the completion of arrangements whereby they will, beginning in January, 1906, disseminate jointly with

THE E. G. HILL CO.

Their Two Grand New Carnations

My Maryland and Jessica

My Maryland is already well and favorably known, having been exhibited freely at the various flower shows and florist club meetings the past fall and winter, and in every case elicited the highest praise and most favorable comment. We pick this variety to quickly and easily displace all other whites for first honors, not alone in exhibition, but in commercial points as well. We claim for it a robustness of constitution quite unequalled in any other variety and an ease of culture that will delight the heart of the grower. The great vigor of both parents (Norway x Lawson) seems united and improved upon in this variety.

Both of the above are free propagators. We are thoroughly familiar with them and know what they will do. We will be in a position to deliver stock early and on time, and assure the trade that no disappointments will result on that score.

We have already booked many orders. It pays to be early. Orders booked are subject to cancellation by the buyer if unsatisfied with either variety up to the time the cuttings are received.

PRICE: $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

In Jessica we have, in the red and white variegated class, what My Maryland will prove among white. It is descended through several generations of variegated seedlings of Helen Keller and Bratt extraction on the one side and Lawson on the other. A strong, thrifty growing variegated seedling bearing the seed. It is a trifle heavier in growth than My Maryland and just Lawson height. Aside from these differences and the color, the description of My Maryland applies to Jessica. Under favorable conditions four-inch blooms are not uncommon. We pick Jessica to win over any other variegated variety.

AZALEA INDICA HEXE.

The Revue de l'Horticulture Belge for March gives a colored illustration and a description of this form of A. amœna. According to M. Van den Heede, this is the result of a cross between A. amœna Forsteriana and the variety A. indica known as Duc Adolphe de Nassau. It appears that the hybrid is much used in Germany and in Belgium as a stock, but it has claims also upon the attention of horticulturists by reason of its rosy-carmine flowers larger than those of the ordinary amœna. Not only is the corolla colored, but the calyx also, so that the appearance is that of two flowers one within the other. A. Hexe crossed with Deutsche Perle and with Charles Enke has given origin to a whole series of hose-in-hose azaleas, the flowers of which last longer than in the case of the ordinary forms.

HAMPDEN CORNERS, ME.—H. Arnold Mosher has moved his seed and plant business here from Presque Isle.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—On April 4 a street car struck John Arnold's delivery wagon, demolishing it, but Mr. Arnold escaped with some bad bruises.

PERKASIE, PA.—Benjamin K. Hedrick is preparing to build a house 27x140 feet which he expects to have ready to plant about August 1, with carnations.

THE BULB-MITE.

The bulb-mite is the subject of an illustrated article in the March number of the British Journal of the Board of Agriculture. The bulb-mite, Rhizoglyphus echinopus attacks sound bulbs as well as those which are diseased. The measures recommended are—1, to burn affected bulbs; or, 2, wash and spray every affected bulb with paraffin, repeating the operation after a fortnight; 3, wash the bulbs in sulphide of potassium (liver-of-sulphur), one ounce to three gallons of water; 4, fumigation with bisulphide of carbon, in order to do which place the bulbs in an air-tight receptacle, and on the top of the bulbs put a saucer of the bisulphide and let the bulbs remain in the vapor for forty-eight hours. It must be remembered that the vapor is poisonous and inflammable, so that no light of any description should be brought near the fluid.

PURCELL, I. T.—M. E. Gamble's greenhouse froze up last winter and business was suspended for a time, but has now been resumed.

FULTON, ILL.—Edward O. Hills and Leslie O. McKenzie, of Morrison, have bought a tract of land here and will at once put up a plant for forcing vegetables. They expect their houses to cost about $8,000.

CHILLICOTHE, MO.—R. L. Isherwood has purchased the three abandoned 100-foot greenhouses of George Weatherby and leased a piece of land west of town, to which he will remove these three greenhouses, also erecting six others.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

How much capacity has a tubular boiler fifteen feet long, thirty-six inches in diameter, with a grate area 31x48 inches and twenty-four 3-inch flues? We have on it now three houses each 18x200. Would it heat another house the same size or could we make it 25x200? We now heat 4,000 feet of 1-inch pipe and 600 feet of 1½-inch pipe and the boiler seems to do the work very easily. We wish to grow carnations. T. W. C.

I judge from your question and the size of pipe stated that you use steam. If so, your boiler has a heating capacity for about 3,150 feet of radiation. The 4,000 feet of 1-inch pipe now carried by the boiler is equivalent to 1,376 feet of radiation and the 600 feet of 1½-inch pipe is equal to 298 feet of radiation, or a total of 1,674 square feet, or about one-half the capacity of your boiler. You may therefore nearly double the present plant without increasing the heating equipment, provided you do not demand a higher temperature than that now used. L. C. C.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Once upon a time it was recorded that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," but just the same there's a good deal in a name. A name may not sell a plant, but a good name is better than a poor one and a descriptive name is best of all. What peculiar views as to names some people take is shown by the following sentences from the address of an estimable gentleman before the horticultural society at Adrian, Mich.:

Gen. MacArthur is certainly, I think, the finest and best of the new roses. I am sorry it was not named for Gen. Miles, who is not ashamed to be a worker in the peace cause. Gen. MacArthur is one of our bloodiest benevolent assimilationists, and a teacher of the most hideous doctrines that would enthrone the devil. I shall call my Gen. MacArthur roses Gen. Miles.

A WATER HEATER.

I have five greenhouses each 15x55 feet, eight feet to the ridge, and want to add another house 18x96 feet. The heating is by hot water, using a return tubular boiler thirty-six inches in diameter and ten feet long. There is now 1,500 feet of 4-inch pipe. Would the boiler be capable of carrying the new house at 45 degrees under Philadelphia weather conditions? J. C. F.

As you do not give the number or diameter of the flues in your boiler I cannot estimate its heating capacity accurately. I have assumed that it is a normal tubular boiler, with 290 feet of heating surface. If this is correct, it is likely that the boiler will carry the additional house 18x96 feet without danger, except in the most severe weather, when it will likely require close watching and careful firing with good fuel. You have a margin of 553 feet of radiation in the boiler at present and the new house will demand about 590 feet, which is a little more than the boiler should be expected to carry, but with good management it will undoubtedly do the work. All Machines fitted to suit each house before shipping, and sent out under a Ten-Year Guarantee.

Pipe Shafting Machines are equipped with Roller Hangers, Circular Steel Ratchet Arms, Automatic Safety Locks, which combine durability, neatness and ease of operation. By using our combination of Adjustable Roller Hangers and Steel Ratchet Arms the strain upon the pipe shafting is reduced to such a great extent that no expensive, heavy, double strength pipe is required. Houses 165 feet long are now successfully operated from the end with single machines. Machines furnished with or without pipe shafting.

Cable Machines are now equipped with Top Gears, Horizontal Sprocket Wheels, Automatic Safety Locks, and are especially adapted to operate the new, large commercial houses now used. Single machines are successfully operating from the end, houses with single lines of sash 370 feet long, houses with double lines of sash 200 feet long, houses with continuous sash 227½ feet long, raising each and every sash exactly the same, being the most economical and powerful machine on the market.

COIL BOILERS.

I notice that there is considerable interest in regard to boilers constructed of pipe and venture to describe a heater I have planned to build. I had thought of a furnace with a division of fire brick running back horizontally nearly to the rear of the fire-box, dividing it into two parts, upper and lower, and causing the heat to travel as in a return-flue boiler, to the back of the space in the lower division and then forward in the upper section to the smoke stack over the front of the fire-box. Could I bring in the return pipe at the bottom, carry it back and up to the front of the upper division of the furnace, then back and down to the lower division, forward to the front and back and up through the upper division to the flow pipe at the upper front? This would make the water travel twice through both divisions of the fire-box. Would it be more practicable to be content with a single coil? How could I get a tight joint in the pipe? Would 10-inch tile do for the stack? C. L. W.

I fail to see how it would be possible to make the design of a furnace in which the two return bends are used, give satisfaction. It is difficult to force hot water to make a return trip from a cooler to a hotter chamber, which would be necessary in that case. Further, I doubt if you could induce a flow of water through that length of pipe exposed to the action of the flames unless the pipe used be two or more inches in diameter. A large number of small (1½-inch) short pipes will accomplish the purpose better than the greater length and intricate coil.

The second plan, when the return water enters the front of the fire-box over the fire and passes out at the front of the upper chamber near the smoke-stack, is more practicable. In both cases, however, it will be necessary to use manifolds in order to get sufficient heating surface in the boiler to heat any considerable amount of greenhouse space. By placing the manifold to which the main return is connected just over the fire door, and either inside or outside the fire-box, and carrying each pipe through the front or out the top of the furnace into a second manifold, I believe you can make a satisfactory heater.

If you use long screws and lock nuts with red lead instead of unions I do not believe you will have any difficulty in keeping the joints tight.

The sewer pipe will be all right for the smokestack if it is in right proportion to the grate surface. You do not indicate the size or capacity of the furnace you intend constructing. It is therefore impossible to say whether or not the 10-inch pipe will be adequate.

If you intend constructing a pipe heater, would call your attention to the one figured in the REVIEW of December 31, 1903, page 269. L. C. C.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

Bellevue, Pa.

Chas. T. Siebert:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used five different kinds in the past 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points in the last two years, and am perfectly satisfied with them. Yours truly,

F. BURKI.

Chas. T. Siebert:—In our 25 years' experience with glazing points of all kinds, I can say your Zinc Points are the best to date.

CHAS. H. WILSON,

Chas. T. Siebert:—I must say the Zinc Points have given great satisfaction. I have over 100 lbs. on my houses, and feel justified in stating that they are the best point on the market. Yours respectfully,

W. K. PARTRIDGE, Florist.

Glenfield, Pa.

Chas. T. Siebert:—I take pleasure in expressing satisfaction in using your Zinc Glazing Points. They have outlasted all others used, therefore are better and cheaper. Their merit should result in extended sales. Sincerely yours,

THEO. F. BECKERT, Florist.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Charles T. Siebert:—I can truthfully say your Zinc Points are the best I ever used. They are easily driven and withdrawn and are stiff. Being straight on one side, they can be driven accurately; consequently the breakage of glass is very small. I have some in use four years, and they are still in their place, as good as new.

W. S. ROEBECK.

Springfield, Ohio.

Chas. T. Siebert:—You no doubt know by the 229 lbs. of Zinc Points we have ordered from you that we consider them the best on the market. We have four new houses under way, each 255 feet in length, and will soon have to place our order with you for quite a lot of more glazing points. We are, very truly,

ART WARE FOR FLORISTS.

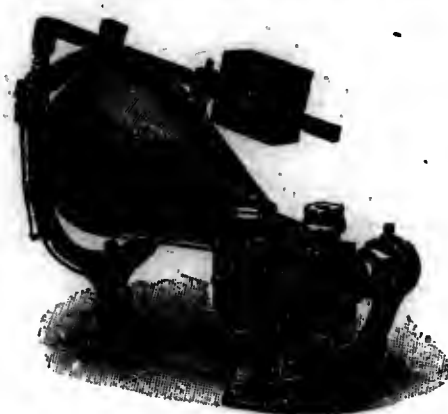

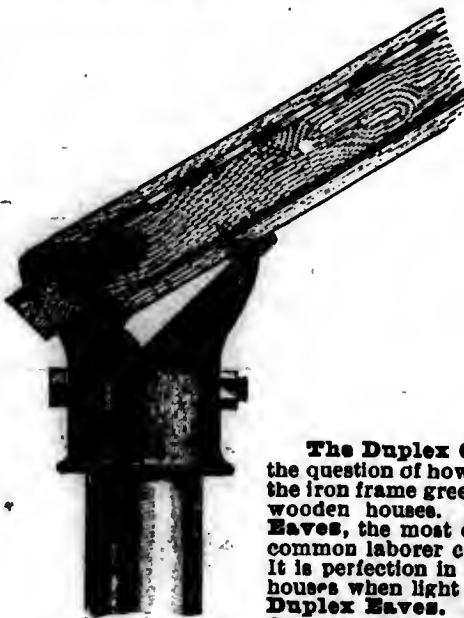

Every florist who makes any pretension to doing decorating must be equipped with a stock of more or less expensive and attractive art ware, ready for use when occasion demands. Indeed, the leading retailers in the large cities carry large quantities of cut glass, china and art pottery and find it indispensable for many uses, in their customers' homes, in all sorts of decorations and in the show window; besides, a piece of no especial importance to the florist will often appeal to a customer's fancy and may be sold at a good profit. Among the best for florists is the Flemish art pottery, not alone for its artistic value but for the fact that it is comparatively cheap. It is produced in small factories in Belgium and is beginning to find its way to this country in considerable quantities. The coloring is its greatest charm and appeals especially to those who use it with flowers. Many florists are using vases, etc., procured through E. A. Denham, New York, who is said to be the sole importer. Many of the pieces are decorated with landscapes, with quaint Flemish peasants in the foreground, perhaps, and with windmills scattered here and there, but the pieces do not need these occasional artificial aids in order to prevent them from being mistaken for the product of any other country, for each piece bears the unmistakable characteristics of the Flemish school of art, together with an air of individuality that comes from their being manufactured entirely by hand.

IRON GREENHOUSES

The Duplex Gutter and the Duplex Eaves have solved the question of how to build up-to-date greenhouses as durable as the iron frame greenhouses at high prices, and nearly as cheap as wooden houses. See the cut that represents the new Duplex Eaves, the most durable, strongest and simplest to erect. Any common laborer can set them as perfect as an expert mechanic. It is perfection in construction. No ice or snow to darken your houses when light means money. Positively no shade from the Duplex Eaves. Cost only about $2.00 per foot, including Duplex Gutters and Eaves, Iron Posts for Gutters, Iron Purlins with Posts, Tees and Floor Plates, Center Posts with Plates and Bases.

PECKY CYPRESS.

The advancing cost of the ordinary grades of greenhouse bench lumber and the desire for something which will not rot out in a couple of seasons have turned the attention of many large growers to pecky cypress, a material which has been on the market for many years but which has been looked at askance because of its apparent imperfections. Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill., were the first, so far as known, to build greenhouse benches of pecky cypress but it has now been largely adopted by growers around Chicago. Many of the big growers north of Chicago have for years bought their lumber of the Adam Schillo Lumber Co. and when the demand came for pecky cypress the Schillo Co. was called on to supply it. Last season they sold several car-loads and state that they now have orders for over 300,000 feet for delivery in June, July and August. That sounds like good business but they say they are not particularly pleased. Pecky cypress sells for only a little more than hemlock and lasts four or five times as long. The Schillo Co. says that it will mean that they can sell to their customers much less frequently than before and the only way they can hold up the volume of their sales is to hunt up a lot more customers.

The Skinner System of Irrigation in House of J. A. Neyl, Troy, O.

J. D. Nisele, Riverton, N. J., says it is the most effective and at the same time the cheapest method of watering he has ever seen.

John Breitmeyer's Sons, Mt. Clemens, Mich., write: "We are more than pleased with the Skinner System. Next season we shall arrange to irrigate with it wherever we expect anything to grow."

Crane Bros., E. Toledo, O., write: "We have used the Skinner System of Irrigation, both out doors and in our greenhouses and find it very satisfactory, being the best method of applying water we have ever tried."

W. E. Weinschenk, New Castle, Pa., writes: "I am very much pleased with the Skinner System and did not have any trouble putting it up. We shall put it in all our houses and expect to give it a trial in the field next summer."

Herbert & Fleishauer, McMinnville, Ore., write: "You have the best thing for its purpose we ever saw. We shall equip our whole place."

G. M. Fuchs, Belleville, Ill., writes: "Your System is better than I thought possible of any sprinkler."

B. B. Chester, Brooklyn, O., writes: "The System is a success. Send 25 nozzles at once."

BATAVIA, N. Y.

Thomas M. McGuire, who has charge of the New York Central's greenhouses is now engaged in preparing for the annual planting of the depot yards along the company's road. He will use 62,000 plants this year and every one will be from the Batavia greenhouses. The Central has two of these propagating plants. The other is at Poughkeepsie, but the Batavia house is the larger. Plants are used at thirty-three stations on the western division, at four on the Falls branch, twenty-seven on the Auburn branch and at about twenty-five on the R., W. & O.

Work will commence in earnest about May 25. Mr. McGuire is allowed a special engine, with two baggage cars, and four assistants, besides the regular train crew. It takes him about three days to finish the western division, using 30,000 plants. On the R., W. & O. he also works about three days and uses 11,000 plants. The Batavia houses also send out a large quantity of ornamental shrubs, probably 8,000 each year, which are used in landscape work.

ENGLISH HOLLY.

We learn that considerable quantities of berried holly find their way to the American markets. We can hardly look on this fact with complacency, as we fear it will entail the mutilation and spoliation of one of our greatest ornaments. For once we should be glad if our cousins would put on a heavy import duty—but then we have no holly to sell!—Gardeners' Chronicle.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

A ROSE CENTERPIECE.

One group of Meteor roses composed the very simple, round centerpiece shown in the accompanying illustration. The foundation is a wire frame about an inch deep lined with tin foil and filled with sphagnum to the depth of two inches. Avoid making a pyramid-shaped center of the moss filling. The top need not be exactly even, either. In fact, a decidedly uneven surface is desirable, both in plaque centerpieces of this kind, in baskets, and in vases of standing funeral or display designs. A design such as a lyre, harp or anchor which should be trimly outlined is most appropriately set upon an irregularly filled, loose base.

Wrap around the frame over the sphagnum with your green thread to secure the moss and flowers in place. This not only secures the moss in place, and thereby holds the flowers better, but insures against serious injury from being tipped over. Often a piece of this kind must be shipped, and upside down is sometimes the traveling position, in spite of signs and cautions to the contrary.

Either over or under this wrapping place a green background of ferns, rose foliage or some such material as sheet moss. Let the green background extend over the edge, so as to hide every scrap of tin foil. It is too common a fault with designers to allow patches of foil or sphagnum, or parts of picks, to be seen in the finished piece. This is very poor workmanship and a sign of neglect of the very first principles of construction. Often in the loose style of design construction the whole side lining of the foil may be plainly seen around a wreath or other flat piece and is one of the unpardonable faults of this popular style.

Another fault is the use of the foil at all. A green lining is by far better in appearance and cheaper for funeral pieces. It is proper and necessary in a centerpiece of this kind to protect the table linen or the polished wood from damage by moisture. In addition to the inside foil lining cut an outside mat of tin foil exactly the size of the wire frame to set under the finished centerpiece to guard against scratching the table.

Choose roses about half blown and with good, strong stems and there will be no need of wiring. Stem on three-quarter picks, one to each, and begin to insert from the center out. The stem lengths may vary from four or five inches to eight or ten inches. It is worth repeating here, and drilling into one's fiber of thought, that the natural bend of a single stem determines its place in a design. There is but one best grouping of flowers in a design of any kind. Find this out and set in among the other flowers so that, taken altogether, the group will appear to spring from a common source. The principle is not a new statement in this series but is so important as to bear repetition.

If this statement is clearly understood and illustrated in the accompanying picture one can see how the design falls together of its own accord and needs no further explanation. If a few flowers fall to one side or the other, let them alone. That is the charm of the arrangement. In this piece no ferns or additional foliage is used among the roses. When as closely grouped as these are, part of the rose foliage should be removed, say about one-third.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

PRIMULA OBCONICA.

We have quite a demand for primulas in pots. We have always bought the young plants in the fall, but they were small and did not make very big plants for Christmas and this spring we sowed our own seed and it will soon be time to pot them off and we want to plant some in the bench for cutting for make-up work. The bench will not be empty before the last of August and what we want to know is how to care for them until then. Can we plant them in the sash raised a few inches both back and front, so that there would be a current of fresh air at all times over them and shade during the hot, bright hours with cheese-cloth. We think planting them in the field as we do carnations would be all wrong and most inadvisable.

DAMPING OFF.

Damping off is a fungous growth that attacks cuttings in the propagating bench, spreading over the surface of the sand in patches and enveloping the necks of the cuttings, rotting them off. Sometimes, and under certain conditions it is more virulent than others. Poorly drained benches, over-wet sand or soil, a close or muggy atmosphere, shading the cuttings while they are damp by laying newspapers flat over them, also by using the same sand bed two or more times, all tend to the encouragement and spread of the disease.

A positive cure or antidote is unknown to me. But we can greatly modify the pest by intelligent cultural conditions. First of all have the bench sweet and clean and no decaying wood about it, and wash it over with lime or liquid cement. Then use clean, sharp river sand if obtainable. If not, use clean or washed pit sand. If you are afraid of the sand you can sterilize it before using, with steam or hot air. This will kill all fungous growth in it.

When old sand has to be used it certainly should be sterilized.

Never keep the bed in a soggy state. You may water as freely as you please, field like carnations and keep them growing until we bench them; or ought they to be put in frames and shaded? If so will cloth tacked on light frames do instead of glass sash? R. & S.

A Simple Table Centerpiece.

These transplant easily. As soon as they must be handled from the seed pan, transplant into flats and keep them in a cool house. When crowded in the flats, transplant again, giving them more room, or plant out in a frame in a few inches of good, light soil. My ideal would be to cover the frames with glass providing the water runs right through the bed. Don't have the propagating bed in a close, dark, choky corner, and if you have to shade it let the shading be high above the cuttings, as on the glass, so that there is never a stagnant, stuffy atmosphere on the bench.

Keep careful watch over the bed and the moment a bit of "damp" is discovered rub it off together with the cuttings affected. Sometimes the fungous spreads in a thready mass. Better rub it all off, and if it is persistently bad, lift out the cuttings from the diseased patch, rub the fungous threads off of the apparently healthy ones and replant in fresh sand. Throw away every damping off cutting. Scorched sand at a temperature of 150 degrees scattered over the fungous, especially in seed pans, has a somewhat good effect. The mixing of powdered charcoal and sulphur in the sand is widely recommended, but my own experience is not in favor of either of them. Careful and intelligent attention to cultural details is the best preventive.

NEPHROLEPIS BARROWSII.

This new, distinct and handsome neph-rolepis is a sport from N. Piersoni, discovered in February, 1904. The habit is dwarf and very compact. It makes more fronds than N. Piersoni, only half the length of those of that variety and about double the width. The side pinnae are set close together and overlap each other. The small side pinnae are finely cut. So far the plants have shown no signs of reversion as in N. Piersoni.

A group of this variety was shown at the Boston spring show on March 23 and was much admired, receiving a certificate of merit. It promises to be a very useful commercial variety.

W. N. CRAIG.

if left unsold. Where climate and soil suit them you can plant them out, but don't attempt to keep them in pots for another year's forcing. You cannot do it and plants in bud can be imported, better in every respect.

Acacias, after the flower is gone, can be cut back about halfway on last summer's growth and given the same treatment as the azaleas. They will break into growth and produce the shoots for next year's flowers.

We should never bother about saving our old tulip, hyacinth and narcissus bulbs. In the forcing and ruthless cutting we have about murdered them and occupying valuable ground with them is pure waste of time.

Keep the Fires Going.

The late date of Easter has kept many of our important summer bedding plants in a crowded condition and the ample space now afforded will be most welcome. The ever popular zonal geraniums should receive first attention. They should be in 3½-inch or, better still, 4-inch pots and growing fast and soon will be sending up trusses of bloom. This brings us to consider what condition our houses should be in just now.

Two inches of snow fell within twenty-four hours April 17 but we hope for a speedy change and within a week or two we may have bright, warm weather and the fires are let out. Then follows, perhaps, in early May a cool, rainy spell and there is a reluctance to fire up again because "this can't last long." To add to the trouble, perhaps your glass is shaded. This is a combination most disastrous to nearly all our soft-wooded plants. Make up your mind that firing cannot be dispensed with until nearly June. Of course, I cannot help having our climate, western New York, in mind in writing these hints, but they will, I think, apply to most of our northern states. You do not make geraniums soft by a little fire heat. Quite the reverse, for with fire heat you can give abundance of ventilation day and night. Avoid shading of any kind as long as you possibly can. No amount of sun will injure the foliage of geraniums, cannas, caladiums, coleus, achyrantes or any of the common bedding plants. It is the neglect of watering. The killing dryness at the roots is what causes yellow leaves and a stunted growth.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Before you will take the time to read these notes a great change will have come over your houses; instead of every square foot being crowded there will be plenty of room to spread out. Just a word about some plants that may not have sold. Any Rambler roses that you may have left may be sending up several strong growths from the base of the plant. These will make fine canes for another year and the wood that flowered this spring can be cut clean away. A shift now or a little later will be necessary. Keep them under glass until they have made fine canes, as you do those you started from dormant plants this spring.

Hybrid Perpetuals.

Hybrid perpetuals which are offered at Easter are almost all plants that were lifted last November, potted and started to force in January or later and this method, if well done, is about all that is needed. But this is not how a large, well flowered plant is produced, because you could not get these unestablished roots to support so much growth and bloom. So if you have left any of these roses that made four or five nice growths but little bloom, take care of them, encourage them with genial heat, spraying and liquid manure to make their growth stout. Plunge them outdoors in June and with a few months' rest in fall and winter these plants, if cut down to four or five eyes, will make fine plants for another year's forcing and will flower to a certainty better by far than the unestablished plants lifted in the fall.

Azaleas.

Azaleas given care during summer make our finest plants for next year and flower more profusely than the newly imported plants. If they are making plenty of young growths, then only pick off the withered flowers and keep them in a temperature of 55 degrees, with plenty of spraying, and they will make a growth that will give you the flowers next spring.

If any azaleas come to your hands that have been badly treated and are losing their foliage, then cut them back hard, even to old, hard wood. In a warm house and with plenty of spraying they will break into growth and make fine plants.

Other Easter Plants.

Rhododendrons are of little use to us

Nephrolepis Barrowsii Shown at Boston Spring Show by H. H. Barrows & Son, Whitman, Mass.

New Store of Julius Baer at Cincinnati, Ohio.

Plunge the Pots.

It is money saved, especially with the geraniums, if about May 1 you can plunge the pots on the bench in some light, easily handled material. If it is only halfway up the pot it is an immense help. Ashes or the compost of last year's hotbed are good but best of all is refuse hops which are well decayed. Only one half the watering is then necessary and that is a great saving, and the sun can pour down on them to the plants' delight without parching the roots. This will apply also to cannas, with their hungry roots crowded in a 4-inch pot, or any other of our fast growing bedding plants. Notice how the plants in the hotbeds grow and thrive in the blazing sun, largely because the pots are plunged. Tropical plants like coleus just stand still, or worse, if you drop firing before settled warm weather.

The show pelargoniums, once so largely grown, will soon be opening their buds and are rather benefited by a very light shade, but the brightest sun and even neglect of water could not harm them so much as one cold, rainy night without fire heat and a little ventilation. The petals of the flowers will drop, the flower is gone and so is the plant, and months of work are ruined in a few hours. So concluding this subject, do not let the fires go out and avoid shading wherever you can.

Poinsettias.

It will soon be time to start old plants of poinsettias for Christmas. Strong canes that have a foot of well ripened wood are what you want. Shake off the old soil and repot in a 4-inch pot. Cut off the green, unripe wood and start in a warm house, with a daily spraying. You will soon get cuttings. There are months ahead of us to propagate these showy plants for pans, even to the end of August, yet it is time soon to start the old plants going.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

A CINCINNATI STORE.

There is no city in the country where the leading retail florists are located so closely together as in Cincinnati. The result has been that each one has made special efforts to keep his store up-to-date in every feature and there is no city in which a higher order of retail establishments is to be found. Among the most progressive of the craft is Julius Baer, who has recently removed into a new double store at 138-40 East Fourth street, only a few doors from his former location. Here he has one of the most up-to-date establishments in the country, as will be seen from the accompanying illustration, which is reproduced from a photograph. It may also be stated that Mr. Baer already feels a considerable increase in his business, which goes to show that the best buyers appreciate the facilities which only a liberal expenditure of money can provide in the way of an attractive flower store.

FREESIAS.

We have some freesias planted in our carnation bench and as they are through blooming shall we dig them now or wait until we throw out the carnation plants?

I pulled up one and found a few off-sets, or bulbs. What shall I do with them? We think of planting quite a large bench of them this season and would like to know if we could plant them one inch apart each way. Would that be too close for them to do well? We have a house running north and south. The sides are two feet above the bed, that is the glass on the roof is two feet from the bed, with no glass on the sides. Will they do well if planted there? The bed is solid. Is it light enough for them? When shall we plant them so as to have them bloom for Christmas? R. & S.

The bulbs of freesias are not produced for forcing in the eastern states. California grows immense quantities, but it is said they are not as pure in color as those grown in Europe, which are largely imported, mostly from the Channel Islands, Jersey and Guernsey. You can leave your bulbs among the carnations until you throw them out, but do not expect them to produce as fine flowers as they did last winter. Keep the bulbs in perfectly dry sand until you start them again. These bulbs are now offered us so cheaply and of such splendid quality that it will not pay to bother with the off-sets or with the old bulbs with a view to future forcing.

For cutting at Christmas plant in early August. Your house is all right and will grow freesias. One inch apart is too close. If planted in the bed, then three inches between rows and one inch between bulbs will be about right and if you use flats of convenient size and four inches deep they will do as well as in the solid bed. If you want to grow some 5-inch or 6-inch pots of freesia which, when well flowered, are very attractive and sell well, then you must plant them quite thickly, say eighteen or twenty bulbs in a 6-inch pot. Buy your bulbs every summer and let the Californian with his fine climate raise your bulbs and you will be in pocket. W. S.

THE ILLINOIS APPROPRIATION.

The following is from the Springfield, Ill., State Register for April 13:

There were free flowers for the members of the appropriations committee of the house yesterday. Members of the Illinois State Florists' Association appeared before the committee with their arms full of roses and carnations. After these had been distributed around the committee room, the members of the association argued for their bill appropriating $30,000 for an experiment station at the University of Illinois. Horticulture, coupled with free flowers, appealed to the guardians of the state expenditures and after cutting the appropriation in half, they voted the bill out favorably.

The following is from a special correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, telegraphed one day after the above appeared:

The house committee on appropriations came out of a trance into which it had been thrown yesterday by the delegation from the Illinois Florists' Association. The carnations in the buttonholes of the members wilted. The vote by which it was decided yesterday to recommend an appropriation of $15,000 for the propagation of rare flowers was reconsidered, and upon motion of Mr. Craig the bill will be reported with the recommendation that it do not pass. That ended the "carnation grab" at the state treasury.

PREPARATIONS FOR PLANTING.

Those who do not have their season's soil in store should lose no time in its collection and preparation, as the season for planting will shortly be here and any unpreparedness will surely handicap us for at least a part of the season. By having everything in readiness we are able to plant our stock just when it is in condition, take advantage of the weather and secure the longest growing season possible.

We frequently see stock standing around pot bound in 3-inch pots during the hot days of June, while the soil is being collected and other preparations are being made for planting, when they ought to be enjoying the freer possibilities of the bench and getting the full benefit of the best part of the growing season.

Last season I was called in question by one of your correspondents for advocating one of the old-fashioned ways, viz., planting Beauties in June as being the better time for that work in order to make each plant produce the maximum of bloom. After a season of late planting I am more than ever convinced that June planting for Beauties is the most profitable; in fact, I intend to plant all my roses during that month, as after years of comparison and faithful record keeping I have, in order to get the most I can out of my bench room, no choice left.

Suitable soil for roses is hard to find, especially in the vicinity of large cities, but if we exercise a little care and judgment in the choice and ascertain which of the essential elements is lacking and add these in the proper proportions we can have a fairly good rose soil, providing we can get a good sod on the ground, for to have a soil that will make a good compost it is necessary to have plenty of fiber.

The sod should be piled on the ground high enough to allow the surplus moisture to run off, so that the bottom of the pile will not sour. Most of our soils will admit of an addition of decomposed cow manure in the proportion of one of manure to four of soil.

This should be allowed to remain in the heap for a week or so and should then be chopped up and thoroughly mixed. This process should be accomplished if possible during bright sunny weather.

Turning the pile over every ten days will thoroughly incorporate the component parts, keep weeds from growing and bring it into that nice mellow condition which makes it pleasant to handle and every element is in a proper condition for the young stock to make use of.

Where bone meal has to be added, by deferring the addition till planting time we get the full advantage of the elements contained therein. RIBES.

ROSES UNDER GLASS.

[A paper by J. A. Sked, foreman for the Park Floral Co., Denver, read before the Colorado Society of Floriculturists March 24, 1905.]

Having been requested to write a few notes on the culture of roses under glass for commercial purposes, and from a commercial standpoint, I will endeavor to give a few plain ideas gathered from practice and observation through the past quarter of a century.

Propagation.

To begin at the beginning, the propagating house is first. If it is properly constructed there should be no difficulty in rooting such varieties as we grow on their own roots. It seems a generally accepted fact that Madame Chatenay should be on its own roots, but opinion seems to be divided on American Beauties. From my personal observation and the demand from the most successful growers for young plants, it would seem the Beauty's own roots are well able to take care of its tops. In regard to some of the newer varieties, we will have to learn later on which method brings best results, whether grafted or own root.

Now return to the propagating house. The ideal bench, in my mind, should contain no wood whatever, and next to that, as little as possible, as the cutting bench fungus makes its home in the old, soggy and partly rotten wood, and is ready at a moment's notice to start out on the new sand and leaves, and it spreads like a prairie fire. With ample pipes under the bench, all sides should be cased up as tightly as possible, with doors to regulate the bottom heat and ventilators to keep the top heat right. We find a brick bottom to the bench better than wood. It holds a more even temperature, keeps sweeter, and is more porous. The cuttings root better on brick, and that is the main consideration.

If we can keep the sand at 70 degrees and the top heat at 60 degrees through December, January and February, these are the best months for various reasons, as we generally keep up a pretty steady heat, and naturally we expect more or less dull weather in these months. With the above conditions we should get ninety to ninety-five per cent on all varieties except hybrid teas, which are always doubtful. We find it pays to use new sand with every batch; and pound it down as hard as possible, and then set a good, strong boy to pound it some more. In four weeks they will be evenly rooted and come out. Pot in new or washed 2-inch pots, in straight prairie soil run through a 3/4-inch mesh sieve to remove lumps and sod. Place in a house running 60 degrees nights and 70 degrees days. Shade for a few days if bright, then remove shade and ever after give all the Colorado sunshine possible. To make an ideal plant use two-eye cuttings.

Grafting.

As to the varieties which do better grafted, we can graft two months later and have as large plants to bench by May 15 to June 1, which is a good date for planting. There are many more chances of failure in grafting than in rooting cuttings, for in grafting every particular item must be right or it means a lower percentage. The Manetti must be fresh and lively to start with. We pot up the Manetti in straight prairie soil in 2 1/2-inch pots and place them any and everywhere, as we want them to come on. In a house running 65 degrees nights and 75 degrees days, they will be ready for use in three weeks. Select enough for a box, all well started. Cut the scions a few hours ahead, wrap them in damp paper and put in cool cellar to stiffen up, and all is ready for grafting. Have steam on and the box hot. Keep the box closed; when filled sprinkle freely and close tightly. Keep closed for five days, only inserting the hand with a Scollay sprinkler to dampen the foliage when necessary. Keep the temperature at 85 degrees. On the sixth day give a quarter of an inch of air, and the next day a half inch and gradually give more until the tenth or twelfth day, when you can remove all glass and take out. Place on a partly shaded bench in a house running from 65 to 68 degrees nights. After two weeks in partial shade, put in full sun and ever after that, like their cousins on their own roots, give them all the sun possible. With care and favorable conditions, grafting is not so difficult. A good man will graft one plant in a minute, and seldom make two cuts on either end. Of course, from the moment the cut is made until the plant goes in the sun, eternal vigilance is the watchword of success.

Planting.

From now on there will be no different treatment required for the grafted or own root plants. Pot up as required, each shift giving them a stronger soil, until they get into 4-inch pots, where they will remain until benched. When ready to plant, a bench five feet wide made of 2-inch stuff with $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch cracks in the bottom is about right. We use either sod or clean straw to line the bench, and five inches of soil. I believe as heavy a prairie soil as we can get without getting into adobe, with a very small per cent of cow manure, is what we want; and when in doubt about the quantity of manure to use, always use less, and then cut it down again. With new prairie soil which has never before produced a crop, and with the liquid and bone flour, and later the top dressing, I would advocate very little manure in the soil to start with. No doubt our five inches of soil is about equal to the four or even three inches which some eastern growers use, allowing for the difference in climate.

When we have our benches filled with soil we use fifty pounds of bone flour to a bench 6x100 feet, mixing it in thoroughly with the hands. Then we are ready to plant. Plant teas and American Beauties fourteen inches apart in the row, with rows twelve inches apart. By "staggering" the plants, this gives fourteen inches between plants every way. Liberty may as well be 12x12, as it makes so little wood. At planting time the weather is always hot, so we must dampen down benches and walks and under the benches several times a day. Water each plant thoroughly once, and afterward only as required. Always remember to fight down our enemy, the little spider with the big name.

Varieties.

It is hardly necessary to mention varieties, as there are only a few in general use. We have the Bride and Bridesmaid, but where is the groom? W. H. Bennett was a good old red in its day, but the bud was as long as the stem. Wootton, the poor man's Beauty, was a good rose, but it would not do. Meteor was a total failure in Denver. Then came Liberty, which has made a good stand and will stay as leading red until something better comes along. And now comes a new candidate from the jungles of Indiana, Richmond. A year or two will tell us whether it has come to stay or whether it will follow the long procession of has-beens we have seen come out with banners flying, only to wind up on the dump.

Madame Chatenay is a grand, good rose and generally considered an easy doer. Still some of us have broken no records with it. Yellow seems to be out of the running, but I always think a bench of Perle would find buyers. I look for a great change in the near future in regard to carrying old American Beauties over more generally.

Having made this paper too long already, I will not touch on a great many more details such as watering, ventilating, fumigating, cutting, packing, etc. Care and vigilance go as far, I believe, as knowledge in rose-growing, although of course a man must have a pretty good knowledge too; but without continual care, the knowledge will not grow roses, as one day's neglect, or one night running too cold will give the grafted varieties a chance to sulk and go to rest, and if they do go to rest they will stay there until they feel the spring sunshine, no matter whether teas, hybrid teas, or American Beauties. Perhaps you will say that hybrid tea and American Beauty are the same. Maybe so, but they need treatment different from all other hybrid teas.

SOME OLDER RAMBLING ROSES.

It has become so much the custom of late to regard the rambling roses as quite modern creations, that by many the famous Crimson Rambler is considered to be the forerunner of its class. It therefore appears necessary, as opportunities present themselves, to remind rosarians that some of the oldest roses in cultivation are essentially rambling in habit, as, for example, the Dundee Rambler, which was introduced to cultivation early in the last century. Among these old vigorous growing roses we had none producing high-colored flowers, such as those of the first-named variety, nor among them were varieties with flowers of such an exquisitely beautiful shade of pink as Euphrosyne and some others that could be mentioned. Nevertheless, there are several of the older ramblers so vigorous in growth, profuse in blooming, and highly effective that they are well able to render considerable service in beautifying the garden.

In making this brief statement of fact we must not be understood as depreciating the merits of the rambling roses of recent introduction. They should, as we have frequently advised, be planted extensively in gardens of all sizes; they, however, ought not to be planted exclusively, not from mere sentiment, but because those who do not include some of the older varieties in their selections will fail to obtain all the aid the rambling roses are so well able to give in beautifying their gardens.

It is not desirable to attempt the formation of a collection of the rambling varieties that were so highly appreciated several generations ago, or, indeed, to grow all of them that have still a place in catalogues. Rather would we suggest that a few of the best be selected, and grown in association with the more effectively colored of the newer forms. The following would make an excellent selection for a medium-sized garden.

The noisettes include a few old varieties that can be properly classed with the ramblers, notably, Aimée Vibert, a strong-growing variety, producing medium-sized flowers, which are borne in large clusters; it has the additional merit of blooming freely in the autumn. Rêve d'Or, although not possessed of so hardy a constitution as the preceding variety, will grow freely, and bloom profusely under a diversity of conditions, and when these are favorable it blooms so freely as to produce an effect of great beauty.

The Ayrshires are distinguished by their vigorous growth, and freedom of flowering, and include some of the best of the older ramblers, notably Dundee Rambler, the flowers white and semi-double; very free in flowering, and with a constitution so robust as to enable it to thrive in much-exposed positions. Queen of the Belgians, an elegant variety, the flower double, creamy-white, and produced in large clusters. Ruga, pale pink, the flowers double, and comparatively large, the color light pink. Virginian Rambler is similar to Dundee Rambler, but the flowers are suffused with pink.

From the evergreen roses should be selected Félicité Perpetué, creamy-white, comparatively small, and quite double; Flora, pale pink; Leopoldine d'Orléans, white, suffused with rose at the margin of the petals; Myrianthes Rénoncule, bluish white, shading to rose at the edges of the petals; Princesse Marie, bright pink; Rosa plena, pale rose, passing to white.

Among the musk roses may be found a few old favorites, and especially desirable are Brunoni, a free-growing form of Moschata, with single white flowers, which are borne in great profusion about the middle of July. Madame d'Arblay, pale pink, passing to white; flowers, double, and borne in clusters. Princesse de Nassau, pale yellow, double, and sweet-scented; and The Garland, an exceptionally fine variety, the flowers of medium size, nearly double, sweet-scented, and borne in large trusses; the buds are a pleasing shade of fawn.

The chief points in the cultivation of the older, as of the newer, rambling roses is a deeply stirred and liberally enriched soil; and the removal at the annual pruning of branches that have become exhausted, the new growths being left their whole length.—Gardeners' Magazine.

THE NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

[Read by C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., before the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, February 8, 1905.]

I do not propose this evening to go into cultural details in general, since you have heard me on this subject several times already, but I will describe such of the new varieties as I am personally acquainted with, their possible place in the exhibition stands, and their colors and periods of flowering.

Yellow Varieties.

The variety that is being most inquired about is Mrs. W. Duckham, which is, of course, natural enough, since it was shown in splendid shape at Boston, where it won the C. S. A. silver cup for the best ten flowers of any variety. I was skeptical when the raiser stated that it would beat Cheltoni, but events last fall proved that he was right. While greatly resembling Cheltoni in shape, it is deeper in color and some two weeks later, being at its best November 1. The habit of Mrs. W. Duckham is ideal, with short jointed growth and fine stem, and in height it will not run over four feet. As a 6-inch pot plant, this variety did exceedingly well, and cuttings rooted in May and early June for this purpose made splendid little plants.

As a cut flower Mrs. W. Duckham is one of the best keepers, either on or off the plant. As an instance of this I may say that the flowers of this variety sent from England to Boston traveled perfectly and kept in excellent condition throughout the show, yet they had been cut for fifteen days.

The only other yellow that I have seen or handled of the new ones is Merstham Yellow, and as this is so early, it is of no use for the exhibitor; but the commercial grower has marked it for his own, and the supply is entirely inadequate for the demand so far. Merstham Yellow was written about considerably last fall and you are all doubtless more or less familiar with it, but I will remark in passing that if it lives up to its record next year it will be the most widely grown of the early yellow varieties. Those of you who have use for many flowers just when the frost outside has nipped the dahlias and other stock, will find a good stand-by in Merstham Yellow.

Several Sterling Whites.

The white section is well enriched this year by the addition of several sterling novelties, Emily Mileham, Mrs. D. V. West, Mrs. Swinburne and White Coombes being kinds that I am personally acquainted with, and Mlle. Jeannie Nonin and Clementine Touset, two French varieties, both certificated by the C. S. A. last fall. White Coombes you all saw growing with Mr. Herrington, where it originated, and I need say nothing in its favor, as it spoke for itself. Mrs. D. V. West is a grand and beautiful white. The petals twist and curl in a graceful ostrich plume fashion and remind one of the variety that we all went crazy over some seven years ago, namely, Frank Hardy, which has some time ago passed to the great beyond. Mrs. D. V. West is a taller grower than the average, and is at its best the first week in November. I would recommend April propagation, which should give a second crown bud well on in August when it will be safe to take.

Emily Mileham is also a beautiful white, refined and neat, with a very dwarf habit and stiff stem. It will be a fine variety for side benches and also pot culture, and should enjoy a large measure of popularity. While it does not make a thick, solid flower like Merza, it has a daintiness all its own. Crown buds secured the last week in August produced better flowers than buds taken earlier. Mlle. Jeannie Nonin will most likely take the place of Timothy Eaton, as it gives a large flower without the coarseness of the latter, and is at its best the middle of November. I am very favorably impressed with this variety, for it was one of the best sorts to show before the New York committee this year. Clementine Touset I consider purely a commercial variety; a poor white, but a big early flower, and as such will find its place.

Little Improvements in Pinks.

Pinks are not nearly so largely represented as last season, nor to my mind do they show any advance over last year's, for it will, in my opinion, be some time before Wm. Duckham and Leila Filkins are surpassed. Valerie Greenham is quite distinct, and very full, though the petal is quite narrow. I must confess to a weakness for a broad, massive petaled flower. Mrs. H. A. Allen is much broader in the petal, has a good color and will find its level in the exhibition varieties. It is a very dwarf grower with a grand stem and foliage, and well worth trying.

The two largest varieties of the year are Mrs. A. J. Miller and J. H. Doyle, and they are both truly enormous when caught right, on the crown bud. The first named gave a flower 7x7 inches in a 6-inch pot, with practically no feeding. The color of Miller is a terra cotta shading to brown, not so striking, but its immense size makes it of great value in a collection of varieties. It needs no staking really, for it is one of the strongest growers I ever saw. J. H. Doyle is also very dwarf and strong, and makes a splendid pot plant. The color of this variety is a warm terra cotta shading towards a Lawson pink color on later buds. Another year, with this variety widely distributed, we can tell better as to its future, but I believe it will become a standard among the exhibition kinds. A peculiarity of this variety is the fact that the foliage is pale when the plant is in the early stages of growth but this disappears as the plant gathers strength, and does not by any means indicate a delicate constitution.

Dora Stevens is a lovely color; old rose perhaps expresses it best. This variety makes immense solid foliage, like cabbage leaves, and I would recommend pot culture to check its exuberance in this direction. Dora Stevens will grow with any one in any place. Varieties of this character should not be fed too highly with nitrogenous food, or the resulting growth is too soft and sappy.

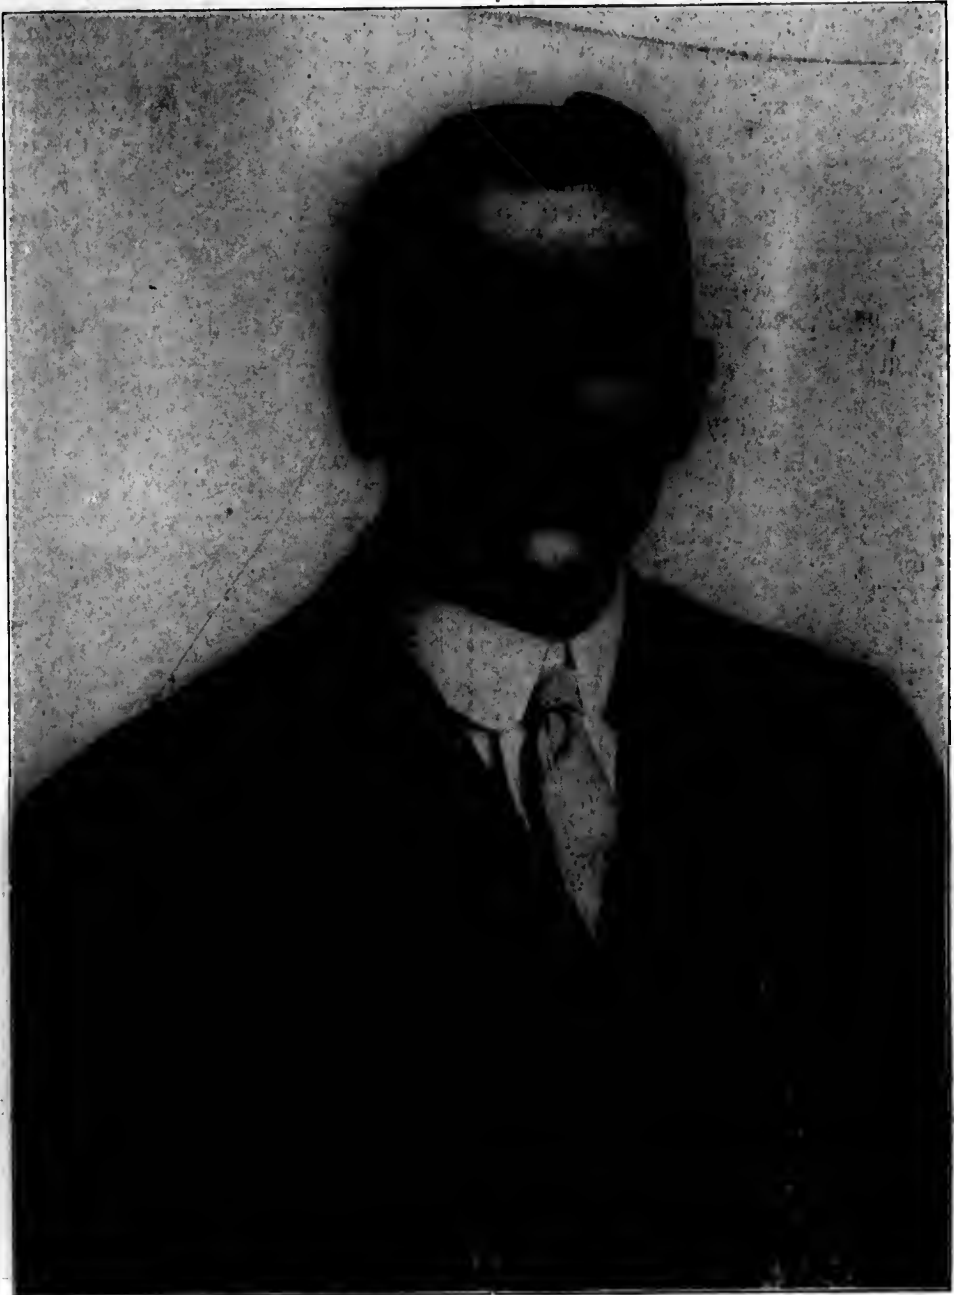

The Reds.

Reds are represented in the novelties by Merstham Red, J. H. Silsbury and Henry Perkins, neither of which shows specially noteworthy characteristics. Merstham Red is closely approaching to red. What are commonly called reds are, of course, strictly speaking, crimson, the red chrysanthemum not having yet put in its appearance. Merstham Red is very dwarf, and though it will not compare in size with Maynell or Wright, it shows up for all that it is worth with a broad reflexing petal. Silsbury and Perkins both show more or less bronze in their make-up when taken on the crown bud, and the late flowers, while wonderfully bright, do not have the necessary size for exhibition.

These constitute the best of the new varieties so far as I have seen them. I would include Brighthurst in the pinks, one of Elmer D. Smith's seedlings, and very well shown at our last fall exhibition by Peter Duff. It escaped my mind when reviewing the pinks a moment ago. It has a good dwarf habit, and every flower comes good.

Progress in Mums.

Some of the pessimists seem to think that we are not showing the progress in new types in the chrysanthemum that is shown in other flowers. They are greatly mistaken, since actual measurements show a large increase in size during the past ten years, and most assuredly the graceful Japanese section as seen today never presented such diversity of form and color even five years ago. But even if we were merely holding our own in regard to size and color, new varieties are all the time necessary, because the old ones will run out; even the peerless Wm. Duckham will have its day, and then pass out as the cycle moves along. A variety newly introduced, while full of the seedling vigor, may by very careful handling be held in good shape for some years, but eventually the inevitable decay comes and the plant passes out. The man, the tree, the flower, all have their periods of growth, manhood, old age and oblivion. The future holds much in store for the chrysanthemum, and the interest of the world in general in our autumn queen is increasing by leaps and bounds. Last year there were more exhibitions held than ever before, and many of them were financial successes for the first time in their existence. The chrysanthemum has come to stay, fellow craftsmen, and I for one propose to stay right with it.

MEN OF THE WEST.

Is there something about the pure air, the clear sky and the high altitudes of the great west which exerts an influence upon the character of man? Certain is it that out of the west come many whose personal attributes are in keeping with the natural environments of their lives, clean-minded, clear-headed, low-voiced gentlemen, temperate in all things, but imbued with the spirit of progress, inflexible of purpose but with a keen sense of the rights of others and a respect for opinions which may differ from their own. Such men live in the regard of their neighbors and when they journey from home are ever-welcome visitors.

Of the many members in the west who honor our craft none is more widely known or highly esteemed, west or east, than J. A. Valentine, of Denver, president of the Park Floral Co. and of the Colorado Society of Floriculturists. Mr. Valentine was born in Iowa in 1859, and with the exception of a short period during his boyhood, which was spent in Massachusetts, he has all his life lived in the west. He graduated from the law school at the Iowa University when he was 21 years old, and immediately following that went into railroad work, having had some slight previous experience in civil engineering. He was with the Burlington the most of the time during the next seven years, although a portion of that time was spent with the Chicago & Northwestern in Iowa and the Northern Pacific in Montana. In 1887, owing to the continued ill-health of Mrs. Valentine, he gave up railroad work and located in Denver. The only work of that character he has undertaken since then was the construction, and for a time the management, of a little suburban railroad running from Denver to Berkeley Lake, Colo.

Mr. Valentine's connection with the florists' business, as in the cases of so many others who are now leaders in the trade, came about more or less by accident. To his friends it is a familiar story but to fellow-travelers en route to a recent convention this is the way Mr. Valentine told it:

"In 1894, Allen B. Seaman, a prominent attorney of Denver and a close personal friend of mine, put some money into the erection of some greenhouses for the purpose of helping a florist friend of his. In January of 1895 Mr. Seaman talked over with me the advisability of abandoning his investment as it then seemed unprofitable, but he and I were induced to believe that if more money were invested and larger greenhouses erected the business could be made profitable under its then management and I agreed to give some slight attention to the book-keeping and handling of the accounts. At that time neither of us imagined that it ever would be necessary that I should give my personal attention to the greenhouse business as such; but later on it became apparent that the only way to save the investment was for me to take hold of the active management. I knew absolutely nothing about the business, and in fact there were a great many of the common flowers that I did not even know by name. I realized that I was up against a tough proposition, but I immediately subscribed for the two trade papers which were then being published and sat up nights to read anything and everything that I could get hold of which had any bearing upon the florists' business.

"No one needs to be told that at the start I met with a great many expensive failures. In addition to my reading I made it a point to travel as extensively as I felt I could afford and visited the prosperous florists' establishments in the different parts of the country. I have been a pretty regular attendant at the meetings of the Society of American Florists and the Carnation Society and believe that these various trips have been productive of a great deal of good to me. In fact, I believe they have been the best expended dollars that I have spent in the florists' business."

In September of 1904 Mr. Seaman died very suddenly. Since that time, until the present date, his estate has retained its interest in the concern; but just at this writing Mr. Valentine is closing a transaction by which the estate parts with all active interest in the business and he is letting a few of his most trusted employes acquire small holdings of stock, believing that this policy will prove of advantage to him and to them. Miss Page, who is to be the new secretary of the company, has been in Mr. Valentine's employ since 1891, which was some years before he became interested in the florists' business, and she has had charge of the company's books since 1895. Mr. Gillis, who is now in charge of the store, started as a helper at the greenhouses at $5 per week. Mr. Kennedy, who also acquires an interest, is assistant to Mr. Gillis in the store, and has been with the concern for the last two years. Mr. Valentine feels that he can attribute a large part of the success he has attained to the spirit of loyalty which he has aroused in a goodly proportion of the employes, and he does not believe that any concern can claim to have succeeded unless its employes have this real spirit of devotion.

BRANDON, MAN.—Fred Mansoff reports business good. He is building another house 15x100, which gives him 8,000 feet of glass.

ODONTOGLOSSUM CRISPUM.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made at the greenhouses of H. G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis., whose head gardener, C. H. Gebhardt, relates his experience with it as follows:

"Odontoglossum crispum is an orchid that I would not recommend to anyone who does not have a lean-to house facing north for the summer, or, better still, a house built purposely for their culture in summer, with bottom and top ventilation and roll shades. An even span house running north and south should be used for the winter, as they like the sun in winter and a warmer temperature. As it is usually given in cultural books, "keep cool," it is a mistake to keep them cool in winter. I think the most trouble is with our warm, hot summer months, but many gardeners keep them too cold in the winter. We have now for three years a limited quantity of Odontoglossum crispum and have succeeded so well that we will add a larger quantity to our collection this spring.

"We keep them in summer in our cool orchid house, a lean-to facing the north, and in winter in the cooler part of the Brazilian house and we cannot complain. This is one of the most beautiful orchids and would be the ideal orchid for the florist if it could be grown in quantity for the market. With its pure color and long sprays, a house full for Easter would be a triumph. With their long stems they are very useful for decorating a fine dinner table. I think it is the most useful of all the odontoglossums. In Europe it is the most useful of orchids for every purpose and they can not have too many.

"It is a graceful plant, producing its spikes freely and lasting for a long time if the flowers are kept dry. Odontoglossum Alexandrae has nearly pure white flowers with a golden blotch on the lip. The plants bloom at different times of the year, as the bulbs are completed, but mostly from February until April. I would advise not to allow the plants to bloom the first year after the importation and I think it will pay for the next crop, as I think more odontoglossums are ruined by letting them flower before the plants are established or strong. Anyhow, I would not let a small plant bloom unless I could get as much for the flower as the plant is worth."

CATTLEYA TRIANAE.

The most useful of all florists' cattleyas, and one of quite easy culture, is Cattleya Trianae. Flowering, as this variety does, in the winter months and over quite a long season, it is invaluable where choice flowers are in demand. Where a number of plants are grown a constant succession of blooms may be had from Christmas to Easter. The flowers are usually rosy lilac, or purple, occasionally pure white and very finely shaded, averaging six inches across. The plants appear to do equally well in pots, pans or baskets of fern fibre. The specimen illustrated was grown by Thomas Howden, Whitinsville, Mass., a very successful cultivator of orchids, and carried forty-six flowers.

DETAILS LACKING.

I have five houses with space of twelve feet between each. The boiler stands at the end of the fourth house and I have the fourth and fifth houses piped with 3-inch flows. Is that right? What size flow shall I use in the other direction and how shall I reduce it for each of the first three houses? I suppose a 3-inch flow will be right for each house? No. 4 and No. 5 each have a 3-inch flow and eight 2-inch returns. The past winter these houses were about 6 degrees warmer at the far end. How can this be remedied? How shall I connect the flow pipe with the expansion tank? I have a water tank elevated about thirty feet. Will it do for an expansion tank?

W. C. P.

It is impossible for me to give you any assistance unless you give measurements to work from. The only information given is that the houses are twelve feet apart and that you have a water tank thirty feet high. If you will give length, width, and height of sides of each house and state whether you wish to use steam or hot water I can perhaps give you an idea of the size of flow pipe and the size and number of returns required. It is probable that you can use your water tank as an expansion tank provided you have a boiler built to stand a pressure as great. The tank will give in the neighborhood of twelve pounds pressure per square inch, which will be all right if your boiler is strong.

STREPTOCARPUSES.

Few plants that are cultivated under glass have been so improved, or have risen so high in public favor during recent years as the streptocarpuses, and, considering the length of time well-grown specimens continue to flower, the great variety of colors, and the ease with which they are produced when their culture is well understood, this is not at all to be wondered at. Not only are they extremely beautiful and attractive as pot plants, but their value for supplying cut flowers can hardly be over-estimated, as they remain in a perfectly fresh condition for a considerable length of time, and also make very pleasing table decorations when suitable colors are selected, and appropriate foliage is used. The flowering season ranges over a considerable period, and, indeed, it is safe to say that by exercising a certain amount of care and forethought, there is no reason why streptocarpuses may not be had in flower every month in the year.

Streptocarpuses are frequently treated too much like stove plants, and when this is so I have never seen satisfactory results. A greenhouse temperature is what they require, and old plants, which have been flowering through the summer, should be afforded a season of rest for two or three months during winter. I have found no more suitable place for them at this season than shelves near the glass in cool houses, giving sufficient water only to prevent the foliage from flagging severely.

Raising Seedlings.

Seed may be sown either in early spring or late autumn. For choice, I prefer the New Year, either the end of January, or beginning of February, as the seedlings will then make good plants by the end of summer, and will, if required, continue to flower all through the winter. The seed being very minute, extreme care should be taken at the time of sowing. A fine, light, gritty compost should be prepared, and well-drained pots or pans should be used. Make this moderately firm, and scatter the seed thinly over the surface. Very little, if any, soil should be placed over it, but the seed should be pressed in firmly with something with an even surface. Place the pots or pans in a vessel of water, up to the rim, till the whole of the soil becomes thoroughly moistened, after which very little water will be required till the seedlings make their appearance, which generally takes place in a fortnight or sixteen days.

A piece of glass should be placed over each pot, to prevent harm from drip or insects. A temperature of 55 degrees will suit them admirably, standing them in a shady and moist part of the house. Immediately the seedlings appear shade from bright sunshine. As soon as they can be safely handled, prick off the little plants into the same kind of compost in well-drained seed-pans, growing them on in the same temperature. As soon as growth commences seriously preparations should be made for potting the seedlings singly, into 3-inch pots, using a mixture of fine peat, sifted leaf-soil, fibrous loam, and coarse silver sand, in equal quantities. Good drainage should be provided, and some clean fibre from the loam heap be placed over it. A pit will be the most suitable place for growing the young streptocarpuses in, putting them as near the glass as possible, on a bed of finely sifted cinder ashes. It will be well to mention that every plant possible should be grown so that a good selection can be made; the whole of these will flower during the summer, and the plants, in a small state, take up but very little room.

First Winter Treatment.

During August and September these will produce many flowers, and by liberally feeding and keeping them clean, they will continue to flower all through the winter, but at the same time, any which are required for making large plants during the following spring and summer should be rested as advised for older plants. The first week in February all those which have been so treated should be started into growth. First of all, well soak and cleanse the plants, carefully remove the drainage, and reduce as much of the old soil as possible without injury to the roots. The plants should be shifted on into 4½-inch pots, and the older ones, as nearly as possible, into the size they have previously occupied.

A similar compost to that already advised should be used, except that it should be rougher, and have the addition of a 6-inch potful of bonemeal, and the same of finely-crushed charcoal to every bushel of compost. Care should be taken to use this in a satisfactory condition, i. e., it should be neither too wet nor too dry, and well mixed, so that every ingredient becomes thoroughly incorporated.

A capital place to give these a start is a house carried at 55 degrees. If they are thoroughly watered at first very little more will be required till active growth has commenced, and as soon as this occurs remove the plants to a cooler and more airy structure. To attain the best results, a small span-roofed house, or one side of it, should be devoted to them. Arrange the plants on inverted flower pots, and allow sufficient room for each to stand clear of its neighbor. Syringe between the pots frequently during the daytime, and damp the paths and walls at night, but do not syringe the foliage. Failing such a position, shelves in the greenhouse provide the next best place, and even pits will grow them well. Do not fail to admit abundance of air on all favorable occasions, both night and day, as by so doing the foliage will be much improved, and the coloring of the flowers much more satisfactory.

When the pots become well filled with roots, and it is one's ambition to produce extra large specimens, these plants may receive another shift into larger pots, care being taken to disturb the roots as little as possible, and not to damage the foliage, which is certainly part of the charm of well-grown plants.

Feeding.

This should commence immediately the pots become fairly well filled with roots, and it will be perfectly safe to apply it at every other watering, and continue it all through the flowering period. I have found nothing so suitable as good Peruvian guano, properly diluted, and that made from horse, cow, and sheep manure, which should be placed in a tub, with a small bag of fresh soot, and used as required.

Insect Pests.

Thrips, green fly, and mealy bug we have found the most troublesome pests, and when mealy bug obtains a strong hold it is undoubtedly a most troublesome one, and the safest and best plan is never to allow it to become established. Green fly and thrips may easily be kept down by frequent nicotine fumigation; we make it a rule to do this about every ten days, and so can keep them thoroughly clean, and if the work is done according to the directions given with the material no damage will occur.

Shading.

During hot weather it will be necessary to shade streptocarpuses with thin blinds, removing them immediately the strong sun has passed off them, otherwise the foliage and flowers will become drawn, and generally lack that high finish which is characteristic of good culture. The blooms will last for a considerable time in a thoroughly fresh condition, and, if wanted for exhibition or any other purpose, they may be securely fixed with the aid of floral gum at the base of the flower. Except in the case of plants which are required for the production of seed, the old flower stalks should be removed immediately the flowers fade, this enabling fresh flower trusses to be produced in abundance.

Seed Saving.

Though excellent streptocarpus seed can be obtained from leading nurserymen, it is extremely interesting to save one's own, as the pleasure there is in watching the development of the flowers from one's own stock is then greatly enhanced.

The seed takes some time to mature, and a great care is necessary in cleaning and looking after it. The pods should not be picked until they are just on the point of bursting, when they should be placed in shallow boxes on stout white paper, and stood on shelves near the glass to finish. In about ten days the seed can be cleaned, and stored away. I cannot close these remarks without giving to Messrs. J. Veitch & Sons, of Chelsea, the credit for being the raisers and introducers of so many beautiful varieties of streptocarpus. Not only have they improved the individual flowers, but the habit of the plant also.—Gardeners' Magazine.

[In the United States growers find it preferable to give the seedlings 2-inch pots at the first potting and 3-inch where 4½-inch pots are advised when starting up after the rest the first winter. The putting near the glass is contrary to our modern rules of culture.—R.]

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The report of this society will be ready for distribution in a short time and will be sent to paid-up members only, so that any who are in arrears, or who would like to get this report and are not members, should at once send $2 to the treasurer, Fred Dorner, Jr., Lafayette, Ind.

Messrs. A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., offer for the meeting and exhibition in Boston next January a cup to the value of $25 for "the best collection of four varieties of carnations, twenty-five blooms of each," to be shown in separate vases. This prize will be open to all with either seedlings or named sorts and no restrictions as to color.

Any other firm or grower who desires to give special premiums for this exhibition can report them to President Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., or to the secretary. ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

LIKE A CHAMELEON.

The following very interesting newspaper telegram was sent out from San Francisco on April 15:

Luther Burbank, wizard of horticulture, has produced a carnation which changed its color three times on the first three days it came into bloom. On the first day the carnation was pure white, the second day it was a pink, while on the third day it changed to a deep red, which it retained until it faded. Gophers obliterated this type of carnation, but Burbank is at work trying to reproduce it.

Retail florists hope that Mr. Burbank may succeed in his efforts and trust that the change in hue may be fixed to occur as an indication of the period which has elapsed since the flowers were ready to cut, rather than the somewhat illusive appearance of wakefulness which is now the guide.

SOLID BEDS AGAIN.

How will carnations do in a solid bed two feet deep, with about twelve inches of ashes in the bottom, six to eight inches rotted manure and four to six inches soil on top? The steam-pipes run along the wall with a walk between the bed and wall. A. C. T.

I would not consider it advisable to put six inches of manure under the soil in your carnation beds. You will find that a good inch of manure with four inches of soil will grow as good carnations as can possibly be produced. Such a large amount of manure is likely to sicken the plants. It will at least prevent drainage. Six inches of soil is more than the plants need in one season and it is considered best to plant in fresh soil every year. Four inches of soil is plenty and we have seen very fine carnations growing in three inches of soil. Last spring we planted our Lawsons from 2½-inch pots on the bed which contained scant three inches of soil and we have had better Lawson this season than ever before. In the future we shall plant in less than four inches of soil rather than over that depth. A. F. J. BAUR.

PROPAGATING SAND.

At the last meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' Club a question was asked as to White Rock sand, what it is, where it comes from and whether it is good for propagating. In answer it was stated that "we communicated with a number of sand and stone firms in Pittsburg concerning White Rock sand, and all excepting one firm were as ignorant as we are in the matter, and they said it was crushed rock, and comes from a place called Emlington, about ninety miles up the Allegheny valley.

"We would not say which is best, but ordinary river sand is good enough to propagate in. As a rule it is not the fault of the sand that is the cause of failure, but the man who does the work. Our experience in propagating is that we get better results from coarse sand in the winter months, and fine in spring and summer."

ASTERS ON OLD GROUND.

It would be of service to me, and probably to others, if some of your practical men would give an article on the cultivation of the aster on old ground. G. M. R.

It is a little uncertain what is meant by "old" ground. If the same ground that has grown asters for several years is meant, then our experience with asters grown on the same spot for five years is that they were quite as good, even better last year than the first year. They were annually well manured. Rotation of crops is very essential with many things, but there are exceptions. Onions, for instance, are said to produce a better crop the tenth successive season than the first. With a good dressing of farm-yard manure every spring and the long rest the soil has between crops, the asters will do well on the same ground for a number of years. W. S.

HEATING FRAMES

Has any reader of the REVIEW had experience in heating hotbeds with hot water or steam? How is it done and what success may be expected in raising plants of all kinds? J. L. H.

A hotbed is a hotbed and is heated by the fermenting material of which it is made and is always a temporary structure, mostly used in early spring for early vegetables and bedding plants. A cold frame can be more or less permanent, but is usually a frame of boards covered with sash and further protected on cold nights with shutters or mats and is used in the spring months for plants that will thrive in a cool temperature, but will not endure any frost. A heated pit or frame is a permanent structure and should have low brick or cement walls and often excavated a foot or so below the surrounding surface. These low structures are most useful at any time, not only as an overflow to accommodate bedding plants in the spring, but to winter many hard-wooded plants. For instance, this spring it has been hard work to retard our azaleas. In such a frame they could have been kept just above the freezing point by regulating the heat and many days with no heat at all. They are usually heated by running a steam or hot water pipe around the wall, these pipes coming from the system which heats the houses. W. S.

TURNING PLANTS OUT OF POTS

What an experienced grower does with ease, and almost unconsciously, may, of course, be not so easy for a beginner at the work, and there are many such in these days of the rapid development of horticulture. It is so in the matter of turning plants out of their pots. It is frequently necessary to turn some of them out, it may be for the purpose of ascertaining whether they have filled their pots with roots and require potting, or whether they are too wet or too dry, or for the purpose of dislodging worms. It is a very simple matter to turn a plant out of a pot, but there is a right and a wrong way, and a brief description of the right way, with the accompanying sketches from the Gardeners' Magazine, can hardly fail to prove useful. To perform the operation smartly, place the fingers over the soil, with the plant stem between them (Fig. 1); invert, and, holding the pot with the other hand, give the rim one or more sharp taps on the front edge of a solid bench. This will cause the ball of soil to slip out of the pot (Fig. 2), and, holding it bottom upward, it may then be subjected to the necessary examination. This completed, put the pot over the ball (Fig. 3), press it down, and turn the right way up. Then, keeping the fingers firmly on the surface of the soil, give the pot one or two sharp taps on the bench to settle the plant in its place. This little operation will also prove the advantage of using perfectly clean pots for potting, for if the pots are dirty inside, when used, the new soil and new roots will stick to it in such a way that when an attempt is made to turn the plant out for examination the ball of soil becomes broken and many roots are damaged.

CAN SPORTING BE INDUCED?

[A note by L. C. Corbett, of Washington, read before the American Institute of New York, March 8, 1905.]

The sporting of plants, as we term the vegetative variations, which occur during the life of the individual is only a special form of variation. Variation we know is the natural tendency of plants and animals. The direction and extent of such variation are frequently predetermined by external circumstances—environment—or by inherent tendencies of the individual of species.

In fact, fixity of type, either in nature or under cultivation, is a very difficult thing to attain, as all seedsmen and plantsmen well know. The fixity which appears to exist in nature and which is responsible for the existence of so-called species is the result of certain limiting forces working in conjunction through countless generations. Break up this deadlock and the species almost invariably throws off varieties, a convenient term for indicating a departure from the parent type.

From what has been said it will be evident that I consider a sport simply a marked variety or variation, which may appear as a distinct individual or as a part of an individual during its period of existence, in which case, for purposes of distinction, we are pleased to call the latter a bud sport or variety.

Sporting, then, may be encouraged by extreme conditions. Either extreme feeding or extreme poverty may induce plants to sport. Severe changes in climate or soil conditions may result in decided changes in stature, habits of growth and fruitfulness, which are as marked attributes of a sport as are changes in the color of foliage or fruit.

Burpee Dwarf Lima bean is a good example of a sport where the habit of the plant was markedly changed. The white and fancy sports of the Lawson carnation are good illustrations of changes in color.

Just here I wish to note that in a bed

of Lawsons and upon a plant with otherwise normal flowers, one shoot produced a blossom one half of which was pure white while the other half was of the normal pink of the Lawson. These sports in the Lawson are exceedingly interesting, for they clearly indicate that the Lawson is composed of two parts, pink and white, in which the pink is the predominant. Under favorable conditions, however, the white asserts itself and we have the sports above spoken of. This frequent breaking out of a recessive character is all the more interesting in the case of the Lawson carnation on account of the fact that neither of its immediate parents is white, the Lawson being the result of a cross of Daybreak, pink, with Van Leeuwen, cerise. The facilities now at hand do not allow me to analyze the composition of either Daybreak or Van Leeuwen, but I suspect from the behavior of Lawson sports that one of these parents, and perhaps both of them have a strong white strain of blood in them.

From what has been said it is evident that cross-pollination is believed to be one of the most important means through which the sporting or variation of plants can be induced. The wonderful results obtained by Burbank in his work with fruits have been based almost entirely upon the practice of cross-pollination. In connection with this work there seem to be two pretty well established theories. They may be stated somewhat as follows: When working with species the more violent the cross that can be secured the more variable will be the hybrids in the second generation and the more likelihood there is of securing distinct forms or monstrosities. Second, that when working with plants which are themselves of cross-bred or hybrid origin, the peculiar attributes of the particular plants used for breeding purposes cannot be counted upon to appear in the mongrel offspring, except in so far as these characters form important dominant or recessive characters in the breeding of the parent plants.

The marvelous results achieved by some of our modern plant breeders seem to lie in their wonderful skill as manipulators of plants. Crosses have been successfully made by these men and fertile seeds obtained from plants which have been considered incompatible and so entirely distinct that it was considered heresy to seriously consider the question of making such a cross. I am free to confess that with ninety-nine persons out of every hundred engaging in such work I believe the results would be nil. The success of the one proves his superior skill and ability to discern the conditions essential for success.

The factors, then, which may be considered as contributing to the sporting of plants are: Extreme conditions in the environment, such as marked changes in latitude, altitude, soil conditions as from alluvial to desert, increased food supply the results of an excessive use of plant foods or of cultivation, and violent or continuous cross-breeding.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—W. H. Hizer does considerable in the way of landscape and nursery business and has recently been at Belvidere with a force executing an order for Judge Wright.

WARSAW, IND.—Miss Jessie Thayer and Mrs. Friend have built a greenhouse in East Warsaw and embarked in business with the intention of adding to their glass as fast as the development of trade will warrant.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The Newport Horticultural Society has completed arrangements for two exhibitions this year. For several years past the exhibitions have been held in Masonic hall, but the growth of the society and the greatly increased number of exhibits each year, together with a generous increase of interest on the part of the summer residents, gave reasons to suppose that if a more commodious as well as a more fashionably located place for these exhibitions could be obtained, still greater success would result. With this end in view the Casino, the great rendezvous of fashion, on Bellevue avenue, has been secured for the society's exhibitions. The first, an exhibition of roses, fruit, flowers and plants, will be held in June; the other, embracing all the main features of former ones, with several new and attractive classes in addition, the whole to make the greatest horticultural show ever held in this city, will be held in August.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Indications point to an exceptionally good Easter. The fortnight of warm weather followed by the cooler and then the wintry weather which opened this week, first railroaded and then shortened the crops and eventually improving their quality. Orders are coming in well, the Leo Niessen Co. reporting them excellent already for Easter, Easter week and even for the first week in May. The supply of roses and carnations will be moderate, less in most cases than earlier in the month. Sweet peas, daisies, pansies and valley will be abundant. The first named will not, however, equal the demand. This will also be true of violets, though there will be more than was anticipated.

Easter lilies will be plentiful. A surplus of good flowers is improbable. Callas are scarce, with small prospects of a good supply. Daffodils and tulips are more plentiful and bring good money, thanks to the disappearance of the southern stock and to the increased demand. Smilax is scarce, except with the Niessen Co. Asparagus is fairly plentiful. Prices are rising steadily. It seems probable that the rapid drop of five weeks ago will be recalled by an equally remarkable rise before this week is over.

The Andorra Nurseries.

The Reading or Pennsylvania train from the city to Chestnut Hill, followed by five minutes' further ride on the trolleys, brings the visitor to the cross-road scarcely a country square from the entrance to the Andorra Nurseries. By far the prettier way is to go by the picturesque Wissahickon drive, along the banks of the creek, than which there is no lovelier bit of natural scenery anywhere. You can drive, or ride the shanks mare, as I did last Sunday afternoon. The entrance to the nurseries is at the very end of the drive, the roadway winding up a hill to the high ground above, where a magnificent view stretches for miles away on all sides. Ornamental trees, shrubs and evergreens in all stages of growth are seen in bewildering numbers, down the slope on the left toward Barron Hill and up the opposite incline. It is more level on the right or city side. Behind there is a slight rise toward Roxborough, while in front is the Wissahickon, with beyond on Chestnut Hill another acreage of the nursery.

Unfortunately William Warner Harper was away and John Humphreys was resting after a strenuous week, so I cannot tell you which are the best rhododendrons or clematis or how to grow Colorado blue spruce like they do up there. I can only tell you that there are abundant signs of business enterprise and activity. Three tracts of ground in the nursery, the main one of 150 acres, sixty more on the side and ninety more over toward Chestnut Hill, say 300 in all in round figures, I was told. There was plenty of choice stock. It was going out, too, at a lively rate in lots both large and small all over the country, showing clearly that Mr. Harper has not been playing Rip Van Winkle during the past fifteen years.

A violent snow storm covered the rows and rows of trees with a coat of pure white. The sun shone on them with dazzling brilliancy, a curious and beautiful sight for mid-April. In a half hour white had given way to the former brown and green tints.

Various Notes.

The Easter plant growers are doing a heavy business. Hugh Graham was reported to have declined further orders on Saturday. Robert Craig & Son and William K. Harris have made heavy sales.

The Leo Niessen Co. is handling Hugh Graham's Easter stock of Ulrich Brunners. They are very fine.

H. W. Collins has succeeded R. G. Palmer at Doylestown. His cut goes to S. S. Pennock.

George F. Christie is sending very fine Brides to William J. Baker.

The Philadelphia Carnation Co., Harry Crawford grower, sends the best sweet peas coming into town today.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., is back from a flying trip to New York. He seems well pleased with Easter business.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have grown a very fine lot of Easter plants at their uptown place, at Twenty-second and Diamond streets.

William Berger has his lilies and other Easter plants in prime condition.

A few of the many visitors in town were R. W. Hutchison, of Sewickley, Pa.; William Feast, Charles Diedeman, H. Wells, of Baltimore; Mrs. E. A. Williams, of Pittsburg, and D. Mish, of Lebanon, Pa.

Julius Koehler & Son, Frankford, have their usual fine Easter stock.

E. J. Fancourt has returned from his western business trip.

M. Rice & Co. report that they had an exceptionally good Easter trade and attribute it to the large line of practical novelties they always carry.

William J. Muth states that the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. will be strong on valley for the Easter holiday.

The plant business has been very heavy at the wholesale cut flower houses. The Flower Market, Niessen, Pennock and Reid have all had good shipments.

Appleton & Burrell are doing well with M. Rice & Co.'s new building. It will, from present appearances, be ready ahead of time, they say by May 1.

Theodore Edwards, of Bridgeton, N. J., has some nice valley now for W. J. Baker.

Edward Reid is handling a nice lot of Easter lilies. His valley and Kaiserins are excellent.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. have bought a new farm in Jersey. The soil is just what they want for growing melons, cucumbers, pumpkins, egg plants, peppers, Spark's Earliana tomatoes and a few flower seeds.

S. S. Pennock is handling some nice Killarney roses.

An Encore.

When a florist calls to know
Just what kind of stock you grow,
And you're in an awful fright
'Cause your houses aren't all right,
Keep him talking in the shed,
'Bout boiler, fuel, pipes o'erhead,
Anything in short will do,
Till too dark to take him through.

OBITUARY.

Death of Wm. Paul.

On March 31 British horticulture lost one of its most distinguished representatives in the death of Wm. Paul, of Waltham Cross, at the ripe age of 82 years. While Mr. Paul had devoted much attention to such subjects as hollyhocks, hyacinths, camellias, hollies, ivies, pelargoniums, etc., it was as a rosarian that he gained his chief distinction. He was conspicuous in all activities in the interest of the rose and some dozens of new sorts were raised and introduced by him. Of these probably the best known one in America is Magna Charta. Mr. Paul was one of the earliest of those upon whom the Victorian Medal in Horticulture was conferred.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

Trade during the past week has been really good and there promises to be a shortage, particularly in carnations. The orders booked for the latter part of the week will use up all that can be cut in this vicinity. Roses are a good crop and the demand is brisk and prices good. Easter lilies are selling quickly at 12½ cents and are of excellent quality. There is also a scarcity of smilax and adiantum and a good demand for both. Plumosa is plentiful and selling well.

The United States Cut Flower Co. has a show of Beauties, lilies and callas worth seeing and which they are disposing of at good prices, their shipping department keeping a large staff busy.

La France, Rawson and the other growers are all busy and in good spirits, so that it looks well for a good Easter.

The weather has been very unfavorable but there are signs of improvement, which we are all hoping for. R.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

H. P. Kelsey, Boston, surplus list nursery stock; Edw. Teas, Joplin, Mo., circular of Rhus typhina laciniata; Shatemuc Nurseries, Barrytown, N. Y., plants; E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, supplies; Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago, nursery stock; Cleveland Cut Flower Co., Cleveland, O., Easter price list.

GRUNDY CENTER, IA.—J. E. Jones reports a very satisfactory business. He finds vegetables a very good crop, as there is no other supply in this vicinity.

NORRISTOWN, PA.—W. H. Catanese has started to put up two houses 18x75 feet for carnations and bedding stock. Easter stock was sold out well in advance.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The past week has seen nothing noteworthy in the way of demand and the principal interest has centered on the orders coming in for Easter shipments. Some of these are exceptionally large and immense quantities of stock will be required to meet all requirements in the remaining days of the present week.

Quite naturally receipts diminished in quantity, for every effort has been made by the growers to hold their cut until the Easter demand calls for it. In this they have been favored by cool weather and the prospects are for large supplies of very excellent quality. The only exception may be in the carnation line. Some of the growers report being pretty well off crop and it is certain that receipts have been light for several days, but there is, however, a probability that a good many flowers are in storage. There is every indication of plenty of Easter lilies and the only item which affords any concern is the violet. A number of retailers have placed orders ranging into many thousands and it is problematical if they will get the stock. Receipts have been very light the past week and what few have come in "shake" badly and a good many show a brown spot in the center of the flower. The season is about over.

Mechanical Watering.

Louis Wittbold, of the Geo. Wittbold Co., has for a long time been at work on a semi-automatic method of watering and syringing in greenhouses. He has at length hit upon a device which seems to be just the thing. He lays a ½-inch pipe down the middle of the bench on the surface of the soil. This is fitted with nozzles about every three feet and about every twenty-five feet is supplied with a feed hose. An ingenious device turns the water on the whole length at once and a swivel handle permits directing the streams from the nozzles wherever desired. He can run his apparatus with ten pounds pressure and provide a solid sheet of water the entire length of the bed. A patent has been applied for.

Death of Mrs. Thompson.

Mary J. Thompson, mother of J. D. Thompson, of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., died at her home in Joliet on Sunday. She was a sister of Mrs. H. N. Higinbotham and well known throughout the state for her activity in matters social and charitable. The funeral occurred on Tuesday and the floral tributes constituted one of the largest displays ever seen in Joliet.

Various Notes.

George Wienhoeber reached home last Saturday from his European trip. He is fully restored to health and has his coat off for a big week's work.

Wieter Bros. have already planted seven houses with Beauties.

Percy James is now employed in the store of Weiland & Risch.

E. L. Fetzner is now with T. F. Hudson, at Houston, Texas.

Matt Mann is sending Zeeh & Mann the first gladioli of the season. They are fine and have sold readily.

Harry B. Tufts, formerly clerk at the Hotel Morrison, has bought out Graff's store on Washington street and engaged Charlie Balluff as his assistant.

L. N. T. Whittin has sold out his place at 268 North Rockwell street and retired from business.

Among the week's divorce cases are those of Howard W. Metz, who seeks separation from Jeannette K. Metz, and Amelia R. Wiltgen, whose husband, Eugene Wiltgen, is a vegetable grower at Rogers Park. Mrs. Wiltgen testified that her husband's business was worth $10,000 a year.

Among the week's visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hincliff of Racine, Wis. They now conduct the business formerly owned by Mrs. Pike. C. R. Hills, of Grand Rapids, was also a visitor.

Vaughan & Sperry report a good sale on Crimson Ramblers and Beauties flowered in pots. They have also sold a good lot of violet plants in pans.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is getting some especially good sweet peas.

J. A. Budlong is cutting very good Boston Market and has a big crop on.

Next year Boston Market and Lady Bountiful are to be his two whites, planted in equal quantity.

Robert Northam has sold his store on the west side and is now manager of the cut flower department at Hillman's.

E. C. Amling says he is selling 500 strings of smilax a day.

O. W. Frese, at Poehlmann Bros.' reports one Easter order which calls for 8,000 Lawson if they care to let one buyer have so many.

At Tuesday's election Henry Klehm was elected president of the town of Arlington Heights.

Kennicott Bros. Co. report wild smilax over with them for the season. They have done a big business in this line the past winter and expect to do even more next season, handling the output of Caldwell the Woodsman, the oldest and probably largest shipper.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

What a godsend this weather has been to the plantmen! The temperature for a week past has been chilly and on Sunday it was cold enough for snow. There is now every assurance of a grand plant supply, of splendid quality of cut flowers, and of fine, warm temperature for the great festival.

The last was not a good business week by any means. If supplies had been profuse there would have been no possible outlet. Lilies are abundant and the best of the plants will hold their 12-cent value to the end. No good lilies will sell below 10 cents and those you hear of at 8 cents have gone to the usual clearing houses for trash, the department stores, where cheapness is the only recognized basis of negotiation. This applies to all of them, with possibly one lone exception, and includes the hardy shrubs, roses and trees these places handle.

Violets are scarce. The cool weather has been of service and the supply for Easter promises to be larger than at first expected. If any good flowers reach the market they will command $1. Southern lilac and arbutus are here in quantity and sell well. There is plenty of bulbous stock and excellent, but Will Siebrecht, at his big bulb factory in Astoria, declared several days before Easter he did not want to see another buyer and every flower had been engaged.

Various Notes.

A call on A. Schultheis, of College Point, revealed an Easter stock of great extent and interest. This fine establishment was ablaze with color and everything in the right condition. There were hosts of blue hydrangeas, Crimson Ramblers, Dorothy Perkins and bougainvilleas, a whole house of them, and azaleas, ericas and lilies, and there are also thousands of Ramblers and hydrangeas for the after-Easter trade, coming in gradually right up to Decoration Day. There are three entire houses of Ramblers in every size and style, as fine a lot as I ever saw. Among the boxes ready for shipment I noticed several labeled to the leading stores in Chicago. Mr. Schultheis has promised to bring his family of nine to the club's outing in June. One of the prizes offered is for the largest family there, with the odds in favor of College Point.

Great plantings of trees in the city parks of New York are in progress. The Rapid Transit Commission, however, has failed to renew the beauty of the boulevard and has left the good intent too long for this spring's accomplishment.

These are the days of auctions in the horticultural trade and both centers, Cleary's and Elliott's, are filled at every performance. I notice a familiar face on the rostrum at Cleary's. John is welcomed by everybody and, with his brothers at the financial end of the enterprise, there should be some strenuous days at "Horticultural Hall."

Ralph M. Ward & Co. have found a more suitable center for their growing bulb business and will move May 1 to 12 West Broadway.

Arthur Boddington reports a great demand for hardy roses and peonies and an exceptionally busy spring.

Every seed house in the city is working overtime and is crowded with additional helpers and anxious customers. There is hardly standing room in some of the big retail stores downtown.

M. A. Bowe has extra facilities, artists and all the requisites for a big Easter at his "heart of the city" place on Broadway.

Leikens, near the Waldorf-Astoria, is also "in it" as to location, close to the greatest caravansary on the continent. He is gathering fast a clientele from the 400 who are all around him.

Herrmann, of East Thirty-fourth street, says the demand for his metal designs has been abnormal for Easter. He is adding yearly to his facilities and the volume of his business.

L. Wertheimer & Co. report a wide demand for their Japanese moss, which combines quality and cheapness. They are headquarters for Japanese novelties.

Siebrecht & Son will have the greatest Easter display in their thirty-five years of business. With the great store and their immense conservatories at New Rochelle, their facilities are unequalled. Mr. Siebrecht, Sr., reports a great demand for their young plants of the Killarney rose.

Bonnot Bros. and W. H. Siebrecht have now a private telephone in the Cut Flower Exchange, Coogan building.

Crawbuck & Wiles control the "green goods" trade in Brooklyn. Their success has been rapid. They have millions of galax in storage.

I was surprised on a visit last week at the greenhouses of the F. R. Pierson Co., at Tarrytown, to find house after house filled with the new fern, Tarrytown elegantissima. I had no idea so large a stock could possibly be ready for distribution. It is a prolific grower and many grand specimens are in evidence. Mr. Pierson tells me the demand for the young stock has started in far beyond his expectations.

H. A. Stone, of Kingston, has been shipping his fine single violets all winter to Saltford, of West Twenty-ninth street.

Mr. Wade, of Wadley & Smythe, was in Woods Hole last week attending to the shipping of the Easter Ramblers, including Wedding Bells, the entire stock of which is handled by this enterprising Fifth avenue house.

Cotsonas & Co. report that the call for Easter greens is away ahead of all previous records.

H. C. Steinhoff, of Hoboken, has been the Crimson Rambler king of New Jersey for several years. This season is no exception to the rule. He has everything for Easter, or rather did have, for now the abnormal demand has left him, like all the other growers in the harbor, with all goods out of the hold and sails being trimmed for another voyage.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The usual holding back process has been in evidence for a number of days. Supplies have fallen off very perceptibly. This is an advantage in some ways, as demand has been comparatively light. Prices have averaged a little higher, more especially on colored roses, carnations and violets.

Indications point to an abundant supply for Easter, of everything except violets. Even of these latter there will be a fair quantity, as we have had a good deal of cool, cloudy weather of late, which has prevented them from running out entirely. This same weather is causing worry to some whose lilies are rather backward and the sweating process is necessary to get them in. As a rule, however, growers have them sufficiently well forward without adopting these practices. The average price for flower and bud appears to be 12½ cents and there seem likely to be enough to fill all demands.

Pot plants are a big factor. In addition to lilies there are quantities of Crimson, Pink and Baby Ramblers, Brunners and other hybrids, azaleas, bulbous stock in variety, lily of the valley, rhododendrons, genistas, ericas, bougainvilleas, spiraeas and a miscellaneous assortment of other plants. We have not noticed anything especially new, except the Pink and Baby Rambler roses. We anticipate the best Easter business on record if we are given favorable weather conditions.

Florists' Club.

Although the Easter preparatory rush kept some away from the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on April 18, there was, nevertheless, a first-class attendance. Although there was no regular essayist, much business was transacted. Several new members were elected. It was announced that a field day would be held at the pot manufactory of A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, on April 29.

An interesting discussion took place on the following question: "In view of the rapid deterioration of roses, carnations and other florists' flowers, by propagation from plants grown under forced conditions, would it not be well to consider the matter of procuring stock for forcing from plants grown under natural conditions, such as would be obtained further south, where the climate would permit open ground culture all the year around? It would seem that many varieties, valuable to the trade, are too soon rendered useless and that hybridization, too, is adversely affected by the above cause and that a remedy should be found."

It was decided to hold a picnic about June 20, ladies to be included. The entertainment committee reported a balance of over $100 after paying all expenses in connection with the late rose convention banquet.

Various Notes.

Williams & Willard, at the Taunton Greenhouses, have a thousand pots of longiflorum lilies in prime condition for Easter, also a fine lot of spiraeas, bulbous stock, genistas and other plants.

Farquhar & Co. have imported a quantity of standard H. P. roses worked on rugosa stock, which they think will be adapted better for the New England climate than any tried heretofore.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are doing a heavy business in southern smilax and wreathing for Easter. Their dagger and other ferns are now of fine quality.

Killarney rose seems likely to be grown largely outdoors in this section for bedding purposes this season. Its popularity is also tempting some to try it indoors.

Among those who are sending in fine flowering plants to the stores or markets are Thomas Roland, W. W. Edgar, A.

Leuthy & Co., Farquhar & Co., Mann Bros., E. Sutermeister, B. Washington, Anderson & Williams and J. T. Butterworth.

E. N. Peirce & Co.'s immense stock of longiflorum lilies is in grand condition for Easter. The plants are very stocky and show hardly a trace of disease.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week was another very unsatisfactory one. Business came in spots. Stock is still plentiful and cheap, especially bulbous stock. Jonquils and Narcissus poeticus from the south are a big glut. Every wholesaler is loaded up with them at prices from 25 to 50 cents per hundred. Harrisii, callas, Dutch hyacinths and tulips are too many for the demand. Roses in all grades are still plentiful, especially in white and pink. Fancy long Beauties are becoming somewhat scarce and demand better. Shorts are enough for all.

Carnations are also coming in heavily, quality very good. White has the call over the colored stock. The price went up a little on fancy stock. Commons are still very cheap, with few buyers. Sweet peas sell well. Home-grown lilac is abundant, with slow sales. Smilax and other greens are in plenty with some demand.

All reports indicate a brisk and satisfactory trade for Easter, also that stock of all kinds will be plentiful and reasonable in price. A great many fine plants have already been sold for Easter delivery and we hope to be able to make a good report of the Easter trade in St. Louis.

Florists' Club.

The club meeting on April 13 was well attended considering the very busy times with the growers. The meeting opened at 2 o'clock with eighteen members present. President Juengel and Vice-president Pilcher were absent and ex-President Benke opened the meeting. The building and show committees reported progress. Then Chairman Koenig, of the committee on constitution, read the different sections, which were adopted after a discussion which occupied two hours. Applications for membership were received from C. H. Foreman, of Louisiana, Mo.; H. F. W. Aue, of St. Louis, both growers, and George Angermueller, wholesale florist.

It was decided that the eighteenth anniversary of the club will take place in September and the trustees were instructed to prepare an entertainment at which the members and their families can take part.

The regular September meeting will take place at H. Weber & Sons, as per invitation. The next meeting will take place Thursday afternoon, May 11.

Various Notes.

Edwin Loydt opened his floral establishment on April 13, at 918 North Kings highway, with music and refreshments, which drew quite a gathering of people to that neighborhood during the day.

Mrs. Quinn, wife of the late Pat Quinn, has advertised her place for sale.

Henry Berning has recovered from his recent illness and is again attending to business.

Carl Beyer is out again and looks none the worse from his ten days' confinement.

Prof. Trelease, of the Missouri Botanic Gardens, has returned from his trip to Mexico, and is back at his post looking the picture of health.

Mayor Wells was inaugurated to his second term of office on Tuesday of last week. The council chamber was adorned with large bunches of American Beauties and a fine decoration of plants. Other officers also received a number of fine floral designs from friends.

The Plant and Cut Flower Growers' Association met in Louisiana Hall April 19.

Wm. Bouche, landscape gardener for the Park View Realty Co., of Richmond Heights, reports that he will draw plans for Judge Laughlin's place in the country. No expense will be spared to make these the finest grounds around St. Louis.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held a field meeting at Allentown, Mo., on Saturday. A special car left Tower Grove station early in the morning filled with young botanists. Prof. H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Botanic Gardens, was in charge.

John Burke and family left for California last week to spend the summer.

Mr. Burke reports that should he find an opportunity to go into business while there he will remain on the coast.

George E. Kessler, director of park restoration, reports that summer will find Forest park in better shape than ever.

J. G. Hayden, of Hummel & Downing Co., Milwaukee, was in town the past week.

BUFFALO.

Weather and Trade.

Cold winds, snow flurries and the mercury hovering round the freezing point describe present conditions and "no warm weather in sight" is the sad news of the atmosphere man. Everything is ready for a record-breaking Easter business and some genial weather is all we need. It has naturally been rather quiet of late. We notice violets getting poorer and scarcer. Roses promise to be plentiful, but carnations with the local growers are decidedly off crop and are likely to command a good price.

The Spring Show.

The Sweeney Co. department store exhibition was an unqualified success and $1,000 in cash prizes were distributed, only a few classes not filling. Veteran florists and gardeners proclaimed it a beautiful sight and, having seen some shows in much larger cities, the writer cannot remember one that equaled it for general effect. We have the same old grievance to make, viz., that several local firms who could have exhibited chose to ignore it entirely, yet if they had come in there is a question where all the stuff could have been put. As it was the 15,000 square feet of floor space was well filled and on Thursday a good many of the exhibits had to be crowded to admit space for the cut flowers. We have seen tables too high and tables too low. It appealed to me that on this occasion the height was ideal for everything, just eighteen inches. The tables were 5x10 feet.

Charles Sandiford, gardener to J. J. Albright, was the largest and, I might add, the best exhibitor. His exhibits in every class were superb. His 100 square feet of Easter plants, flower and foliage, arranged for effect was greatly admired. Louis H. Neubeck, our president, was a liberal exhibitor and was particularly strong in grand flats of tulips and Von Sions, as well as among the plant classes. The William Scott Co. exhibited in nearly all the classes. T. Venneman, gardener to George Urban, Jr., exhibited a fine collection of begonias and in many other classes. The Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, sent a grand collection of flowering plants. Among the exhibits of Charles Guenther, of Hamburg, was a group of well grown Schizanthus Wisetonensis. This pretty annual is most attractive and should be grown by us all as an inexpensive Easter plant. The competition among the bulbous stuff was keen and finer tulips and hyacinths we have never seen or ever expect to see.

The cut flower exhibit was wisely deferred until the third day, Thursday. The vases of 100 American Beauties dwarfed into humility all else, for the vases put up by W. F. Kasting, Charles H. Keitsch and Louis H. Neubeck were perfection and the prizes went that way, although there was little to choose. The Bridesmaid and Brides of Charles Guenther were superb, as all his rose products are, and as good a grower and judge as Robert Bard, of Syracuse, is acknowledged to be, we think he was slightly off when he gave first prize to Mr. Kasting's Kaiserin over Mr. Guenther's 100 magnificent Brides.

There was a fine display of carnations. The principal exhibitors were William Ehmann, of Corfu; The Chicago Carnation Co., Lake View Rose Gardens, William Scott Co., and A. Schoenfeldt, of Westfield, N. Y. Perhaps the finest vase in the hall was Cardinal, as perfect as we have ever seen this splendid scarlet. Mr. Hartshorne will be surprised to know that his fine vase of Lady Bountiful was second to Alba, grown by Mr. Ehmann. This does not say anything about habit or quantity of flowers that these varieties produce, but flower against flower as they were staged, we agreed with Mr. Bard.

The plants were judged by Roderick Cameron, of Niagara Falls, Ont., the first day. The plants arranged for effect and baskets, were judged by Mr. Nelson, of Rochester, on the second day and the cut flowers by Robert Bard, of Syracuse, on the third day. They all gave the most entire satisfaction. Any little criticism of "Bobby's" judgment is my own. Not a murmur was heard from an exhibitor and the result has further confirmed us that one judge for one department is far better than two, three, or half a dozen.

We saw the same interested faces on all four days and heard the same expression time and again: "Beautiful!" "Wonderful!" I wished every soul in the city could have seen it. Our flower shows are now inseparable from Charlie H. Keitsch and once again he showed his tact and ability. After the few early hours of the first day all ran smoothly and when all the cut flowers were in place Thursday morning he felt that all his hard work was rewarded. He traveled around with a mellow, complacent smile, for the show was a success and beautiful to look upon. An all-star orchestra sent its sweet strains over the flowers and pretty bonnets and still prettier faces and when you have space to spare I will ask you to publish in "condensed form" the prize winners of this pleasant affair.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1905.

THE navy bean grown for commercial purposes is again cutting a figure in fixing the contract growing price of the garden varieties.

It is reported that there are still a few onion sets to be had at scattered points. The demand is not so active as it would be if the weather were better.

THE canners have found a rapidly extending market for spinach and will pack larger quantities this season. Considerable inquiry is heard for seed.

STANDARD VARIETIES of seed potatoes from general reports are not moving any better. The high priced novelties in seed potatoes are said to be selling well, however.

THE United States Department of Agriculture has published a new bulletin on alfalfa, treating the subject fully and devoting a chapter to growing and harvesting for seed.

A SECOND season for the planting of beans will be a result of the frosts recently reported from the southern Atlantic states. Already there is a brisk call from that section for beans to re-plant.

THE United States General Appraisers have sustained an importer's contention that certain dill and parsley seeds should have been classified by the customs collector as "aromatic seeds, which are drugs."

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture reports that in 1903 this country exported 151,985 pounds of ginseng valued at $796,008, a slight increase in quantity and decrease in value as compared to the record for 1901.

At Chicago the cold weather of April has prevented the seed sown for onion sets appearing above ground to date. It is not thought that this will prevent a good stand later on but if weather conditions were more favorable the growers would feel happier.

THE unseasonable and low temperature which has prevailed generally throughout the country for the past two weeks has eased trade up considerably. The mail order seedsmen have felt the falling off more than the others, it is reported, and the loss for April will draw heavily from the increase that March gave to the receipts for 1905.

THE village of Baiersdorf, Bavaria, which has the reputation of raising the finest horseradish in Europe, is about twenty-two miles south of Bamberg, on the line of railroad to Nuremberg. Horseradish is cultivated almost exclusively on about 1,335 acres of the moist grounds of the valley of the river Regnitz. The average yearly yield amounts to about 55,000 hundredweight (6,050,000 pounds). Most of the product is exported to Austria, the Netherlands, Switzerland and France. It is packed in heavy barrels, containing about 1,000 roots each, and the price varies from 2½ to 4 cents a pound.

INOCULATING LEGUMES.

The Department of Agriculture says that "The publication of the results obtained with pure cultures in inoculating leguminous plants has resulted in such a demand for this material that it has been impossible to meet the demand. The patent which the department holds upon the method of growing and distributing these organisms was taken out in such a way that no one can maintain a monopoly of the manufacture of such cultures and so as to permit of its being taken up and handled commercially. The commercial product is being handled quite generally by seedsmen. Upon application the department has furnished all necessary information to the bacteriologists representing properly equipped concerns."

ERFURT SEED REPORT.

The Erfurt, Germany, correspondent to the Horticultural Trade Journal writes in part as follows:

The winter has not been such as pleases the gardeners here, who like plenty of snow to protect the plants and hard frost to pulverize the ground and destroy the various insect pests.

Sales have in most articles been satisfactory. Many sorts of beans such as Scarlet and White Runners, Pale Dun, Osborn's and Flageolet Victoria Dwarf, are cleared out and enquirers from all sides have to remain unsatisfied. In leeks, almost a complete clearance has been effected, and stocks have not been so low for many years. On the other hand radishes have not moved off very briskly, and plenty of seed is still in the warehouse. Cab-

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The general trade has been very good the past week. Stock of all kinds has been plentiful, except carnations, which continued scarce all week. Sunday being Palm Sunday made a special demand for flowers Saturday for church use.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams made good use of her large show-window by making a very handsome display of lilac, azaleas, rhododendrons and ferns the past week.

Geddis & Blind Bros. had a very handsome window Saturday, of Easter plants with a basket of yellow Spanish iris as the central piece.

The Pittsburg Floral Co. is the name of a new concern which has opened at the corner of Fifth avenue and Liberty street, to take care of the plant business for Easter. They have secured a very handsome corner store and should do a good Easter business.

We have had enough variety of weather to satisfy anyone, even for April. However, the dark, cool weather has helped some of the plantmen to hold stock which otherwise would have been too far advanced.

The ice chamber in the large box of J. B. Murdoch & Co. caved in Saturday morning, dropping about a ton and a half of ice among a lot of lilies and other stock, causing considerable loss besides inconvenience.

A letter from Ben Elliott, at Los Angeles, Cal., informs us that he has just arrived there and that he is well. The climate is grand about this time, but between the lines we read that Pittsburg is God's country to Ben.

A trip to the Allegheny Market at this season is as good as visiting a flower show. The boys over there make a display that would be a credit to any city. When you talk about nerve, energy and push you are talking about those Allegheny boys and they do the business they deserve.

Randolph & McClements have a grand display of everything one can think of in Easter plants. Mr. McClements' trip east was not for nothing; they have many Easter novelties in baskets for plants which are very attractive.

While the hail did considerable damage to the A. W. Smith houses, one would not believe it when they see the large loads of grand azaleas, cinerarias, and other blooming plants they are bringing in every day. Their store is simply a bower of beauty.

Breitenstein & Flemm are making good use of their handsome show-windows these days with original arrangements of plants. Don't think that original is the wrong word; you will always see something original where Mr. Breitenstein has a hand in it.

L. I. Neff manages to make use of all the stock from his Aspinwall and new Cheswick greenhouses. His four stores are filled with handsomely arranged pans of tulips, hyacinths and other nice things which are coming in just right for Easter. The wonder is how Mr. Neff can look after his many interests and still have time for a social chat, but he says it is easy; have a good system, hire good men, and pay them all they can possibly earn, and you will make money and not be killed with worry either.

Theodore P. Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., has the sincere sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his father, who was known to most of the trade and loved by all for his kindly disposition.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., has been in the city attending the funeral of his father. Hoo-Hoo.

The Market.

Since the first of April there has been weather to please the bulb growers and plantmen, particularly those whose stock was at an advanced stage. From a business standpoint it has been decidedly unseasonable and the retailers report sales below the average for this time of the year. Nevertheless all made large preparations for the grand rally at Easter.

Easter lilies, generally speaking, are of very fair quality and most growers are on time. Very little disease is noticeable. Azaleas, marguerites, Ramblers, H. P. roses, spiræas, hydrangeas and Dutch bulbs will be plentiful and of very good quality. There will be no advance in prices over former years and a large sale should result.

Cut flowers will not be overabundant and the quality extra fine. Beauties will be very limited locally. Tea roses and Meteors will be more plentiful, many local growers being in good crop. Carnations will be in fair supply and of superior quality. Sweet peas, valley and bulbous stock will be on hand in large quantities.

A New Store.

It is eminently proper at this time to particularly mention the opening of Smith & Fetters' new store on Euclid avenue, Monday, April 10. In a nutshell I may say it is of metropolitan character and a perfect dream of beauty and magnificence. The color scheme is of a light greenish tint, with decorations of a trifle darker shade. Expensive chandeliers play a very prominent part. A spacious workroom is in the rear, with offices above. The cost of decorating and furnishing the store was between $5,000 and $8,000.

With the Growers.

At J. M. Gasser Co.'s, Rocky River, we found Mr. Wm. Smith, manager in charge. About 1,000 perfect lilies were just right, also extra fine hydrangeas, Ramblers, lilacs, azaleas, spiræas, Dutch hyacinths and tulips. Roses and carnations are a trifle off crop.

H. A. Hart will have a fine lot of Easter stock. Lilies were very good. Ramblers, H. P. roses, spiræas and a very fine batch of hydrangeas were just right, also pans and pots of bulbous stock.

Jas. Eadie has some choice stock just right for Easter.

Mrs. A. Schmitt, of Glenville, was visited. Here we found Charles Schmitt with sleeves rolled up and hustling among as perfect a lot of Easter plants as the writer has seen for many days. Several hundred perfect lilies are in cold frames. A magnificent lot of Ramblers are deep in color and a mass of bud and bloom. Dorothy Perkins is also very fine. Azaleas, genistas, spiræas, marguerites, H. P. roses and bulbous stock could not be beaten or better timed for Easter.

Fred Aul is a neighbor of Mrs. Schmitt and also has a fine collection of Easter plants, bulbous stock and spiræa predominating. Casper Aul has a good stock of hydrangeas, lilacs and bulbous stock in prime condition.

G. M. Naumann's was the only place where no lilies were seen. He claims there is nothing in them at the prevailing low price. We found some very choice stock, nevertheless. Azaleas, deutzias, genistas and marguerites were all of good quality.

S. N. Pentecost is on hand with a collection of Easter plants which would vie with the best growers. Here we found azaleas, lilies, Ramblers, H. P. roses, etc., right on time.

George Smith has hit Easter just right with a fine lot of clean, healthy plants, which are always characteristic of this place.
FOREST CITY.

MEADVILLE, PA.—Geo. W. Haas & Son report this winter's business as very good, a little more than a fourth greater than last season. There was considerable snow here April 16.

WICHITA, KAN.—The florists of Wichita have been holding a three days' flower show at the store of Innes & Co. The exhibitors were C. P. Mueller, W. H. Culp & Co., Hersey Greenhouse Co., C. A. Rose and the Fairview Greenhouse Co.

Who Is The Florist?

Ever Hear that Expression at a Wedding?

It means attractive wedding decorations and decorations that please mean dollars to the Florist who designed them.

The bride and groom who are the two happiest persons on earth at this time, will always remember your work and the guests will find out who the Florist is.

Here Is a Valuable Tip For You.

Make your decorations shine out bold.

Interweave them with ribbons.

It is really wonderful what a ribbon bow here and a knot there will do, but try it. Let us help you. We make the best line of Florists' Ribbons on the market today, in beautiful soft weaves and shades that match flowers.

Don't put off writing for samples. Do it now. It pays.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Vegetable Forcing.

S. B. CHESTER, president of the Cleveland Market Gardeners' Association, may be addressed on R. F. D. No. 2, Brooklyn, O.

THE 1905 report of the horticulturist at the Vermont Experiment Station contains interesting chapters under the headings: "Some Problems in Winter Forcing of Tomatoes"; "Some Studies in Indoor Lettuce Culture"; "Etherization as an Aid in Rhubarb Forcing."

J. HEAD, a grower at Worthing, claims to have discovered the cause and preventive of the disease which has threatened to put an end to cucumber forcing in Great Britain. He asks for $2,000 for his secret but offers that growers put it into the hands of a trustee, not to be paid to him until it has been proven that his remedy is real.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Leaf lettuce, 25c case; head lettuce, $2 to $4.50 bbl.; cucumbers, $1 doz.; spinach, 40c to 75c box.

BOSTON, April 17.—Lettuce, $1 to $2.25 per box of three doz.; cucumbers, $2.50 to $7.50 box; mushrooms, 75c to $1 lb.; tomatoes, 30c to 40c lb.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Cucumbers, 40c to $1 doz.; lettuce, 25c to 75c doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 55c lb.; radishes, $1 to $3 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, $2 to $4 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 30c lb.

TOMATO PLANTS.

Tomato plants intended for early outdoor work should be kept moved up so as to keep them growing freely. Even though they have to be planted from 6-inch pots it is better to put them into these, rather than allow them to become pot-bound and stunted in growth. Though tomatoes will recover and get to growing freely about as quickly as any plants I know of, when rather poor, stunted plants are used, still, this is not the condition in which they should be planted for early work, when so much depends upon getting them in at the earliest possible date.

On the other hand, there is a possibility of getting them too strong and soft, in which condition more or less check is sure to result, so the idea should be, as near as possible, to strike a happy medium.

Care should also be exercised in the gradual hardening off of the plants previous to planting them out, so that they can be transferred from the pots to the open ground with the least possible check.

Some may think that this strict attention to these small matters is making altogether too much fuss, but it is in the careful attention to just such little things that the secret of success lies, and it is the grower who pays the most attention to just such little things who is going to get his ripe fruit first in the market and get the chance of commanding the best price obtainable.

W. S. CROYDON.

SAVING CUCUMBER SEED.

The principal object in the saving of cucumber seeds is to secure good, plump, well ripened seeds that will be sure to germinate freely and strongly. There is not so much chance of improving the strain of these as there is in the case of tomatoes, as they seldom show any decided departure from the original stock, but by the selection of well formed fruit the strain can be improved to a certain extent. And when you have good fresh seed of your own saving it often saves considerable trouble and disappointment.

With the White Spine variety no extra care need be exercised regarding pollination, as the fruit will not mature unless pollination has taken place. With what is known as the English frame varieties, however, the case is different, as the fruit will swell to the normal size without pollination, but of course would not mature seed. Chance pollination by insects or other means might take place, but this should not be relied on if seed is desired. It is safer to hand pollinate and make sure of results.

If the strain is to be kept true it is best to grow the variety in a house by itself, or, if this cannot be done, to grow a few plants for seed purposes in a frame apart from other varieties to insure against their becoming mixed. In fact, the frame is generally the most convenient place to grow the plants for seed purposes, as it takes the fruit quite some time to thoroughly ripen up after it has reached the stage when it is most suitable for table use, and it is not always convenient to leave a plant or two to ripen seed after the other plants have passed their usefulness and been thrown out to make room for younger stock.

Plants may be started almost any time for seeding purposes, but the present is about the most convenient time of the whole year. Started now, with the approach of warm weather they can be grown on and the fruit matured better and with less trouble than at any other time. It is well to be in no hurry with the gathering of the fruit, as so much depends on thorough ripening.

ROSES IN WINTER.

I would like to know what varieties and what age of plants to use for roses for flowering outdoors in mid-winter in the vicinity of San Bernardino. We have little frost and can give some protection in case of heavy storms. I know that I must make them rest in summer to get flowers in winter but do not know just how to manage it.

H. L. A.

Regarding roses, if the season is not severe there is no difficulty in having a fair supply of cut roses all winter. As there is no rain here during the summer and fall, it is only necessary to see that the plants do not have any moisture after about the end of May. By the first of September they will have had sufficient rest to keep them growing all winter, with the assistance of moisture in case the expected rainfall does not happen. They can now be pruned, but only sparingly, and in a few weeks they will put forth a fresh growth. The object in starting them as early as September is to get them started in healthy growth before the cold weather stops operations. If you have good varieties, such as Bride, Bridesmaid, Papa Gontier, Liberty, Rainbow, Maman Cochet, Marie Van Houtte, Duchess and such everblooming tea roses, it will surprise you what a quantity of perfect blooms can be cut all winter. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

We have noticed a slight falling off in the demand for cut flowers in the past two weeks and nothing worthy of special mention has transpired. It was a sort of happy medium, with no oversupply and odds in favor of the producer. Prospects are bright for a good Easter trade and, while there will not be the variety as in past years, we expect to have plenty of lilies, carnations and roses. The weather has been phenomenal, the mercury ranging from 66 to 80 degrees at midday and we needed it to bring along the cut flowers. The March lion remained in seclusion and April showers are few and far between.

Spring planting is still taxing the efforts of the plantmen and those who make this line their specialty are unanimous in pronouncing this season the best in history. Two weeks hence the clean-up will be complete. Roses are a feature. The geraniums and other small garden plants are not so extensively used here as in the eastern cities.

We write with pride that where the unsightly billboards did a flourishing business four months ago may now be seen a prettier sight. Neither is the desire to embellish and improve the garden confined to Portland, for the country people seem to have caught the fever and catalogue trade has been far beyond our expectations. H. J. Florists' Club.

The Seattle Florists' Association, which was organized last November, has for its members nearly all the representative florists, gardeners and nurserymen of our thriving city. The membership is now thirty-four and at the next meeting will be increased to about forty. The following are the officers: President, Joseph Chalmers; vice-president, J. W. Thompson; treasurer, Chas. Malmo; secretary, A. Balmer.

The regular meetings have been exceptionally well attended and are held in the Chamber of Commerce the first Tuesday in each month. The essays and addresses by the different members have been very instructive and the lively discussions brought out the debating powers of some of the craft in a surprising way. The intention is to hold a chrysanthemum show next November and a committee is now devising ways and means. An invitation has been received from the Portland florists to attend the Lewis & Clark fair this summer, when a general love-feast is promised. The invitation is looked on with extreme pleasure by the association and the intention is to get a special car and attend in a body.

We expect to have a good many visitors to Seattle this summer, as everybody who goes to the fair will doubtless come here either going or coming. The summers are delightfully cool, the attractions many and (it is not generally known) we have the finest natural park in the country, Ravenna park.

Easter Outlook.

Of course, lilies first. The supply is limited. Most growers have hit it about right with longiflorum. Harrisii are all gone. There may be enough to go around, but it is doubtful. Azaleas, hydrangeas, spiræas and H. P. roses are in good supply. In cut flowers the supply will be from outdoors. Lilac is just right, also late tulips, narcissi, apple blossoms, etc. Carnations will be scarce, roses very scarce. Violets are over for the season.

Various Notes.

The store lately occupied by Mrs. L. W. McCoy has been opened by the H. Harrington Co., Mrs. McCoy moving two doors higher up on Second avenue, into a new and up-to-date store tastefully decorated.

Hopkins has moved from First avenue to the entrance to the Hinkley block, on Second avenue.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy is building six houses 20x200 feet. The Woodland Park Floral Co. is putting up a propagating house and Joseph Chalmers, two houses. A. B.

The Market.

Business is not as brisk this week as it was last and flowers are more plentiful also. Although the weather has been cold and windy we have had plenty of sunshine which fact has had a good effect on all kinds of stuff. Carnations are a little cheaper than they have been, although the growers made an effort to keep the price up. Roses, especially shorts, are in good supply and can be had at any price. Long-stemmed flowers bring very fair prices. Beauty sells wholesale at from $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Maids and Brides bring from 35 cents to $1, Testout and Carnot 50 cents to $1 and Liberty and Kaiserin 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen. Easter lilies are selling wholesale at from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen and potted plants at from $5 to $9 per dozen. Valley at $3 to $4 per hundred has been of slow sale for several weeks. Lilac is out of season, as is all kinds of bulbous stock. I am inclined to think there will be a shortage of azaleas for Easter. Owing to the continued warm spring weather which we have enjoyed until the past few days it was almost impossible to keep such stock cool enough to prevent it rushing into bloom. Some cyclamens and Spiræa Japonica are being shown in the windows but the principal demand in the way of pot plants seems to be for lilies.

Various Notes.

C. W. Scott, of Chicago, is in town. The Rosaia and Fregosi Co., of Geary street, have dissolved partnership. J. Fregosia has retired from the firm.

H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, is visiting in Monterey county.

Is it not surprising that San Francisco with over 100 florists' establishments has no florists' supply house? There is an opening here for an up-to-date wholesaler who will handle florists' goods only. As a matter of fact there is not anything of that nature on this coast. G.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

JOHN FURROW, Guthrie, Okla., has bought six acres north of town, to which he will remove his nursery.

SAN JOSE scale is reported at Lincoln park, Chicago. It had not previously been found in Illinois.

E. M. STITT is now proprietor of the College Springs Nursery, College Springs, Ia., and does a nice business, including seeds and vegetable plants. J. B. Laughlin, the former proprietor, is with Mr. Stitt.

VREDENBURG & Co., Rochester, report a great increase in business since the establishment in their new factory. They do a large trade in catalogue printing, especially for nurserymen, and their output of colored lithograph plates of fruits and flowers yearly runs into the millions.

TREES FROM JAPAN.

[An extract from a paper by Joseph Meehan, read under the general heading, "Our Horticultural Indebtedness to Japan," before the Germantown Horticultural Society, March 13, 1905.]

It is well known to everyone with a fair knowledge of trees and shrubs that to Japan we are indebted for very many of the kinds which give us so much pleasure and add to the attractiveness of our grounds. To those who do not know this, I would say had we not the Japanese sorts which are known to us, very much of the charm our grounds are would be wanting. Among the trees which are common in our collections or should be, look for instance at the long list of maples which have come to us from Japan! The beautiful shrubby sorts, those of the Japonicum and polymorphum type, what beauties there are among them! I would name aureum, palmatum, dissectum, dissectum purpureum and polymorphum atropurpureum as particularly choice. And plant them where there is no lack of moisture in summer, but not too much shade, and the leaves take on their bright colors nicely.

There are two cherries from Japan which all gardens should have, the weeping one, Cerasus rosea pendula, and the Sieboldi rubra plena. The former, when grafted on stems of about six feet, forms heads of much beauty, particularly when they are in flower in spring. The latter, Sieboldi rubra plena, is lovely when in flower; and towards fall its foliage changes to an orange crimson.

The Paulownia imperialis is of great attraction in late spring when its large heads of sweet scented, blue, trumpet-shaped flowers are expanded. Let grow as it will, it does not usually make as well shaped a tree as it does when the pruning knife is used on it as it grows.

The koelreuteria, a Japanese or North China tree, we must find a place for, because of the large panicles of yellow flowers it gives us in midsummer. The large seed pods which follow the flowers are a feature but little less ornamental than the flowers.

When the magnolia list is reached there is a long array of them to be credited to the Japanese. Among all these are the hypoleuca, Kobus, stellata, Watsoni; and we may add the Chinese one, conspicua and its many hybrids, Soulangeana and others.

Two of the most promising of newer trees are Pterostyrax hispidum and Styra Obassia. Those unacquainted with them have no idea of their beauty. The pterostyrax bears flowers resembling racemes of white wistaria, pendant from every twig of the tree. Styra Obassia has white flowers, in narrow racemes; and the leaves of both trees and habits of growth are pleasing.

Sophora Japonica is a tree long in cultivation; and there are some fine examples of it about our city. It blooms in July and August; the flowers, which are creamy white, are in such large panicles that a great display is made by them. It makes a very large, spreading tree.

The well known salisburia, the maidenhair or ginkgo tree, is also well represented in these parts. All our large estates have one or more of them; and Charles J. Wister has two planted as shade-trees along the street in front of his residence.

The fame of the avenue of this tree fronting the Agricultural building, Washington, is almost world-wide. It is a good shade tree as well as an ornamental one; and its foliage is singularly free from insect and fungus attacks; and, add to all, it transplants freely. It is usually given as a Japanese tree, but botanists place it as from North China.

In the way of larch we have what has now been removed from the larix or larch family, and placed under another name, pseudo-larix, the Pseudo-Larix Kaempferi, known as Japanese larch. It is a good thing, and is distinct in foliage from the usual run of larches. In the pseudo-larix the cones are deciduous, whereas in the larches they are retained on the branches all winter.

Hovenia dulcis is a Japanese tree of merit. The foliage is of a shining green; the flowers are in flat heads, not unlike a head of hawthorn flowers. They are white; and following them are the thick, fleshy fruit stalks, which are eaten by the Japanese.

The many species and varieties of pyrus sent us from Japan are of great interest. Of course we want the old Pyrus Japonica. And then there are Parkmanni and the various forms of Pyrus baccata, noted for their pretty white flowers and ornamental fruit. Some sorts bear fruit almost the size of Siberian crab-apples.

BUTTED GLASS.

Please allow me to say a few words on the subject of butted glass. Mr. Jansen, in the issue of the REVIEW for April 8, appears to think that he has discovered something which is going to be a boon to all good florists. There are, of course, as Mr. Jansen so comprehensively states, many "ifs" to be considered in building greenhouses, but I do not agree with him that as tight a house can be secured with butted as with lapped glass. Of course, with lapped glass and putty more time is necessary, and the first cost is greater, but the house is tight, and will remain tight, as far as water is concerned, for a number of years. There is, moreover, a difference in the coal bill in favor of lapped glass.

Butted glass, on the other hand, is never laid close enough together to exclude rain and cold. Of course an air-tight house is impossible to obtain by the use of either method, but one wishes to make it as tight as possible. When we wish ventilation, there are ventilators for the purpose, and which have the advantage of being subject to the will of the grower. When plants are grown in greenhouses the temperature, ventilation and watering must be under control.

Mr. Jansen also says that when laying butted glass, if the ends of the panes are not squared so that an absolutely tight joint is possible, the pane should be turned over, thus bringing convex and concave surfaces uppermost in the strip. The result is easily imagined. I suppose the next thing to do would be to invest in some miniature Garland gutters and place them underneath such joints. There is certainly a great saving of city water, and expensive hose for watering and syringing, besides the labor which is used every season for these jobs. Still, I prefer the hose, being a better distributor than butted glass joints.

Mr. Jansen states the advantages of butted glass in seven divisions:

First, rapidity in laying. Yes, it certainly is quick work putting it in, but it must all be taken out again and lapped with the use of that good but "anti-quated" putty.

Second, it may be laid at any season of the year. And so can lapped glass.

Third, easier to repair butted glass. I fail to see the logic in that statement. It appears to me that there is danger of loosening all the panes in the strip to repair one pane.

Leaving out the fourth, fifth and sixth advantages, which are of no account, we come to the seventh. He says it is easier to dismantle a butted glass house. Very likely, because it has always been in a dismantled condition from the time it was glazed.

To sum up, it is a well known fact that greenhouse glass is never cut exactly square at the ends, so that perfect joints can never be secured with butted glass. If it were a success those florists who have tried it here in the eastern United States would still be using it, and would construct their new houses upon that plan, it being much cheaper in first cost. But all those who have tried it, some on a rather large scale, have replaced it with lapped glass and putty. C. F. A.

The Market.

Easter is showing up very promisingly now. The past week was cold and cloudy and was just the kind of weather most needed to hold back the stock that has been rushing in so rapidly. It put a check on the supply and did it in a hurry. There were several pretty heavy frosts and it snowed on several occasions. Lilac and tulips, and some other varieties of outdoor stock, are moving along nicely and will be in full bloom by Easter.

Various Notes.

There was a heavy hail storm April 11 and for a while it looked as if a great deal of damage would be done to growers, but most of them escaped without loss. George & Allan report the loss of some glass but the damage was not great.

There will be plenty of stock of all kinds for Easter, with perhaps the single exception of carnations. But I do not doubt that there will be plenty of them showing up at the last moment. Beauties will be in fine form, as also will be bulbous stock. George & Allan have their bulbs in good shape and will hit it fine.

E. G. Gillett spent a few days last week in Indiana and Michigan. He reports the outlook for Easter trade as first-class.

T. W. Hardesty has been in Lexington, Ky., visiting his branch store.

John Evans, of Richmond, Ind., spent a few days here. He was on his way to Atlanta, Ga.

Other visitors were Miss White, Lexington, Ky.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, and C. Ford, New York. C. J. OHMER.

TOLEDO, O.—Krueger Bros. have begun an addition to their glass which will increase their facilities by more than one-third.

MOUNT GILEAD, O.—J. W. Munk & Bros., who built their plant by the water tower only a little over a year ago, find themselves cramped for room and are building a new house 28x120.

NEWBURG, N. Y.—A new establishment, to be known as the Yuess Flower Shop, has been opened at 91 Water street. O. J. Cathcart is manager. It is one of the prettiest stores in the state.

H. WEBER & SONS

Announce the completion of arrangements whereby they will, beginning in January, 1906, disseminate jointly with

THE E. G. HILL CO.

MY MARYLAND and JESSICA

MY MARYLAND is already well and favorably known, having been exhibited freely at the various flower shows and florist club meetings the past fall and winter, and in every case elicited the highest praise and most favorable comment. We pick this variety to quickly and easily displace all other whites for first honors, not alone in exhibition, but in commercial points as well. We claim for it a robustness of constitution quite unequalled in any other variety and an ease of culture that will delight the heart of the grower. The great vigor of both parents (Norway x Lawson) seems united and improved upon in this variety.

Both of the above are free propagators. We are thoroughly familiar with them and know what they will do. We will be in a position to deliver stock early and on time, and assure the trade that no disappointments will result on that score. We have already booked many orders. It pays to be early. Orders booked are subject to cancellation by the buyer if unsatisfied with either variety up to the time the cuttings are received. Price—$2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

In JESSICA we have, in the red and white variegated class, what My Maryland will prove among white. It is descended through several generations of variegated seedlings of Helen Keller and Bradt extraction on the one side and Lawson on the other. A strong, thrifty growing variegated seedling bearing the seed. It is a trifle heavier in growth than My Maryland and just Lawson height. Aside from these differences and the color, the description of My Maryland applies to Jessica. Under favorable conditions four-inch blooms are not uncommon. We pick Jessica to win over any other variegated variety.

The Market.

A week of fine, crisp weather has helped the growers somewhat in holding azaleas and bulbous stock, so that the outlook for Easter is fine. Roses, carnations, valley, violets, Harrisii, hyacinths, tulips, in fact a large percentage of what last week was considered too far advanced, is in good condition for the week's trade. Large orders have been placed with the growers for all available stock and the advance orders placed with the stores for decorations will clean up about everything. Nearly all the shops have decorated their windows in fine style and with a change in the weather to something warmer a large trade is assured.

Various Notes.

W. L. Rock has one of the finest displays seen here for some time, having specimen plants of azaleas, lilac, rhododendrons, tulips and Crimson Ramblers in pleasing variety, making a gorgeous sight.

Ed. Ellsworth, of Geo. M. Kellogg's, has a beautiful display of natural scenery and large crowds are always in front of his window.

Mrs. Harvey, formerly with the Alpha Floral Co., has opened a store at Tenth and Main streets and is doing quite a business.

Lawrence Schwager has a splendid window display and the increase in his force attests the large amount of business done.

Ed. Humfeld is doing a constantly increasing business at his place and has a large stock for Easter.

Al Broman, of Independence, is sending in some of the finest roses and bulbous stock seen here. Mr. Broman grows exclusively for Miss Dalley.

W. J. Barnes has some fine Harrisii and spiræas and has no difficulty in disposing of his stock.

The flower show here is an assured fact, as the Convention Hall directors have decided to hold the show the week commencing Nov. 13. NARCISSUS.

PALESTINE, ILL.—Ernest T. Oldham reports business good, considering that he has been at it only a short time.

GREENFIELD, IND.—Jacob Forest has had a very good run of business, much funeral work causing a demand for cut flowers in excess of the local supply.

HEATERS TOO SMALL.

I have two Wilks self-feeding water heaters rated at twenty-eight square feet of fire surface each. Are they large enough to heat an eight-room dwelling, the largest room 14x14, and two greenhouses, 20x60 and twelve feet to the ridge, connected, no glass in walls? I want 52 degrees in one and 65 degrees in the other. In a third house, 18x40, a head house, I want 60 degrees. Can I place the header two feet above the boilers and run it along under the bench in the head house, tap it for each of the two houses first named, run these flows perpendicularly to the height I need? Shall I then run it on a grade down or up? How many return pipes do I need? The place is sheltered but we often have 30 degrees below zero. S. N. M.

I am not able to judge accurately of the capacity of your boilers from what you say. Your dwelling, however, requires between 700 and 750 feet of radiating surface and your three greenhouses will require about 1,000 square feet of radiation. The Wilks boiler No. 30x48 is rated to carry 650 to 750 square feet of radiation, which would be about right for the dwelling. No. 42x42 is rated to carry 1,000 to 1,350 square feet of radiation, which would be sufficient for the greenhouses. A boiler with twenty-eight square feet of fire or heating surface would be capable of carrying only about 250 square feet of radiation, which is the rating of the Wilks No. 20x30, one of the smallest sizes. L. C. C.

TO-BAK-INE PRODUCTS THEY KILL BUGS

The great popularity of TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING PAPER, TO-BAK-INE LIQUID and TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER has resulted in a call for a Fourth Product described below:

TO-BAK-INE DUSTING POWDER

ANY TOBACCO OR TOBACCO ODOR and in ALWAYS CONTAINING A DEFINITE AMOUNT of FREE PURE NICOTINE, which is added to a specially prepared powder. The nicotine being in a free form, is gradually given off, killing all insects on flowers, plants and vegetables, leaving a perfectly ODORLESS POWDER OR RESIDUE, which is readily shaken or washed off, and SHOULD any remain it will NOT DECAY or ROT, thus differing from tobacco dust, etc. The advantage of this Powder should strongly appeal to Greenhouse Vegetable Growers, whose products must be free from foreign or objectionable tastes. 50-POUND BAG, $1.50; 100-POUND BAG, $3 00 Send for our Booklet, "WORDS OF WISDOM," by leading Growers, containing full directions as to exterminating all greenhouse pests.

This is for Sprinkling or Dusting Purposes only and will not burn for fumigation. This DUSTING POWDER differs from any other on the market in being FREE FROM GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at the Glen Cove Greenhouses on April 5. Exhibits were plentiful, nearly every member present contributing something. The relation of experiences in the production of the various exhibits brought out many interesting and valuable cultural hints. A charming vase of that grand red carnation, Robert Craig, came from the Cottage Gardens. Special mention was made of a new seedling carnation raised by Felix Mense, of the Glen Cove Greenhouses. Mr. Mense has named it Dosoris, and judging from his stock it is a profuse bloomer and of robust constitution. The flowers are full, well built and apparently non-bursting. Another new seedling carnation, dark pink, was exhibited by Mr. Myers, superintendent for G. R. Sheldon. The flowers were large, full and heavily fringed. A beautiful plant of Cineraria stellata, grown by A. McKenzie, attracted much attention. The plant measured four feet in diameter. The same gentleman also exhibited an interesting dish of peas, the variety being Gradus, grown under glass. The seed was sown around December 20 and pods were ready for pulling during the first week in March. It may be mentioned that these peas proved very appetizing to the members present, an inducement to attend, I should say. A standard gardenia profusely flower-budded and showing the marks of high culture was exhibited by T. Harrison. It was decided, until further notice, to hold the meetings in the evening.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers will this year take out 6,000 feet of wooden gutters, which are only 5 years old, and replace the same with 6,000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

After Easter Bargains

AFTER EASTER, all Florists need to replenish their stock. We here offer some exceptionally fine bargains. If you cannot take care of your needs now, you had better place your order and have us hold same for you until you can use the plants. In this way you are sure of having your stock secured when you need it, and avoid the usual disappointment of "stock sold" when you order same.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A SPRING WINDOW.

The primary idea in this display window is a slope on which violets are growing thickly. To produce this hillside a quantity of damp sphagnum is piled up, starting a few inches from the front of the window and slanting upward at a convenient angle so as to represent a steep ascent. Several bushels of the moss were required before the depth of four feet was reached. Over this sphagnum hill was spread a covering of sheet moss and ferns, which extended to the farthest edge of the window floor in front and on the sides. Near the lower left corner and scattered in two or three other places on the hillside were plunged small ferns in pots. High up on the right side and extending down to the front of the window is a line of Boston ferns, with their pots plunged and slightly tipped toward the front.

Next in the process was "to make the violets grow." They were stemmed on No. 24 wire in bunches of a dozen or two, with plenty of foliage, and inserted in the moss as in design work as thickly as material at hand permitted. In order to get a good reflection from the mirror on the left, that side of the hill was also covered and dotted with the violets.

Back of the clump of ferns on the right is a plant stand on which is set a broad, low vase of cut callas and Harrisii, and in the opposite back corner of the window is a tall group of Harrisii plants. On the top of the hill to the left is another plunged pot of Boston fern and a vase of Sir Watkin narcissi with their own foliage. None of these flower receptacles was visible, the effort being to represent growing plants. Just back of the hill to the left is a small group of white Dutch hyacinths shown by reflection in the mirror, as are also a few of the narcissi which were scattered up and down the edge of the slope.

Globes of green and white soften the light on this supposed wood scene. The color then is violet, light yellow and white, with the always present green.

The ferns on the right are pushed far enough forward and tipped at just such an angle as to appear to overhang the patch of violets and partly hide them, except in spots, which do not appear in the photograph.

It may be deduced from this study that scenes which smack of the wild take best in city display windows. The best likeness to a wild retreat that can be produced is the attraction that will tell in the midst of the busy centers. A single feature like this violet bank, to which all the other materials introduced will be subordinate, and which as a whole can be understood at a glance, is the telling part of a window display. No fault can be found with quantities and masses of material if they are used with some idea of organization and relation, more or less distinct, as the workers' skill allows. Toward this one feature let the position of every flower, the grouping of all the plants, the blending of all the colors and the selection of that most important detail, the background, all unite.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

EASTER BUSINESS.

Reports from all over the country indicate that the Easter business marked another advance over previous records for this most important of florists' holidays. The aggregate of sales must have been considerably ahead of the best previous record. Here and there is a report of stock left on hand, or a wholesale market breaking with the overload of material on Saturday afternoon, but as a general proposition stocks were as well cleaned up as could be expected in view of the very large supplies everywhere provided.

All over the country, in the largest cities and in the smallest villages, the flowers until after they had made certain that the supplies of plants already on hand would be well cleaned out. Therefore, the plant department makes a better showing than the cut flower end in the retail reports from the large cities.

The skill of the growers seems to have fully overcome the disadvantages of so late an Easter, as quality was at its best everywhere and in all departments save the one item of violets, which did not cut much figure this year. While hyacinths and tulips were not as plentiful as at earlier Easters, still there were enough for all requirements and azaleas were never shown in better form. It is worth while noting that a good many lilies were a few days late. The supplies of American Beauty roses and also Liberty were under the requirements in most markets, but other roses were equal to the very large demand and in several cities there were breaks in prices. Carnations were short in many markets, but in some cases this was because the growers held their stock back until too late an hour, as from several cities came reports that wholesalers had considerable stock left on hand Sunday night.

Never before were so large quantities of requisites used for the Easter business. The supply men have had a banner season and the stock with which they loaded up the retailers has nearly all sold. This was due to the very large business done more than to the profuse stocks of Easter plants were beyond all precedent. Stores everywhere were jammed with flowering subjects. Little in the way of novelty was offered, but enormous quantities of the standard Easter plants were everywhere in fine condition. The result was that where wholesale markets are readily accessible, as in the large cities, the retailers did not make much of an endeavor to sell cut use of ribbons, matting, etc., on individual subjects, as good taste is again asserting itself in these matters and the decorators are no longer obscuring the beauty of their plants by swathing them in decorations.

TO FOLLOW CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

I have 9,000 square feet of glass and have sold my entire stock of carnation plants. I expect to fill the houses with chrysanthemums the first of July. My houses are old and I cannot carry a high temperature in cold weather. What can I fill the houses with to pay after the mum season is over? J. M. C.

You had better plant your chrysanthemums by June 15 if you expect to have fine flowers. One of the difficulties or drawbacks about chrysanthemums is that they leave a lot of empty benches unless you are in or near a large city, where you can ship in Easter stock, such as lilies, azaleas, roses, etc., which will not need house room until your mums are cut and gone. How high a temperature you can carry has much to do with it. If not warm enough to bring those plants I have mentioned in for Easter, then you could grow several crops of lettuce in the beds, or you could fill up with single violets. These should be protected in cold frames until the benches are available. Sweet peas will also grow and flower in a temperature of 45 degrees at night and good flowers of these will always sell. You can sow the seeds of these in 4-inch pots in September and keep in cold frames until the mums are gone. If you planted out a good lot of the best zonal geraniums this spring you could take cuttings in September and October and keep them in a small space until your benches were empty. Mignonette will thrive in 40 degrees at night and good spikes sell well and ship well. W. S. should be put in the sand about the middle or latter part of January. Before putting in the cuttings, the propagating bench should be put in condition to receive them. In the first place all old sand should be taken out, the bench given a good washing, and then whitewashed with hot lime. This will kill any fungus that should happen to be there. When this is dry put in fresh, clean, gritty sand, pack well with a brick and give a good watering. Then it is in condition to receive the cuttings.

In selecting cuttings, always take good, strong wood, blind or flowering. Either will do, but flowering wood is preferable, as it will break away quicker and stronger. Cuttings should be made with two eyes, with the cut just below the bottom one. Cut off the bottom leaf and if the foliage is rather strong, cut a little bit off the top. In placing them in the sand keep the foliage all the one way. This will avoid tangling in taking them out. Care should be taken in making the cuttings, not to keep them exposed to the air for too long a period, for if they are allowed to become wilted they will not root so well.

As soon as a row is put in it should be firmed with the hands and given a good watering, for if you wait until all the cuttings are put in before watering, the chances are that the first ones are wilted before the last ones are in the sand. The sun should never be allowed to strike them until they are rooted.

A temperature of 60 degrees will do for the sand and 58 degrees for the house. A light syringing daily will keep them fresh until rooted. The sand should never be allowed to get dry, although if it is kept soaked all the time fungus is liable to appear, and this will ruin the cuttings. It should be kept moist and that is all.

The cuttings should be rooted in about four weeks. They should then be lifted, but in doing so care must be taken so as not to break the roots, for they snap very easily at this stage. Pot in 2½-inch pots, which should by all means be clean. Do not use a very rich soil for the first potting. I have known a fine lot of young plants to be ruined by the use of too rich a soil.

When potted place in a light house, temperature 58 degrees night, 70 degrees day. They should be set on ashes and shaded from the sun until established. Syringing should be done on all bright days.

Care should be taken in regard to watering. They should never be allowed to dry out, and if kept too wet the soil is apt to sour. This will check their growth. The soil should be kept in a moist condition. Syringe at least once a day in sunny weather and figure on having the foliage dry by night. When they have made a good growth and are rooted well into the soil they should be potted in 3½-inch pots.

About the first of June they should be ready for benching. Before doing this the house should be cleaned from top to bottom, including the benches, which should also be whitewashed with hot lime. This will kill all insects and by so doing give the plants a fair chance in their winter quarters.

Sod, placed grass side down over the cracks, will make good drainage for the bottom of the bench. The soil, which should have been set up the previous fall, should be composed of four or five parts

ROSES

SULPHUR FOR MILDEW.

Now that our houses will have to be left open more frequently in order to keep the temperature right, and when firing will have to be dispensed with, we are likely to be more or less troubled with mildew. The leaves being soft after the quick spring growth, they will be very liable to take a dose if careful ventilation is not practiced.

So long as we can use fire we should use every means of eradicating mildew and prepare our plants to withstand the almost open air conditions to which they will be subjected when warm weather commences, as we all know how very difficult it is to get rid of the pest during summer.

A periodic painting of the pipes with the sulphur mixture is the safest and surest remedy known. This should be applied somewhat as follows: Take flowers of sulphur one part, air-slaked lime one part, mix with water to the consistency of paint and apply to the pipes with a brush.

If steam heat is used, this ought to be applied to the return pipes, which are seldom so hot that the sulphur will fuse, as it must be remembered that sulphur in a state of fusion gives off fumes which are death to vegetable life. Care should also be taken not to put on too much, especially if there is a crop on, as this bleaches the color. Pinks, such as Bridesmaids, and even Beauties, are easily touched. Where hot water is used the danger is not so great as the fumes are given off more slowly.

In order to derive the full benefit from the fumes the ventilators should be closed tightly and this can be best accomplished during the coldest part of the night, when the temperature can be raised for an hour and a half as high as 72 degrees without danger.

By persisting in this treatment and giving plenty of ventilation at all other times, mildew can be practically banished.

As a preventive a dusting of sulphur during bright weather, when the foliage is dry, is of great benefit and it is a safe plan to continue this treatment on both young and old stock during the entire summer or until firing is again resumed.

A careful observer will never allow mildew to get such a hold of his stock, but that these simple remedies and precautions, if intelligently applied, will protect his stock against this pest.

ROSES UNDER GLASS.

[A prize essay by Joseph Kennedy, read before a recent meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, Oceanic, N. J.]

In forcing roses it must be remembered that they must be carefully looked after from start to finish; that is, from the time they are put in the cutting bench until they have finished blooming. A good many growers start out in the right direction, but fail to carry out their intentions. They may propagate with success and pot along into 2½ and 3-inch pots, and then neglect them when they are in 4-inch pots. In my opinion a great many houses of roses are spoiled before the plants are ever benching.

For instance, if they are held in pots a long time without a shift, they are apt to become pot-bound and get hard, which will cause them to lose a lot of foliage and to stand still after being benching, and unless you can get your plants well established before the approach of fall, you need never expect to get a good cut of roses before the following spring.

Another essential thing in rose growing is to get your young stock started in time to make good, strong plants by benching time. To do this the cuttings soil to one of cow manure, with a sprinkling of lime. Spread the soil evenly over the bench and do not fill too full. Then press lightly with the hands. The plants should be planted in broken rows about fifteen inches apart. Firm well around each plant and give each plant a good watering when finished. Do not wet the whole bench, as it would be apt to sour the soil. The syringing will dampen the soil enough to keep down red spider.

As the roots spread more water can be given, and so on until the bench is filled with roots. Air should be given freely day and night to give them a good healthy growth. When syringing always dampen the walks, for if the foliage is wet and floors are dry, the foliage is apt to be burned if there is a hot sun.

After the plants have made a good growth and rooted well into the soil, the whole bench should be gone over and pressed down with the fingers. Some growers firm with a brick, but this will cause the soil to bake after pounding.

The buds should be kept pinched off until the plants have made some good, strong wood, or until the fall, if the flowers can be spared. In pinching off these buds do not take just the bud, for this will cause the shoot to break at the top, which in time would make a tall, lanky plant, instead of a bushy one. The bud should be pinched off with at least one or two eyes.

Keep the floors well dampened during the day, and if the plants do not dry off after syringing it is a good idea to go over the plants and give each a good shaking.

After the plants have become well established they can be given a light mulching of cow manure and soil mixed, or else a dose of wood ashes. When fall approaches great care should be given to the airing. Although a little night air at this time will keep the plants healthy and strong, if too great a change occurs between the night and day temperature, mildew is sure to appear. This can be kept in check by the use of sulphur on the heating pipes.

The night temperature should be at this time about 60 degrees and later on, when the severe cold nights come, it can be dropped to 58 degrees for Brides and Maids, for Ivory and Golden Gate 56 degrees, and American Beauties 60 degrees.

In cutting the flowers it should be remembered that it is better to sacrifice a bloom than the wood. Two good eyes should be left, as these will make a couple of good breaks, whereas, if they are cut down to the dormant eyes, they will not break for a long time.

Keep all shoots tied up to allow free circulation of air and to allow the sun to shine through the rows. This takes time, but it will pay in the end, as the plants will make a stronger growth, will dry off quicker after being syringed and the stems will be straight, a great thing to be considered in a rose.

Do not feed much liquid manure until after the turn of the year. An occasional mulch will carry them on until then. After that they can be fed liquid manure every eight or ten days, according to the weather. They should also have an application of bone meal when they get in good condition to receive it. In using cow manure for a mulch green manure should never be used.

If grafted stock is preferred, the Manetti is the best stock to graft on. This is procured from Europe, and when it arrives it should be heeled in in a cool place, where frost will not strike it.

This will keep them in a dormant condition until wanted for grafting, which should be about the beginning of January. Pot them up in 2½-inch pots and place in a temperature of from 40 to 50 degrees. When they have made good root action and the sap is flowing they are ready for use.

A case should be built of proper size. This should be made of boards with a glass top. It should be air-tight and ashes should be placed in the bottom to retain the moisture.

The Manetti should be cut near the pot, on a slant and from one-half to three-fourths of an inch in length. The scion should be cut to fit this as near as possible. It is necessary that the bark should meet on one side, and if it can be made to fit both sides, so much the better. Tie with raffia and place in the case. When this is full close the case and keep it closed for at least four days, when it can be opened to give a crack of air. Leave open for a few minutes only. Repeat the following day, and so on until they have "taken." When the union is complete and they are properly hardened off they can be taken out and put with the other young stock and brought along the same way.

The case should be kept at a temperature of 80 degrees, but if this cannot be maintained 75 degrees will do. In planting grafted stock in benches always get the graft below the surface of the soil.

SAVING FREESIAS.

In the REVIEW for April 20 I read a note on freesia, signed W. S. Now, I cannot resist the temptation of a few remarks, and I hope they won't be found amiss. W. S. in his article advises an inquirer not to save his freesia bulbs over for another year, as they won't produce as fine flowers the second year as they did the first. This is a very mistaken idea, for freesia will produce as fine flowers, not only for one, two or three years, but for as many years as they are kept and planted.

I have been growing the same stock for twenty-two years, with not even the addition of a single fresh bulb, except what I produced from seed, and I can say positively that I have the finest freesia in the world, as all that have seen it can testify, and they have been grown in greenhouses and saved over all that time. Had I known W. S.'s opinion I would have sent him some sample blooms which would have made him change his mind about it not paying to save one's bulbs over another year, as I read another article on freesia by him some little time ago.

It is all very well to advise buying bulbs every summer, but where is the use of it if the ones that are thrown out are just as good as the ones you buy? If the growers in California and other freesia producing places would pay more attention to purifying the freesia they send out each year, so that their customers can be assured of getting better stock than the preceding year, then it certainly would pay to buy each year. But when one gets the same mixture from year to year, then I advise everyone to save the bulbs and cull out the poor ones as they appear and they can rest assured that they will get the selfsame quality of flowers the second year and as many years as they care to plant them, as they did the first, if they are grown in the same way. Greenhouse culture never injures the in no way injures the pips. The size of the bulb is no indication of quality of flower, for the very smallest, poorest flowers may be the ones that will have the largest bulb.

The freesia, as grown in California, is grown for size and quality of bulbs and not for quality of flowers. That does not seem to be taken into consideration at all, the only thing that should be considered, since that is the end for which the bulb is grown. The bulbs are planted and left to flower and go to seed, which drops and produces flowering bulbs in one season, which are mixed with the other bulbs for sale or future planting. Freesia seed is like carnation seed. There may not be one good bulb out of a thousand seedlings. If anyone has a selected stock of freesia they should be careful to pick all flowers and allow none to ripen seed to drop in the soil where the freesia is grown. R. FISCHER.

SCHULTHEIS BROS.

William Scott's remarks as to the young florists of the country in the Spring Number were especially interesting and valuable. In their love for the business, their intelligent understanding of it, their practical knowledge and their devotion to its progress lie the hopes of floriculture for coming generations.

In this connection the accompanying illustration of the independent enterprise of the Schultheis boys, of College Point, L. I., is appropos. They are the sons of Anton Schultheis. There is another partner who did not get in the picture, but he has his quarter interest just the same. These boys, from 13 years down, built this house themselves and the "office" adjoining, dug the pit and built the boiler house, not visible here, and another little house for propagating purposes, and have been given free rein by their practical father to buy, sell and make money in their own way, and they are doing it. They have a chicken "side

THRIPS ON CUCUMBERS.

I have been troubled with thrips for the past two years and have not been able to get rid of them. They usually eat out one house a year for me. I have fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas without much result, and it would always burn the leaves and hurt the crop. At best it would only stun the thrips and in two days I could not see but what there were just as many of them as before. If there is any way to get rid of thrips without damage to the crop, I would be pleased to know it. I grow cucumbers exclusively and my houses are 23x120, five feet to the eaves and twelve feet six inches to the ridge. How shall I fumigate? C. C. S.

I have never been able to destroy thrips by fumigation. Tobacco will not reach them and hydrocyanic gas, if used strong enough to kill them, will surely injure the plants, cucumbers being one of the plants which are very susceptible to injury from this gas. Syringing and spraying are the only means I know to keep them in check. In this case, as in most others, prevention is better than cure and if syringing is judiciously done from the time the plants are started it can be relied on to prevent serious attacks. The water will not kill the mature insect, but it will certainly upset their family arrangements and prevent their getting established. A rather strong spray is best for this purpose, as the leaves are tender and easily torn and water applied in force from a strong nozzle would be sure to do injury to the foliage. Spraying with a solution of Ivory soap or some of the numerous commercial preparations of tobacco will also be found beneficial, but the spraying must be thoroughly done, so as to reach every part of the foliage. The insects mostly harbor on the under side of the leaf, but should this be made uninhabitable, they will make themselves at home on the upper side and quickly get down to business. The mature insect is quite a lively little customer and can be depended on to hop around pretty lively in freesia bulb, for it is not like other bulbs. It cannot be forced out of season, but has its time for growing and all we can do is to hasten or retard its blooming by growing in different temperatures. As with outdoor lily of the valley, if we put glass over it we get it into bloom sooner than if we left it uncovered by glass, but the early blooming line," too, that is prosperous and it is delightful to note the enthusiasm of the youngsters and the really fine work they have accomplished. They bought their own boiler, with a capacity for two more "houses" which they will construct in their spare time this summer. And so they are laying the foundation for a practical knowledge of the business in search of suitable quarters if he is disturbed, hence the necessity of not leaving him a suitable place in which to start housekeeping. The hairy nature of the leaf is apt to prevent the spraying material from reaching the insects, so that a very fine spray should be used for doing the work to insure the thorough coating of both the under and upper surfaces of the foliage. The mature insects are pretty hard to kill, but in the earlier stages of their development they are not so hard to destroy, hence, by starting when the plants are small and syringing or spraying frequently, it is not such a hard matter to prevent their accumulation, but if once they get established, it is certainly a hard matter to clean them out.

W. S. CROYDON.

SOWING SEEDS.

I have attempted on several occasions to offer advice on the art of sowing seeds. W. C. Egan, of Highland Park, Ill., kindly sends me directions "How to Sow Seeds," by the horticultural editor of the Chicago Evening Post. The method is, perhaps, better adapted to cocoanuts than calceolarias or begonia seeds, but is so thorough and scientific that I will reprint it here with the confidence that nothing further will be asked from me on this important and delicate operation of gardening.

W. S.

I have my ground all ready for planting, but the crust over it has become so hard that I can't push the seeds through without breaking or bending them. What would you advise me to do?

SIMPLEX.

There are several methods of seeding through a sun-baked crust in order to avoid the common practice of going over the dug ground a second time with a rake.

One rough and unskilled way is to place the seeds the right distance apart on the surface of the crust and then drive them through with a nail punch and a hammer. The chief objection to this is that the sharp edges of the punch are likely to scratch the seeds or cut through their waterproof covering, and thus permit moisture to rot them.

The most approved method is planting with a drill—every person has heard of a seed drill—and it may be done after this fashion:

Take a small breast drill stock and a number of steel twist drills, varying in size according to the outside dimensions of the seeds to be planted. Take the sizes of the seeds with a small pair of callipers.

Select a seed and the place where you wish to plant it. Then with a small hammer and a center punch indent the surface of the crust. This mark will give the drill a start. Lean the stock against your chest and turn the crank briskly. Drill into the earth two or three inches.

Into the hole drop the seed, pouring fine earth on top of it through a small funnel. When the hole is filled, tamp it hard with the head of a tenpenny nail till the hole is filled within a quarter-inch of the top. Close the top of the hole with hot sealing wax.

Seeds planted in this way have been known to remain practically unimpaired for several years.

The chief point is to keep the seeds from getting wet. A wet seed soon awells and loses all its delicate symmetrical outlines.

CLEMATIS.

Having had no experience with clematis, will you please tell me if two-year-old Jackmani, Henryi or paniculata will bloom?

F. C. A.

The clematis but two years old will flower very little, if any, the year you plant them out and would not even if they were more than two years from the graft or cutting. Do all you can to get them to thrive and make good roots the first year. Then you can expect they will send up shoots the following year and bear some blossoms. The Jackmani and Henryi, which are hybrids, as well as the paniculata, which is a species, are not deciduous, but in our northern states are treated as such and we depend on the strong growths from roots each year. Have patience and with good culture produce a strong plant.

EVERGREEN, ALA.

Geo. W. Caldwell, the pioneer wild smilax man, is shipping a new decorative green to the northern markets. It is a very pretty thing. Mr. Caldwell says he thinks it much prettier than wild smilax, but is afraid the trade will have to call it by some other name than the one which properly belongs to it, for it is a huckleberry and he says he is afraid that Mrs. Gotrocks will not consent to have the church decorated for Goldie's wedding with a green that is so vulgarly suggestive of blueberry pie. If anyone can suggest a good name for this very handy green, he will confer a favor by sending Mr. Caldwell a postal card.

LA FAYETTE, IND.

Hail on the night of April 20 broke considerable glass in the various greenhouse establishments and did some damage to Easter stock. H. Roth suffered the heaviest loss. At his place 1,000 panes of glass were broken and the broken glass destroyed about $200 worth of Easter plants. F. Dorner & Sons Co. was not hit so hard, although several hundred lights of glass were broken and some injury done to stock. At J. Baldwin's place, a damage of about $200 is reported.

Although the quantity of Easter stock was somewhat reduced by the injury done by the storm, still a good business was done.

CINERARIA HYBRIDS.

Alois P. Frey, the head-gardener at Lincoln park, Chicago, has the true plant breeders' instinct and has set on foot a number of hybridizing operations which promise interesting and valuable results. One of his earliest efforts was with the cineraria and with it he has been able to achieve almost immediate results because of the plasticity of the genus. As all who have saved their own seed of cinerarias know, in two or three years there will be marked deterioration in the plants unless hybridized, according to the practice of those who make a specialty of growing cineraria seed for the trade. Mr. Frey's early training included a course at some of the big European seed and plant growing establishments and, being thoroughly familiar with the process and results of hybridizing this plant, he was led to cross Cineraria stellata, the small-flowered species, with the large-flowered form, C. hybrida. The accompanying illustrations show the original flowers and the new forms. Plants of the several forms are also shown.

The crossing in either direction takes more of the character of stellata in both crosses.

These plants were recently shown before the Chicago Florists' Club and received honorable mention. They have formed a conspicuous and attractive feature in a mass in the early spring display at Lincoln park.

BUFFALO.

The Easter Business.

The long looked for week is past and we hope that in no case were the preparations in vain. Up to Saturday morning it had here been anything but pleasant weather, but Saturday and Sunday were glorious days. The latter should be a day of rest and recreation, but many florists are near cemeteries, and with them it was a great day's business and what was left over on Saturday was very profitably cleaned up. A telephone call on a half dozen of the Main street florists gave me a pretty good idea of how business was and it is pretty safe to say that the extent of their business is a good criterion of all the rest. All say it was an increase over any past year. The lowest estimate was ten per cent, the highest thirty per cent. Another feature they agree on was that satisfied and report a large increase. They put lilies and azaleas as in most demand and made-up baskets of plants, averaging in price from $8 to $15. In the words of Mr. Beyer, the manager of the uptown store, "The baskets sold just as fast as we could make them up." Joseph H. Rebstock said lilies, azaleas, Rambler roses and hybrid roses were the best sellers with him.

S. A. Anderson made a grand window of bougainvillea which attracted great attention. He says after the favorites, lilies and azaleas, the rhododendrons and lilacs sold well. He had some large home-grown Crimson Ramblers which all went.

Miss Rachel Rebstock was in the best of spirits and I could tell by her voice on the wire that she was telling the truth and that she was not "intoxicated with exuberance of her own verbosity." She said: "Business fine. An increase over last year, and then you know, business was fine last Easter. Azaleas, lilies, rhododendrons, H. P. roses, Ramblers and heather all sold splendidly. Yes, that's a fact. I am going to the Adirondack mountains for two weeks' trout fishing," and then "central" cut us off.

L. H. Neubeck said his business was at least twenty per cent over last year. In addition to standard Easter plants he noticed that rhododendrons were great favorites. Pans of hyacinths and "daffies" sold well, but not tulips. He had a fine lot of Hydrangea Otaksa, but they were not in demand, and that we heard from others.

H. Keitsch & Son reported a decided improvement over last year and an all around stock was entirely cleared out. The William Scott Co. and D. Newlands & Co., who are both near Forest Lawn cemetery, were rushed up to 6 p. m. Sunday, waiting on the thousands who visited the silent city.

So it appears that while there was no pronounced distinctive feature at this Easter, it is growing year by year stronger in the direction that it has tended for years past, a pretty growing plant more or less expensive and ninety per cent of these are bought for presents to friends. Fashions and customers change, we know, yet it is not easy to foresee that this laudable, innocent and pleasing way of remembering friends can soon or ever be displaced by any new fad. Nothing can be so appropriate for a mutual greeting as the harbingers of spring, sweet flowers.

What the public will demand is novelty, something new in our plants. It is true the variety now grown is great to what it was even twenty years ago, when old Lilium candidum was our standard Easter plant, but fine as are the many plants now grown, we must keep on progressing.

The increase of business in our city is only normal, for it is a bigger town than it was last year and has more people who can afford luxuries. We do not know how it is in other cities, but the church decorations are entirely a thing of the past. You do not even hear it mentioned. Twenty-five years ago columns of the daily papers would describe the decorations. Now it is all covered by a brief paragraph, "The churches were decorated with cut flowers and potted plants." I hate that word, potted plants. It reminds you of potted ham or potted pigs' feet. We have to thank the parsons for the loss of this part of the business, for they preached against the decorations being done by brought a material change in size and character of flower. In each case the pollen parent appears to have exercised a potent influence on the progeny. This can be seen in the illustrations showing the plants. In each case the flowers were somewhat smaller than the flowers of C. hybrida but very much larger than the flowers of C. stellata. The variation in color characteristic of the family is seen in these hybrids. Furthermore the profusion of bloom of the hybrids is apparent. The growth of the plants plants more than ever were the leading sales, far exceeding in amount the cut flower side of the business. In cut flowers, carnations were in great demand and entirely sold out. Violets and lily of the valley sold well, and, of course, roses, as usual, of all medium priced varieties were cleaned up. There was a grand lot of Beauties disposed of because the price asked was within reach of many. Bulb stock was little asked for.

W. J. Palmer & Son were more than a florist. The free offering of the individuals was the thing and so it has dwindled to nothing and we have no reason to regret it. The business is greater than ever, but in another direction.

I regret to say that during Mr. Kasting's busy week his good wife was taken down seriously sick. There is now every hope of her recovery, and we all sincerely trust it may be so. Excuse me, Mr. Editor, I used the word "sick," not "ill." Sick is correct, for we have the Bible as an authority. "Ill" is a late importation of modern English. W. S.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

The Easter trade this year has been very satisfactory, both in respect to demand and prices. The demand was such that growers were turning away orders early in the week. This was partly owing to the extra demand and partly to the protracted spell of dark and inclement weather just previous to Easter week, which considerably shortened the cut.

Roses were good and not over plentiful and ranged in price from $4 to $8 per hundred for teas. Meteors were $4 to $10. Beauties were plentiful and in good demand at from $3 to $10 per dozen, according to length of stem.

Carnations were very scarce, not nearly enough to go around, which helped to keep prices up. They sold readily at $3 for common, $4 to $5 for select and $6 to $7 for special, but even at higher offers they could not be purchased toward the end of the week. There was a fair supply of nice lilies which easily brought 12½ cents per bud. Lily of the valley was scarce but not in great demand, the best quality realizing $3.50 per hundred.

Owing to the warm spell of two weeks ago and the lateness of the season, violets were scarce and of poor quality. There was an abundance of greens, such as smilax, asparagus, etc., and a fair claiming this as one of their best seasons on these lines, the various stores showing handsome specimens of azaleas, lilies, palms, etc., and I noticed that by Saturday they were well cleaned up.

The United States Cut Flower Co., which is exclusively wholesale, had an exceptionally fine cut of roses, particularly Beauties. They also had an immense stock of Easter lilies, which were of a high grade and sold well.

I regret to have to announce the sudden demise of Hulbert Gibbs. He was with The United States Cut Flower Co. from the start and had by his genial manner won the respect and friendship of all. Mr. Gibbs was thirty-two years of age and unmarried. R.

BLUE HYDRANGEAS.

"On a recent visit to Messrs. J. Veitch & Sons," says a writer in the Horticultural Trade Journal, "I noted a fine lot of plants, most of them having from five to seven heads of bloom, and those fully developed were of a clear deep blue, certainly the most distinct shade of blue we have seen. It is the variety known as Hortensia rosea, and the color is obtained by potting in soil that contains a certain amount of iron, and alum is dissolved in the water used for watering. Although an artificial means of obtaining the color, the deep blue heads of bloom are very pretty and form a striking contrast to the deep pink of the normal form of Hortensia rosea, which is the brightest rosy pink variety grown. The individual flowers and the heads of bloom are not so large as the ordinary Hortensia, but it is very free and should be worth taking in hand by market growers. This variety is grown extensively by Messrs. Truffaut & Sons, of Versailles, and in conversation with Mr. Truffaut I learned that they bring them on to flower at Christmas and New Year, when they are much in demand in France. The plants are grown on and flowered without losing the foliage made the previous autumn. I have had plants of the ordinary Hortensia form flower heads in the autumn, and though kept growing they have failed to develop properly, being almost devoid of color, this, of course, being from want of sun and light."

BOSTON.

The Easter Market.

The general verdict is that the trade in plants and cut flowers was larger and better than ever before. A few of the retailers were not quite satisfied and attributed any falling off to the large number of stores of a miscellaneous nature which handled plants, generally at very low prices. There was a very noticeable shrinkage in receipts of cut flowers during the ten days before April 22 and prices ruled higher on these days. On Good Friday carnations were at a premium, there not being nearly enough to go around. The contrary was the case on Easter eve, for large quantities sold at half what they would have brought twenty-four hours earlier. The quantity of cut flowers thrown upon the markets and commission houses on April 22 was enormous and, while good prices were secured early in the morning, a heavy slump occurred later in the day, more especially in the poorer grades of roses and white carnations.

There was no striking advance on roses. Beauties were plentiful, the best fetching $40 to $45 per hundred. Liberty sold all the way from $4 to $18. Brides and Maids sold at from $2 to $12, very few reaching the latter figure and plenty going at the former price. Very few hybrid roses appeared on the market, and none of good quality.

In carnations the best Patten, Enehanteress, Flamingo, Manley, Lawson and Fair Maid made $5 to $6. There was a heavy surplus of some varieties, especially whites, some remaining unsold. Nicholson's Prosperity made $10, the highest of any carnation on the market. A fair quantity of violets appeared. Doubles averaged $1, while extra good singles made up to $1.50.

The prevailing price on lilies appeared to be 12½ cents per flower. These sold well and showed a hardening tendency as the day advanced. Callas brought $10 to $12.50 per hundred. Bulbous stock sold better than usual. Double daffodils made $2.50 to $3; singles, like Golden Spur and Trumpet Major, $2 to $2.50. Narcissus poeticus made $2. Tulips varied from $2 to $4 and Spanish iris all the way from $2 to $5. Sweet peas were unusually fine, at prices from 75 cents to $2. Some extra fine white stocks were shown, the best making $6. Valley averaged from $3 to $4 and marguerites 75 cents to $1.25, the yellow selling best. Spiraea sold at from $1.50 to $2 per hundred, proving a rather slow seller. Pansies made 50 cents per hundred. There was the usual assortment of other seasonable flowers, including some very fine candytuft, antirrhinums, myosotis, English primroses, anemones, cornflowers, lilac, etc.

It is each year becoming more apparent that plants are taking precedence over cut flowers at Easter. The sale of these in Boston was larger than ever before and the quality better. Lilies, of course, were in largest request. They appeared more free from disease than for several years. The lateness of the season seemed to make them more abundant. The growers cleaned out every pot of these. Hardly any Harrisii are grown for this market, longiflorum seeming to have the call. Only one or two lots of L. candidum were seen and these a ghost of what they ought to have been. Crimson Rambler-roses seemed to sell in largest quantity, next to lilies. A perceptible difference could be seen in stock which had been grown along in pots and those which had been potted last fall. Some nice Dorothy Perkins, Farquhar and Baby Ramblers were seen, also various hybrids. Azaleas, owing to the lateness of the season, were less numerous, but sold well. Acacias were in small supply, but marguerites, rhododendrons, spiraeas, pink and blue hydrangeas, genistas, Canterbury bells and bulbous stock in variety were seen in quantity. Smaller lots of boronias, kalmias, andromedas, clivias, clematis, ericas and epacris were displayed. In palms, kentias sold well and there was also a good call for ferns and assorted fern dishes.

The weather early on Saturday was dark and threatening. This caused a feeling of hesitancy on the part of retail buyers, but happily toward noon the sun broke through the clouds and the remainder of the day was clear and bright, without wind, a good day for moving plants. Easter Sunday, although cool, was clear and Easter weather conditions were certainly very satisfactory.

Easter With the Growers.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, reports that his stocks of Crimson and Pink Ramblers and hybrid roses, hydrangeas, genistas, acacias and Canterbury bells were cleaned out and that he was well satisfied with Easter trade in plants.

E. N. Peirce & Co. sold out all of their immense stock of lilies, sending out about 25,000 pots of longiflorum during Easter week.

W. W. Edgar had a big sale for azaleas, genistas, Ramblers, and hybrid roses, hydrangeas and spiraeas. He sent in some nice spikes of Lilium candidum to the Park street market.

A. Leuthy & Co. state that azaleas sold unusually well, every plant going. Easter lily trade was less brisk than some years, probably owing to practically everyone having them. Genistas of all sizes sold freely. Clivias sold well in limited quantities. Kentias and arecas, especially in larger sizes for decorative work, were in good demand and on ferns and fern combinations they had an average trade.

Frank T. White's spiraeas from home-grown clumps were away ahead of any imported stock. E. Sutermeister also had very fine stock of these.

Mann Bros. had an unusually fine trade in rhododendrons and Pink and White Ramblers.

William Sim had the finest single violets seen. His Easter pick of these was 50,000. He also had 40,000 sweet peas.

William Nicholson sold 5,000 marguerites early on April 22, yellow taking the best. His Prosperity carnations again made top notch prices.

Tailby, of Wellesley, sold 5,000 double yellow daffodils very quickly. He says he never saw this flower sell better for Easter. He had unusually fine pots of lily of the valley and splendid Spanish iris.

Oscar L. Dorr sold 75,000 Campbell violets at the Park street market at an average price of $1 per hundred.

W. H. Elliott had superb Liberties for Easter. In the culture of this fine rose he is hard to beat.

The Beauties, Brides, Maids and Wellesley from Waban Conservatories were wonderfully fine. The last named is a fine seller.

Charles E. Holbrow, of Brighton, had remarkably fine Rambler roses at the Park street market.

At the Retail Stores.

Galvin's stock of Easter lilies at Tremont street and Back Bay Conservatories was immense and of fine quality. He had the best acacias seen, also fine gardenias, Pink Ramblers and other seasonable pot plants.

Carbone carried a fine lot of ericas, boronias, clematis, kalmias, Dorothy Perkins rose and Azalea Temperance.

Doyle had a superb stock of lilies. Those in 10-inch pots, three stems to a pot went well. His Ramblers were the best seen. He also had fine Canterbury bells.

McMulkin's Easter window, composed entirely of white flowers relieved by a few plants of Baby Rambler and Colmar grapes, was very beautiful.

Houghton & Clark had extra fine azaleas, genistas, gardenias, ericas and kalmias.

Hoffman, on Massachusetts avenue, made a specialty of Easter lilies, yellow marguerites and Crimson Ramblers. His large windows were very effectively arranged.

Wax Bros. have extra fine Ramblers, azaleas, marguerites and pink hydrangeas.

Various Notes.

All the commission houses did a big Easter business, Welch Bros.' being of enormous volume. The dealers in greenery also were kept busy, Henry M. Robinson & Co. especially so.

Trade since Easter has been very good, a large number of weddings and plenty of social activity causing a good demand for flowers. Prices are holding up remarkably well.

Geo. E. Buxton, of Nashua, is suffering from an attack of lumbago.

S. J. Goddard has completed a new sixty-foot propagating house. His rooted cutting trade had far outgrown his facilities for handling it.

Edward Wood, of Lexington, had some nice Spiraea Van Houttei for Easter. This makes a pretty plant for church decorations.

Governor W. L. Douglas has appointed April 29 as Arbor day for promoting forestry and restocking the state's treeless lands.

The committee on ways and means of the state legislature has reported a bill for the suppression of the brown tail and gypsy moths. The bill calls for the expenditure of $75,000 in 1905, $150,000 in 1906, and $75,000 in 1907, and $10,000 additional each year for natural parasites.

Bay State Nurseries are doing the biggest spring trade in their history. Over 100 men are kept busy getting orders out.

Growers of Easter plants complain of the competition of 10-cent and other stores, which sold quantities of Easter plants at absurdly low rates this year. Some concerted action among members of the trade will be necessary to stop this. Some growers think no harm, but rather good, comes from these stores selling plants cheaply. They pay cash and sell to people who are usually unable to pay regular florists' store prices.

V. M. Cutter, of South Framingham, is building Alexander McKay's new houses, Lord & Burnham Co. supplying the material.

James Farquhar has returned from a several months' stay in Porto Rico.

Indications are that a large number will attend the Gardeners' and Florists' Club field day at A. H. Hews & Co.'s factory on April 29.

Carnation Harry Fenn has sold wonderfully well the past season in Boston.

Florists' Club.

At the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, briefly referred to in our last, fifty-seven members were present. A very interesting debate took place over the alleged deterioration in roses, carnations and other florists' flowers. F. E. Palmer started the ball rolling by asking if it was a fact that forcing conditions cause deterioration. He classed these conditions as an outrage of nature. Alexander Montgomery had not seen any deterioration in Bride roses the last ten or fifteen years. In fact, they are better than ever. He showed leaf stalks of Bride carrying seven instead of five leaflets to illustrate improvement. Meteor was the only rose he could think of which had declined. It has been grown far too hot. Conditions of light, temperature and ventilation were now as near perfect as possible for roses and certainly he had never seen superior flowers of the leading forcing roses, as shown at the recent Boston show. He did not believe any of the popular forcing roses would deteriorate in twenty-five years, grown under right conditions.

W. H. Elliott considered all forcing roses are doing better than ever before. H. P. roses if forced would decline, just as azaleas forced each year early would do if propagated from. He prefers stock grown as far north as possible. Speaking of the decline in forcing of H. P.'s, he said they do not pay to grow. Brunner sells because it is so like American Beauty that it can be palmed off for it. Perle has declined in popularity, as when in best health it threw so many ill-formed flowers.

H. A. Stevens spoke of the splendid hedges of La France rose he had seen in California and of the way carnations are grown and propagated there. He thought carnations were short-lived here. W. J. Stewart, speaking of the desire expressed for a first-class yellow rose, doubted if it could be a phenomenal seller like Bride, Maid and Beauty, even if we get it.

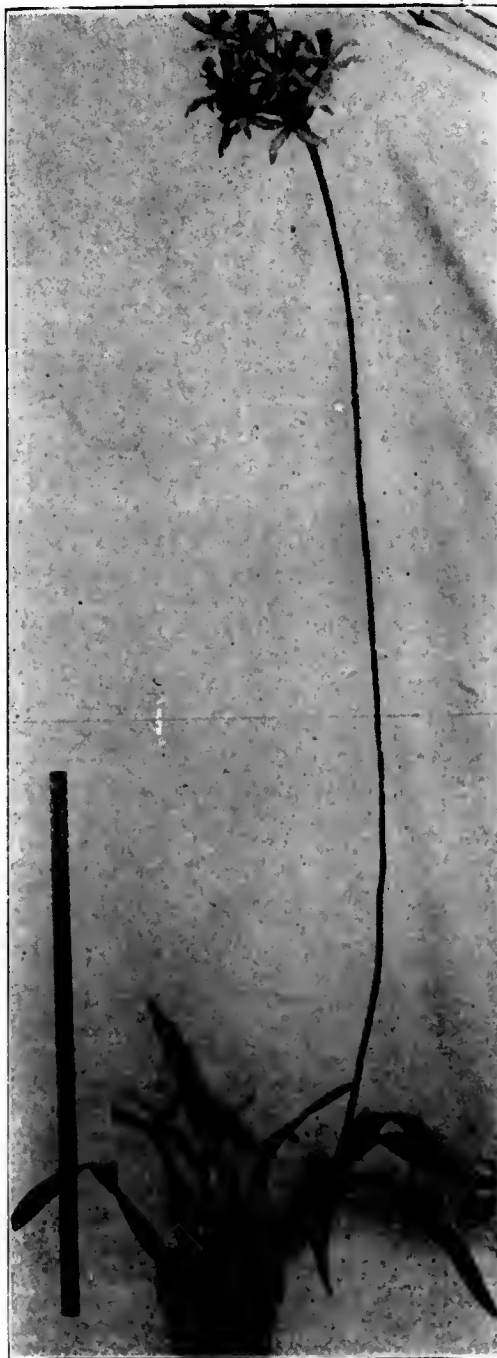

Robert Marshall felt certain that carnations deteriorated. In reply to Alex. Ogg, who spoke of the color in Bride roses at recent shows, Alexander Montgomery said strong light in spring would make any white rose show pink. Although married a long time, he said our Bride still blushes, and while blushing we may be assured she is in perfect health.

Speaking for violets, William Sim said he did not believe in deterioration in anything he had grown. Kenneth Finlayson said no carnation grown was of any use in ten or fifteen years. Robert Cameron suggested that too much inter-breeding was responsible for this and suggested using other types of carnations for crossing purposes. After remarks from Charles Sander, Geo. M. Anderson said he had often thought carnations were rooted too slowly. He had this season rooted some in a case with crotons in twelve days. They looked well and he intended to watch later developments with these.

W. N. Craig scouted the deterioration theory. Carnations are in too many cases ruined by over-propagation. James Wheeler did not think carnations will run out as in years gone by, as cultural conditions are more ideal.

The general sentiment seemed to be that while there might be some deterioration in carnations, there was none in roses or violets and that there was less likelihood of such in the future with better houses, more exact temperatures and a better understanding of requirements, that the "deterioration" in carnations usually followed the usurpation of some better novelty.

Frank P. Cannell's solos at the last club meeting were much appreciated. He has a fine bass voice. We do not see why the club cannot raise a competent quartette of its own.

The following committee was appointed to communicate with the Royal Horticultural Society of England in regard to re-naming of American carnations in England and the re-christening of European plants here: Kenneth Finlayson, J. W. Duncan, Geo. M. Anderson, W. P. Rich and W. N. Craig.

Dr. R. T. Jackson, the well known peony grower of Cambridge, will read an essay on peonies at the May meeting.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken at the greenhouses of Harry G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis. C. H. Gebhardt, the grower, supplies the following note:

"This is a grand plant for a private collection and easy to grow. We give them the same culture as we do the cattleyas. This is a large growing plant and never fails to bloom with us every year and bloom during the winter months for a long time. The flowering stems are seven feet in height. On one flower stem we have had from fourteen to twenty blooms measuring six to seven inches across. These flowers have sepals and petals of a beautiful deep rose. The lip has the side lobes crimson, yellowish at the side above the fold over the column, the disk yellow, with a crest of five large subserrate orange yellow lamellae. Truncate in front, the middle lobe is oblong, of a rich deep crimson, flabellately veined with crimson. It is from Guatemala."

MILWAUKEE.

Easter business was considerably ahead of last year, especially the demand for carnations. There was a good supply of lily plants on hand and they sold well. There was quite a large amount of short giganteums in the market and these met with popular favor. Roses were plentiful and supply was equal to the demand. Violets were almost out of the market and quality was inferior, owing to the lateness of the season.

Almost all of the retailers report satisfactory trade and nearly every one cleaned out all stock that was in salable shape for Easter. The weather was very favorable for deliveries and large displays were made outside by the various street men in the business. INCOG.

PEKIN, ILL.

On last Thursday, April 20, at 2.15 p. m., a very heavy storm passed over the city of Pekin. Lightning struck the large smoke-stack at Geo. A. Kuhl's, throwing brick over his whole plant, and breaking over 2,000 feet of glass. Mr. Kuhl considers this one of the worst hail storms that can possibly befall a greenhouse, as it not only damages glass, but breaks bars and plants also. Mr. Kuhl and several of his men were in the office and narrowly escaped with their lives. Every man on the plant felt the effect of the storm. It was a sorry looking sight just a few days before Easter; but Mr. Kuhl was thankful that everything passed off without injuring any of the men. The damage to the office building and smoke-stack was covered by insurance. Mr. Kuhl took care of the Easter trade in spite of the storm and enjoyed the best one for a number of years.

PHILADELPHIA.

Easter Trade.

The volume of business in plants and cut flowers at Easter was the largest ever experienced in this city. The growers of blooming plants as a rule sold their entire product, while the retailers will require what little they have left for decorations this week. The quantity of cut flowers used exceeded expectations and prices were high and well maintained until Saturday, when the warm weather of that and the day before brought in an excess that could have been used to advantage earlier in the week. As it was, prices fell on Saturday afternoon.

The department stores made large exhibits of all the standard blooming plants except azaleas, which undoubtedly stimulated the demand in the florists' shops. They sold their stock on a very small margin, using it chiefly as an advertisement. The street men bought heavily on Saturday at unusually high (for them) prices. The street buyers declined to pay the prices asked, compelling many of the Greeks to sell at a loss, a rare occurrence.

While an immense quantity of lilies were used, both cut and in pots, the supply exceeded the demand. Select stock for shipping brought 12 to 15 cents per bud and bloom. Good stock brought 10 to 12 cents. Very large lots brought 9 cents and some ordinary stock 8 cents. Leftovers were offered on the curb as low as 5 cents on Saturday night. Azaleas were not pushed, being in short supply. Many were sold but they were not so prominent as last year. Ramblers were fine and in good supply. The proximity of planting-out season seemed to increase their popularity. The same, perhaps to a lesser extent, is true of hydrangeas, their popularity as porch and lawn plants being markedly on the increase of late years. Spiræas were well done as a rule and in brisk demand, especially for church and cemetery decorations. The limited quantity of genistas grown was eagerly bought. Their quality was excellent. Daffodils in pans and in pots seemed to sell better than usual. This will give a general idea of our plant situation. There was a variety of other plants, including a few Baby Ramblers.

The features of the cut flower market were violets, valley and sweet peas. Despite the predictions that violets would be very scarce, there were at least 100,000 doubles in the market, at prices ranging from $1 to $1.50, a few fancies bringing $2. More could undoubtedly have been used, very many more, had the price been lower. There were a few singles, a rara avis, on Saturday at the Leo Niessen Co., at 50 to 75 cents. It was the greatest week this market has ever had in valley. S. S. Pennock, as usual, got 5 cents for his brother's royal brand. Good stock brought 4 cents, ordinary, 2½ to 3 cents. The demand was brisk. The Leo Niessen Co. received 5,000 on Sunday morning when the market was bare, a great godsend.

Sweet peas were of fine quality and very popular. Prices ranged from $1 to $2.50 per hundred. Gardenias were more plentiful than anticipated. They brought $2.50 to $4 a dozen, a few of the best a little more. Good daffodils sold remarkably well at $4, daisies at $1.50 and even $2. Tulips brought $3 and $4. Smilax was in short supply.

Very light strings brought 20 cents. Orchids were scarce.

Carnations did not equal the demand. Fancy Prosperity and Enchantress brought 8 and even 10 cents, Lawson 6 cents. Good ordinary stock brought 4 cents. The street men paid 2 and 2½ cents for culls to their sorrow.

Until Saturday afternoon roses were also scarce, except, curiously enough, Brides, usually prized at Easter. A number of growers had houses of Kaiserins in crop and both Bride and Kaiserin suffered, prices falling as low as 5 cents for good stock, though much of it brought 10 to 12 cents. Bridesmaids were 12 to 15 cents. Beauties, specials, brought $5 to $7 a dozen, with medium grades hard to obtain; shorts 75 cents to $1. The street paid as high as $4 a hundred for cull tea roses. They won't be so rash again. Liberty brought $1.50 to $3 a dozen for fancies, a few $4. J. William Colflesh is cutting a few nice Jacqueminot.

Personal Mention.

Time and opportunity have admitted of taking in only a few of Philadelphia's many florists. Their views and experiences may be of interest.

Godfrey Aschmann had a great Easter. He experienced a heavy demand for azaleas and sold virtually everything.

William J. Baker was well pleased. He did especially well with fine daffodils and daisies.

H. H. Battles did a very heavy business in plants and flowers, both at "108" and the Century. He has a number of weddings this week.

Berger Bros.' business far exceeded that of last Easter. They had some of the finest sweet peas in the city.

William Berger grew and sold more plants than ever before. A "sold out" sign was posted Saturday.

Eugene Bernheimer was well pleased.

Robert Craig & Son did a great business in plants. Everything sold well, lilies, both cut and in pots, Ramblers, azaleas, genistas, begonias, etc.

George Craig had all he could do. A large decoration on Wednesday cleaned up the surplus plants.

Robert Crawford, Jr., had as good if not better Easter than ever before. Plants were very fine and sold well. He noticed an increased demand for daffodils and tulips.

Fred Ebret was well satisfied. Everything good sold well.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons' business at the Bellevue-Stratford exceeded their expectations. It was chiefly on choice cut flowers. Violets were foremost. Habermehl's had the handsome decoration for the Knights of Columbus ball at the Academy of Music Monday.

Hugh Graham did an immense business, using all his own and much other stock, besides including Jacob Becker's fine hydrangeas. He shipped a good lot of plants and his product was seen all over the city.

William K. Harris had a great Easter on every variety of his well grown stock of plants.

Julius Koehler & Son had some extra fine hydrangeas. They did well on everything.

The Flower Market's business satisfied the high standard of Charles E. Meehan. They did well on Beauties, gardenias, lilacs, carnations, valley, violets, etc.

The Leo Niessen Co. was obliged to refuse late orders on plants after filling more orders than last year. Their cut flower business was the best they have had, which is saying a good deal.

Pennock Bros.' Easter business exceeded that of 1903 and 1904, which were about equal, and the best up to that time, by ten per cent. A great showing.

Samuel S. Pennock sold 75,000 double violets. His plant and cut flower orders were ahead of last season.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. showed a big gain on last year. The demand exceeded the supply. Their stock was excellent.

Edward Reid shipped a large number of plants and cut flowers, besides doing a good local business. He seemed well pleased.

John and W. H. Westcott did a large and very satisfactory business, both wholesale and retail.

The Market.

This week is a very busy one. Almost all of the Easter social season will be crowded into it. There are a great many weddings. Prices have fallen about fifty per cent on most flowers. The Flower Market seems to have nearly all the double violets that are left. Sweet peas are in good demand. The Leo Niessen Co. has some good lavender. Beauties are fine and cheap; so are lilies. Bulbous stock is nearly over. Smilax is scarce.

Various Notes.

Charles P. Poryzees' store in the Haseleine building, 1426 Chestnut street, was destroyed by fire on Sunday morning about 2 o'clock, an hour after it had been closed. The fixtures and orders for delivery on Easter morning were destroyed. Mr. Poryzees has concentrated his force in his other store at 29 South Fifteenth street.

Xavier E. Schmidt has arranged a beautiful display of Easter blooming plants in Horticultural hall, in Fairmount park, which is enjoyed by thousands of visitors.

In the big storm the other day Alexander Scott & Son's big new greenhouse, ready for glazing, was blown down. The Lord & Burnham Co. has sent men to help repair the damage. PHIL.

Death of Mrs. Temple.

Mrs. Josephine Temple, wife of J. T. Temple, died April 20, at St. Luke's Hospital, where she had been confined for the past month. Death was due to a complication of diseases resulting from a cold which she contracted at the time of the fire at the Temple place last December. Mrs. Temple was born in London, England, January 1, 1846, and came to America at the age of four years. She was married to J. T. Temple in Davenport December 30, 1868, and the couple have lived at the present home on North Brady street ever since. Besides her husband there survive three brothers in South Dakota.

The funeral took place from the home of Mr. Temple's sister, Mrs. W. L. Downs, and interment was in Pine Hill cemetery.

HOBART, IND.—A. Londenbergh, of this city, is building a range of four or five houses at Valparaiso and will conduct both places.

CHICAGO.

This Week's Market.

A good deal of stock came into the market on Monday and more on Tuesday and Wednesday, and there was a very light demand, with the result that prices took a decided tumble. There is plenty of everything, with the possible exception of smilax, and quality is very good all along the line, but it looks as though there is no hope of high prices again this season. The bottom of the market will be fixed by what the Greeks and department stores will give and the bulk of the stock will go out through these outlets in spite of the fact that a good many orders have been booked by the retailers for social and wedding decorations.

Easter Wholesale Trade.

The wholesale demand for cut flowers established a new record for Easter. Supplies of stock were very large, fully adequate in most lines, but prices held firm up to Sunday except on low grade roses and one or two surplus lines, like callas and white tulips, for which there was little call.

Shipping demand exceeded all previous experiences but was mostly done on Friday. Practically all orders were filled except for colored carnations. Beauties and Liberties were also short. Lilies of good quality sold well and closed at the highest point, 15 cents. Saturday's shipping orders were filled in full on staples by most houses, with plenty of stock left for that day's city demand, which was later than usual in starting because all the retailers had stocked up more heavily than ever before with flowering plants; naturally they wanted to see these well on the move before they made any effort to push cut flowers. Sunday was a beautiful day but the expected demand did not come and, as mid-day approached, prices broke and the Greeks got a lot of bargains. But it was impossible to clean up at any price and a good many roses and carnations were carried over to Monday, together with a lot of odds and ends. On the whole a great deal more stock than usual was handled to make a moderate increase in the total of sales.

Easter at Retail.

Chicago retailers prepared for the largest Easter on record and it came up to their expectations in every way except that Thursday was so wet and Friday so windy that the rush on Saturday was past all possibility of handling to best advantage. Sunday was a beautiful day and a great help. Every store was stocked to its utmost capacity with flowering plants. Little novelty was shown except in the pot covers. Crimson Ramblers were more numerous than ever and bulb stock scarce. Although, of course, some orders called for cut flowers, most retailers pushed plant sales until fairly well cleaned out and then turned to cut flowers and did a good business in this department Saturday night and Sunday. In the end they were as well cleaned up as could be expected where stocks were so large at the start.

C. A. Samuelson had a great variety of plants, including pyramidal azaleas, candidum lilies and baskets of Souper roses.

Wienhoeber offered his plants "in the natural," using little embellishment. Here was a splendid stock of azaleas.

Fleischman still follows the fashion of almost obscuring the plant by the accessories. They had an extra store for plants.

Smyth says that, after all is said and done, the lily is still the thing. He had a fine lot.

Muir's first Easter in the new store was ahead of the best at the old place.

Friedman had a splendid bougainvillea in one window and a huge acacia in the other.

Hauswirth had some fine lilies and hydrangeas. He bought azaleas not so fully out as many had them, finding that customers like them with a good many buds to open.

Wittbold was strong on lilacs and rhododendrons and sold a big lot of lilies.

C. H. Rowe showed the best tulips seen down town. He had many Ramblers.

Mangel did not stock with plants so

Death of Mrs. Reinberg.

Mary L. Reinberg, wife of George Reinberg, died on April 21 after an illness of several months' duration. A weakness of the heart prevented her recovery. She was 38 years of age and leaves her husband with a family of eight, the oldest of whom is 16. The funeral was held on Monday and was attended by many neighboring growers and many others in the trade sent flowers. Interment was at St. Henry's, High Ridge. Mr. Reinberg has the deepest sympathy of everyone in the trade in his great loss.

Various Notes.

Prof. A. C. Beal was in town for several days this week to see if anything could be done to rejuvenate the florists' bill in the state legislature. There was a meeting of those most active in the matter at Peter Reinberg's on Tuesday morning and, while it was acknowledged that things look pretty black for the few days remaining of this session, it was decided to keep at the project until those much-needed greenhouses are a reality at the State Experiment Station.

It is a very easy thing to understand that by using iron gutters and posts the growers with connected houses get one more bench in each house than by the old, big wooden post method. But it is worth pausing a while to think of the fact that by his rebuilding operations this season Peter Reinberg will gain 24,380 square feet of bench-room under the same glass! His gain in bench-room by the move is more than many a prosperous place contains.

The Grand Rapids' Florists' Association has gone out of business, its space in the Growers' Market having been added to the facilities of Vaughan & Sperry, who will continue to handle much of the cut of the Grand Rapids growers. The extra space was needed, as their business is steadily growing.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has received samples of the high growing southern huckleberry from Caldwell the Woodsman Co., Evergreen, Ala. It is a fine thing and said to keep well. It is practically the only decorative green used in San Francisco and will come in handy here now that wild smilax is out.

There are likely to be plenty of lilies from now until Decoration day, as several good sized lots were late for Easter. Sam Pearce is reported to have quite a batch that did not make it and so have Bassett & Washburn and Emil Buettner.

The first order for 1,000 cuttings of the Rudd-Hill new carnation, Lady Margaret, come from J. E. Jensen, of Jensen & Dekema.

A. G. Prince, formerly in the greenhouse business at Hinsdale, and in the wholesale business on Wabash avenue, is preparing to put up greenhouses at Iowa City, Ia.

P. M. Broadbeck, at Evanston, is sending Kennicott Bros. Co. some wonderful Sprengeris. Every spray is four feet long or over.

Bassett & Washburn report that the call for grafted roses has exceeded their anticipations and the supply.

John Poehlmann says that he looks for a continued shortage of smilax and record prices for really good strings. Much of the stock now coming in is so poor the retailers will not use it.

George Scott is back at Winterson's after seven weeks spent in the country.

NEW YORK.

The Easter Market.

Easter is once more a memory and to many the pleasantest memory of all the years. Never was the general prosperity in the retail trade so universal. No more perfect weather was ever made for the occasion. Not a cloud marred Saturday and Easter Sunday itself was unexcelled for warmth, clear skies and every requisite in weather.

But the wholesale market was up against too many obstacles to materialize the prices or amount of purchasing necessary to make the Easter satisfactory. The street was flooded with everything but violets. Considerable pickling was in evidence. The holdovers of Thursday and Friday, which would have sold well on these days, came in so heavily on Saturday that no possible outlet for them could be found. American Beauties, the best, actually could be had on Saturday evening at $15 per hundred. Some of the roses were grand, substance, color and stem never better, but 12 cents was top all day for the best Maids and Brides and this rate fell to 10 and 8 cents as the night wore on. There were too many red roses. To this fact the downfall of Beauty may be attributed.

As to the pickled stuff, the less said the better. We thought we had seen the last of it. This year the picklers will about get what is coming to them. If there are any returns at all for this pickled stock, I am much mistaken. There can only be one practical way of stopping this imposition and that is refusing to accept the stuff and returning it to the sender at his expense. This plan might lose the wholesaler a grower now and then, but such growers are a menace to the business.

Violets are done. They ended the season very creditably. I suppose fifty more new houses will go up now, as the prices were quite encouraging. Fine specimens actually touched $1.50. Most of the stock went at $1, although much of the receipts were not worth over 50 cents. But as always, good quality meant good prices and hundreds of thousands commanded $1 without difficulty. Some of the big retail houses handled from 50,000 to 100,000.

The preparatory days for Easter for nearly two weeks were cool, clear, perfect, just what were required both for the cut flower growers and the plantmen. The late Easter did not develop the discouraging results which might naturally have been expected. The late spring was made to order for the florists. But plants rather than cut flowers may be relied upon for all time to constitute the bulk of the Easter trade. Up to Saturday evening there was no call for anything but blooming plants and hardly a plant remains unsold anywhere in the city. The greenhouses are empty, the stores are depleted, even the sidewalk merchants sold out clean. It would seem as if every house in New York and Brooklyn had its flowering memento of the day. The plant markets, too, were sharers in the great prosperity. Everywhere that plants bloomed there were eager buyers. Even telephone orders were sent to the plantmen on Saturday afternoon to renew the supply so that advance orders might be filled, everything on hand having been sold.

Lilies were in great demand. They sold at retail at from 20 to 35 cents a flower. The latter price became general toward the end. If any plants were left at all they were daisies and genistas, big ones, too large for homes, but good enough for the coming weddings of the week, and there are a lot of them, so nothing was lost.

The lesson seems to be that the New York market can absorb all that is good of all the growers in and around the city and still have room for more. The voice of the future, the great advance in population and wealth, the growing love for nature's offerings in plant and flower, all speak with no uncertain sound. "He who runs may read."

At wholesale the best lilies in pots maintained their price, 12 cents. This was the top and good stock brought the figure readily. Many who cut the rate to 10 cents did so unnecessarily, but on the other hand, many who sold at 10 cents got all that their stock was worth. Some poor ones went to the department stores at 8 cents and less, but that was where they belonged.

Big sales of flowering plants were made at the auction rooms for Easter. The tent is up again at Canal street for the plant market and "open at all hours" may honestly be painted on the canvas. It is well worth sitting up all night to see the busy throng long before "sun-up" in the morning. Here is where the veteran Scot, John Birnie, reigns.

This week finds the wholesale cut flower market still overstocked and prices on the downward grade. On Tuesday roses sold at $10 per thousand. There are immense shipments of both roses and carnations.

The Retail Displays.

The retail stores of New York are unequalled in the world. It would take a volume to describe them all. Lessons in decoration and the benefit of expert choosing of salable stock for the next Easter may be drawn from a brief reference to some of the best known and most progressive of them.

David Clarke's Sons have some of the finest windows for decoration purposes. Nearly forty feet of glass on the boulevard is available. One of their novelties is a window devoted to aquariums. The best of the Japanese piscatorial novelties are seen here and singing birds add to the attractiveness of the big store. From their own greenhouses came some mammoth genistas, spiraea, Ramblers and lilies. Every plant that went out was supplied with a waterproof cover and every cover with its ribbons was prepared in advance. They had several hundred tubs of lilies filled by themselves. With ribbons these were made to average from $5 to $10 each. They sold fast. Their report may be taken as the universal one. Everybody bought earlier than other years and had deliveries made earlier and up to Thursday night business had aggregated more than for the whole week other years and Friday, Saturday and Sunday were "velvet." Golf vases and the ducklings with their chariots were prominent in their windows, and in almost every window.

Warendorff, at the Ansonia and on Broadway and Madison and Seventh avenue, had beautiful windows, their specialty everywhere being mirror effects and great neatness and taste always in evidence every day as well as holidays, just as should be the system everywhere. There is never an excuse for a neglected window and never a prosperous florist who has one. At the Ansonia Mrs. Warendorff makes her headquarters, the mother of florists and still hale and hearty at 66 years. Twenty-five years ago, on Fourteenth street, she began the business which has grown to such proportions and will soon be incorporated. Five of her sons are associated with her. Edward has just returned from Chicago and will have his own store in the fall. Mrs. Warendorff maintains her practical interest in all the branches. Jos. Fleischman, of Broadway, is her son. She has been a widow twenty-six years. Her first sale was made to J. P. Morgan by her son Alexander, when the whole family worked together in the artificial flower business. She is tireless, always on duty, keen, alert, practical. It was largely her taste and artistic nature that conceived the elaborate ideas of store adornment so beautifully illustrated in Fleischman's, the Ansonia and the other stores. The Ansonia window was banked on each side with Ramblers and lilies. Combination plants in boxes of raised work, illustrating old Roman scripture, were a feature. Baskets of lilies and hydrangeas sold well. The golf vases were extensively used. The store itself is a dream without any decoration. This week Wednesday Warendorff has the great Wheeler-Nelson wedding at the Collegiate church and the Seventy-second street home. The entire dome of the church will be filled with Ramblers and lilies. Special designs have been made by Reed & Keller for canopies, etc. The same decorative stock, with American Beauties, will be used for the house. The bride's bouquet of valley and white orchids is to be an elaborate affair.

Burnham, in his fine roof conservatory at Bloomingdale's, says this was far ahead of any Easter. Nearly everything was sold out at noon on Saturday. He employed 125 people altogether in the Easter floral department! In the cut flower department where Robert Koehne presides, a handsome window, filled with Reed & Keller's Easter eggs in all designs, was very attractive. Fine hawthorne in flower from Bobbink & Atkins was a great seller. Lilies were held at 20 cents a flower. No poor stock is handled here; no cut prices prevail. No retailer in the regular stores considers this a menace to legitimate trade.

Hanft Bros. had their usual overflow and branch stores. Among their shipping orders I noted one for President Roosevelt. Ramblers and lilies were the favorites here. Pink azaleas were in demand. Thousands of pansies in pots were disposed of.

Stumpp's windows, on Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street, were arranged with artistic care and were unique and creditable. One was an immense bank of lilies, with a row of cinerarias at the base and flanked by huge orange trees in fruit, with a magnificent bougainvillea as a center. Another window was a dream in yellow, heather, genistas and acacias in tubs, and the third filled to the top with Crimson Ramblers and Dorothy Perkins. A rhododendron with 250 flowers and a large white azalea twenty-five years old occupied prominent spots inside the big store, while two immense cellars were crowded with baskets and combinations, every one distinct and beautiful. Six large weddings this week are the aftermath of Easter.

At Hodgson's fancy, high-handled baskets, trimmed with apple blossoms and filled with orchids and Farleyense fern, were a novelty.

Two immense metrosideros greeted you as you entered Alex. McConnell's, where "the biggest Easter ever known" was his greeting. Fine novelties in boxes, with copies of Roman sculpture by Robia, the Italian artist, were a novelty here. Baskets of lilies in white and gold tubs with 100 flowers were also featured and sold. All kinds of basket combinations sold well. The demand here and everywhere up to Saturday included few cut flowers.

Across the way, at Thorley's, the feature was the orchid basket, no longer a novelty, with ribbon adornment. In natural basket, tub and pail, handsome ericas also were largely used.

In the Flower Market I noticed Tarrytown elegantissima extensively used in all the basket combinations. It looked charming and will be greatly used in this way hereafter.

At Young's, on Fifth avenue, baskets of hydrangeas and lilies from his own conservatories were especially beautiful.

Wadley & Smythe's big window was one mass of Rose Wedding Bells. He had the entire stock of them. The store was full of them, also. They sold at from $5 to $25 each and none was left except those saved for his big wedding this week, where apple blossoms from Virginia also will be much in evidence.

Siebrecht's White Palace and the store adjoining were none too large for their Easter trade. Nearly 500 baskets were made up and all were sold. Ramblers, lilies and orchid combinations sold as high as $50 each. The stock was largely from their own conservatories. Japan maples in pots were great sellers, also kalmias in tubs and large azaleas and white lilacs. They had four vans, four wagons and fifty men busy. Grand hydrangeas and standard wistarias made the windows attractive. Orchids, too, were there in abundance.

Brower's, across the way, was a counterpart of all the Fifth avenue stores in beauty and novelty.

Big cedars in tubs and other evergreens were a fitting introduction to the Rosary, where a rustic porch had been constructed, with ivy covering and eagle trimming for the festive occasion, a unique conception. Birch bark pedestals in the windows supported specimen azaleas and boronias. Gloxinias and wistarias here were very perfect. The big conservatory upstairs was crowded with lilies and palms.

Leikens found his store and conservatory not half large enough for his supply and had a branch store close at hand for his overflow. He did an enormous trade, especially in baskets and hampers of his own construction, making up many beautiful combinations.

At Bowe's the need of larger quarters was never so much in evidence. The ducklings and their chariots filled with orchids were the centerpieces of the big window. The transient trade was constant. The Italian artist produced many original novelties in floral art and Mr. Bowe wore an even more entrancing smile than usual.

Ribbon decoration was very profuse at Scallen's, on Broadway. White and gold were the prevailing colors.

Small's is always at or near the top in extensive and elaborate display. This year was no exception. The big store was banked to the ceiling. Basket combinations, $5 to $15, sold the best. Lilies went at 35 cents a flower and were sold out at noon on Saturday and the buyers were hustling for more goods to fill orders. Large Ramblers sold slowly.

Mackintosh's second Easter in his new store was double his first.

Fleischman's windows were artistic. Golf stick vases and ducklings with chariots of orchids kept a crowd constantly interested. Ribbon accompaniments were handsomely utilized as usual. Individual plants were used and the big store was not large enough for the display.

To describe the other retail stores would be but to repeat what has been indicated by the selection of those it was possible to visit in a day. Even the smaller stores are awake to the necessity of cleanliness, artistic arrangement, novelty and reasonable prices. It was an Easter far in advance of any of its predecessors and one that must have brought joy and shekels to every participant.

Various Notes.

The sympathy of the wholesale section is given to Miss Wollreich, bookkeeper at Alex. Guttman's, in the sudden death of her father, and to H. B. McKnight, of Jersey City, in the loss of his son, William.

Holt, the rubber man, has opened a retail flower store at 284 Broadway, Brooklyn, and report says he stretched out a fine Easter business. He will not give up his well established rubber trade, however, and will doubtless be absorbed by the Flatbush Bowling Club now that he is a resident of the city of churches.

Anton Schoch, of New Brighton, was in town last week. He is the original indoor grape expert of this section and has a fine range of glass still devoted to their culture. His place is well worth a visit, especially when the delicious Black Hamburgs are ripe and worth $2 a pound.

Bedding plant night at the New York Florists' Club comes on May 8. John Birnie is in charge of the exhibits. Those who have something good to show can forward it to Secretary Young. Any novelty will be welcome. The exhibit is not confined to bedding plants only. Chairman Nugent has something special in culinary products, his own invention, up his sleeve for the occasion and some other entertainment also.

The Clucas & Boddington Co. will move May 1 to West Twenty-third street, near Sixth avenue. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—J. E. Johnstone has been at Crystal Lake for several months recuperating from a serious illness.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.The Van Bochove Place.

The most pronounced advocate of the value of an up-to-date greenhouse establishment could hardly ask for a better plant than the Van Bochove & Bro.'s new range of houses, now in course of erection. No expense has been spared to make the new range the best of its kind built within recent years. The tract of land secured for the purpose consists of thirty acres and is admirably located within the city limits, having all the advantages, so valuable to the grower, such as city water, splendid trolley line and railroad facilities, etc. The land itself, I may remark in passing, is rich and loamy, possessing all the properties that bid fair to make carnations, American Beauties and other roses thrive to the same degree at which the world famous celery thrives in the black Kalamazoo soil. This place will be devoted exclusively to cut flowers.

The range will consist of 60,000 feet of glass, the houses each 27x300 and all connected, running east and west, with the short span to the south. Each house will contain four benches. As a matter of course the very latest and most approved heating apparatus will be installed. The boiler room, 40x40, will contain two boilers each of 125 horsepower, with a 6-inch regulating valve on the main line that will do the work to perfection. The condensation will be returned by means of a self-acting pump. Briefly stated, each and every detail has been well thought out and well planned and the whole, when completed, will present a model of its kind and one of the finest greenhouse establishments to be found in the country.

The growth of the Van Bochove Bros. may be described as one of gradual development. Away back in the early eighties, celery growing constituted their main business, the few houses of ancient pattern built for the purpose of supplying a scant local demand for bedding plants, being at the time nothing more than a "side issue." Those were the days when Boston supplied Chicago with cut flowers. As years passed along things began to assume a different aspect; the celery business, while profitable to a degree, had its drawbacks in many other respects. Competition grew keener and prices in consequence became weaker. Like all progressive and far-seeing business men, the Van Bochoves began to look around for "other fields and pastures new." The old houses were rebuilt, more were added from time to time, and in addition to bedding and miscellaneous plants a few roses and carnations were tried. The experiment proved a success from the very start. The local demand for cut flowers continued to increase and with the increased demand there came an increase in facilities.

What had been attempted as a mere experiment soon culminated in a success far beyond their own expectations. The demand for cut flowers, both wholesale and retail, necessitated extensive additions and improvements and a mammoth range of houses sprung up within the past decade. The demand, however, continued, surpassing the sources of supply, and the refusal of many large orders, especially for American Beauties, necessitated still further expansion, the result being the additional new range of houses. While American Beauties will be practically doubled in quantity, there will also be a corresponding increase in the output of Brides, Maids, Golden Gates, Ivory and Chatenay. Meteor still holds first place as a red and aside from its productive qualities, it is likewise fine in other respects, such as color, stem, etc. Richmond will be given a trial this season and if it proves its merit here as it seems to have demonstrated it at the E. G. Hill place, the Meteor will be relegated to a back seat. Although roses invariably do well here on their own roots, some grafted stock will be grown.

About 50,000 carnations will be planted. Lawson will form a large part of the varieties to be grown, with Enchantress as a close second. Crane, Flamingo and Cardinal will be the reds, while Lady Bountiful, Fred Burki, White Cloud, Glacier and Flora Hill will make up the white varieties. Some of the older varieties, the kind that make up in quantity what they lack in quality, will also be grown and these principally for their retail trade.

Calla lilies, which do exceptionally well here, as well as bulbous stock in general, will be grown in larger quantities on the old place. This also holds true as regard to chrysanthemums, asparagus strings, smilax and plants of all sorts. X.

AURORA, ILL.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co. is rapidly working up a nice business. They had a big Easter business.

HAMILTON, ONT.—Webster Bros. have put the business into a corporation and will do business as the Webster Floral Co. The facilities will be considerably increased.

Something New

Now that the season for Wild Smilax is over and no more stock can be supplied, I wish to call your attention to the

as a most elegant Decorative Green. It is largely used by the Florists of the Pacific Coast, Washington and Oregon in decorations. The branches are FLAT, very thickly furnished with exceedingly lustrous, green leaves and it seems to adapt itself to almost any position in decoration that the Wild Smilax can be used in.

As the introducer of Southern Wild Smilax, I think you can give me credit for knowing a good thing when I see it, and I am convinced that in Huckleberry Branches you will have a very beautiful substitute for the Wild Smilax, of great value to you through the months of May and June. I am anxious to get the verdict of the Floral Trade on this introduction and offer to send you a Case on Suspicion, price $2.50 per case if it suits you, nothing if it does not. Will you try a case on these terms? Yours very truly, Easter Trade.

Easter weather was ideal and trade as a whole was very satisfactory in both cut flowers and plants. Contrary to the early predictions, Harrisii and longiflorums were in plenty in both pot plants and cut stock, the wholesalers holding them at 12½ and 15 cents each. Callas were none too many, the demand being equally as large. All stock in roses averaged very fine. American Beauties were limited on first-class stock. Other roses were plentiful and sold well at quoted prices.

In bulbous stock the market was well supplied for all demands. Dutch hyacinths, tulips, Von Sions, Paper Whites and lilies of the valley all sold well. The trade had quite a call for violets. No singles were to be had and only a few double. Sweet peas sold clean, with not enough for the big demand. Smilax had a big call all of the past week.

In blooming plants the west end florists did a rushing business. Longiflorums and Harrisii took the lead. Azaleas and hydrangeas came in next. Tulips, Dutch hyacinths and lilies of the valley in pans sold well. In fact almost any kind of blooming plants sold.

Various Notes.

Alex Siegel made a flying trip to Chicago last week, buying cut stock for Easter.

Charles W. Wors, formerly in the wholesale business, has opened a retail store at 2241 North Market street.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, disposed of a big lot of fine longiflorum lilies, both cut and pot plants, through C. A. Kuehn. Mr. Ammann was elected alderman last week.

Ostertag Bros. have a number of wedding orders booked for this week. Henry Ostertag reports a big Easter trade.

C. C. Sanders was in the market with a fine lot of Harrisii and longiflorum lilies, which were in big demand.

Cemetery cut flower decorations kept the Meinhardts and Koenigs very busy all day Saturday and early Sunday morning.

C. Young & Sons Co. kept their big force busy handling their Easter business in cut flowers and plants.

Fred Weber's blooming plant display was one of the finest among the west end florists.

The large Easter cross display, with electrical effects, in the show window of the Ellison Floral Co. was a big attraction.

George Waldbart had some of the largest azalea plants ever seen in this city, some of which brought as high as $20 each. Mr. Waldbart says Easter trade was very large in both plants and cut flowers.

Charles Schoenelle, of the M. M. Ayers store, says they had all they could do with decorations and delivering cut flowers and that it was a blessing that the Sunday law on florists had not yet gone into effect.

Miss M. S. Newman had a very pretty window decoration on Saturday, trimmed with fancy Easter blooming plants.

Fred H. Weber, on Boyle avenue, had a fine trade in blooming plants. Cut flower trade was also satisfactory.

The places of Theo. Miller, Kalisch & Sons, John Henzel, J. F. Windt and others had a rushing plant trade the past week.

The Riessen Floral Co. reports a fine Easter trade in cut flowers, with plenty of funeral work on top.

Fred Foster reports that he disposed of a big lot of lilies on Saturday, which were shipped down from Chicago and came in good condition. All other flowers also sold well.

Frank Fillmore, Wm. Schray, Carl Beyer, Wm. Kruse, Fred Berning and Eggeling, in the south end, all did a big business the past week.

The wholesale houses of Kuehn, Ellis, Angermueller and Berning did a rushing business on Saturday and Sunday. Stock was fairly plentiful, with good prices.

Arbor day on Saturday was observed at the Washington University by several hundred society folk. Tree planting members of the alumni society attended in a body.

Miss Belle Miller, of Springfield, Ill., sent to this market a fine lot of Carnot roses which sold at sight. Her other stock was equally as fine.

Leonard Hunt, for thirty-three years keeper of Lafayette park, celebrated the event the past week. Mr. Hunt is a great favorite with the young folks in that neighborhood.

Grim & Gorley have opened a branch store down town. They have a corner in the newly opened Columbia candy store at Sixth and Olive streets. J. J. B.

DES MOINES, IA.—Mrs. E. Murray has opened a flower store in E. L. Selover's undertaking establishment.

NEW ORLEANS.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society had a busy meeting April 20, at Kolb's Hotel. The first matter of importance to be disposed of was the adoption of a schedule for the flower show, which will take place some time in November. The schedule adopted was that in force during the flower show of 1901. Premiums were provided for the garden competition, to close May 6, first, second and third. Otto Werner and Henry Kraak were elected members of the society.

Mr. Eichling brought up the question of joining forces with the Louisiana branch of the International Sunshine Society in holding the flower show next fall. It was referred to a committee.

Richard Eichling brought up the question of the annual outing of the society next July. A committee of arrangements was appointed.

An invitation was extended by Mr. Alost to have the society dine at his place Sunday, May 7, at 3 p. m. Mr. Alost's invitation was accepted with the thanks of the entire society.

J. A. Newsham won the prize for pot roses, on the strength of some very fine specimens of Magna Charta. Harry Papworth took the palm for mixed cut roses from outdoor plants. Richard Eichling, of U. J. Virgin's, had a variety of interesting pot plants and cut flowers. Eble Brothers showed a very pretty Baby Rambler.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1905.

E. HERSEE is successor to Hersee & Bickell, seedsmen, Woodstock, Ont.

THE end of the rush season is at hand and the year, it is reported, will average up well.

EVERYTHING along the line is reported satisfactory, except the weather, which seems to suit nobody.

THIS will probably be a year when onion seed, unless it produces an extra choice quality of bulb, will be complained about from Genesis to Revelation.

THE receivers of the Western Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., are asking bids on a list of corn and other field seeds.

EDWARD WEBB, the well known English seedsman, has been appointed high sheriff of the county of Worcester.

SEED potatoes, including the novelties, have taken a big slump in England and are offered at half the early prices.

THE acreage sown to onion sets at Louisville, Ky., is said to be smaller than last year. A good stand is reported.

IT is hoped that all the onion seed sown for sets will come up nicely, as stock to replant, in case of failure, will be hard to find.

SOME complaint is heard from the general store merchants in the smaller towns that the unseasonable weather is cutting down their seed trade quite materially.

THE packers of tomatoes are making every effort to reduce the 1905 output and it is reported that in the Maryland district the contracts with growers are lighter than usual.

THE T. B. Shepherd Co., Ventura, Cal., report a very large demand for the crimson rhubarb. They say that it produces three to four tons of stems per acre from December to March and look for the upbuilding of a large industry in growing it for the eastern markets.

THE seeding for onion sets in the vicinity of Indianapolis is reported finished and a good deal of the planted area shows green in the rows. The acreage there is less than it was last year.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS reports having bought Frank Banning's gladiolus, Reuben H. Warder, which was so well thought of in the wholesale cut flower markets the past two seasons.

IT is reported that considerable quantities of Lilium longiflorum are being grown in the Azores this season. Those from that source last season have given very good satisfaction this spring.

THERE is much complaint about the vitality of sweet corn. There are sufficient reasons for this where seed has been planted, as the weather is against its growth, but the complaint is not only confined to the early sorts, but also to the samples in the hands of prospective planters who test before putting it in the ground.

A correspondent of the Crop Reporter writes that in the last two years Whitley and Noble counties, Indiana, have produced at least 50,000 bushels of onions, which sold at 35 to 50 cents per bushel at the railroad, and that they are at present selling at 65 cents; that the acreage in 1905 will be double the 1904 acreage, and that 400 to 500 bushels is an ordinary yield per acre and 800 bushels good yield.

Onion Set Warehouse No. 3, of the Leonard Seed Co., Jefferson Park, Ill.

COUNTER trade is bearing up well against the unfavorable weather, but the long-continued cool spell has its effect just the same and is bound to shorten up the cash receipts of the season.

EARLY sweet corn will need to be replanted at many points. Quite an acreage was planted unusually early in the hope that this was to be a good spring. Up to date this lies in the ground un-sprouted, and it is thought much of it will rot.

THE BRITISH SEED TRADE.

"Peas and beans are largely grown by farmers and others under contract, the seed house supplying the seed peas to be sown," says Richard Dean in the Horticultural Trade Journal. "During the summer experienced men are sent to go through the different breadths to what is known as 'rogue' them, that is to pull out any plants which may not be true to character; in this way the purity of a particular stock is maintained. Carrots, radish, mangel wurzel, turnips, various forms of the cabbage tribe, etc., are also grown by contract, or on farms owned by the particular seed house. Flower seeds are also produced in considerable quantities, in Essex especially, there can be seen very large breadths of popular annuals, which adorn acres upon acres of the country side when in full bloom. The cleaning and bulking of flower seeds is an important preparatory work in autumn, and early winter and many young girls are employed in packeting the choicer seeds. The seed industry then extends to many parts of the country, giving employment to hundreds in the population of the land in the cultivation of the plants and in harvesting the crops.

"And then when one thinks of the enormous number of sacks and bags required, the material of which have to be woven, and then made into the different sizes; the multitude of paper bags and seed packets used, thus giving employment in other directions, the large staff of employees engaged in a business in which quick intelligence and active business habits can find an excellent outlet; office clerks, messengers, etc. When one thinks of all this, an idea, necessarily imperfect, can be formed of the ramification of the seed industry.

"Then there are the various forms of manures specially manufactured for garden purposes, insecticides, and other compositions; garden requisites of almost untold variety, etc., which find a place in wholesale seed catalogues, wonder is excited in contemplation of the enormous amount of capital invested in this branch of the seed trade alone.

"A trial ground is an indispensable corollary to a wholesale seed house. Cooper, Taber & Co., have many acres of seed trial grounds in Essex; so have Hurst & Son; and each of these have extensive seed farms on which they grow many seeds. Watkins & Simpson have their seed farms in Middlesex. Carter & Co. have huge tracts of ground for the culture of all kinds of seeds, in Essex. Some of the wholesale seed houses have large warehouses and depots in the provinces. All these give employment to hundreds.

trial grounds to a wholesale seed house is incalculable. There everything is done according to an approximately perfect system, and in the most methodical and perfect manner. New varieties of vegetables (often mere selections) are tested by the side of the best old ones of the same type, and the characteristics of every detail of growth, habit, and quality carefully noted. Thousands of samples of seed are sown, many, say of one variety of pea from various sources, the very best are selected as stock seeds. An enormous amount of valuable information is to be gathered up on such a trial ground during the season."

FISCHER'S GRAND FREESIA PURITY.

A magnificent, snowy, glistening white, of very large size and great length and strength of stem: a dozen sprays making as fine a showing as a dozen large white carnations, and can be used wherever carnations can be used for decorative purposes. A truss bears from eight to eleven buds, of which six are frequently open at one time, making an immense flower. It is of great substance and bears shipping without bruising. Stems can be cut two feet long and are as rigid as sticks. It is very prolific in bloom, producing three to four side shoots of eight buds each besides the main flower. Bulbs no bigger than dried wax beans produce as large a flower as the largest bulbs, only the stems are shorter. It propagates very freely, producing from four to eight bulbs, all of which will flower the next year.

All growers of freesia should try this queen of freesia for when once grown you will want no other.

Price for large bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

Discount on 5000 and over.

Easter Trade.

Reports from all the principal firms of this city show a volume of business equal to, if not in excess of, last year's Easter, which held the record up to that time. Some report extra heavy sales on plants, while others say cut flowers were in heaviest demand. Everything sold, however, and it was not a question of what you could sell, but it was what have you got. The plantmen had a fine stock of the usual Easter plants, including bulbous stock, the last ten days having been cool, keeping them in nice condition. The cut flower men suffered some from the cool weather the past week on account of the buds not opening. Many roses came in badly mildewed but the blooms were of good texture and the same may be said of the carnations. Sweet peas sold like hot cakes and there was a good crop of these. Violets are on their last legs.

At Tomlinson hall flower market business was very heavy and more steady than ever before owing to the fine weather on Saturday. Sunday was equally as fine. Everybody seems satisfied with the business done. A. B.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

Easter stock was never more plentiful, but the demand was ahead of all previous records and this must be recorded as the banner Easter. There were considerable quantities of bulbous stock, also Crimson Rambler roses and hydrangeas, as well as Easter lilies.

Limmer & Evans did a fine business at their store in the Lorraine block. They have some especially good Crimson Ramblers.

W. C. Eger made a fine showing with hydrangeas, both pink and blue, with as large heads as were ever seen in the city. He found the blue hydrangeas a very good seller.

J. W. H. Grupe, at 426 State street, stocked up especially heavily on Easter lilies and sold out well. He also had a nice lot of azaleas and other plants.

Fred A. Howe, at Odd Fellows' hall, filled one window with lilacs and one with lilies.

next regular session, a farewell reception will be held in honor of the host, and a special program will mark the occasion.

This measure was decided upon at the meeting of the association held April 13 at the home of Henry G. Pauli, Davenport. All the members were present at this session and an enjoyable program was given.

Adolph Arp, superintendent of Central park, read a paper on "Shrubs and Herbaceous Plants," followed by general discussion in which nearly all present participated. Then came the social part of the entertainment with musical selections by Miss Helen Pauli, Davenport; Henry Meyer, Rock Island, and Harry Bills.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Easter, the greatest day of the year for the flower business, was right up to the handle this year. Notwithstanding the rather doubtful prospects before hand, the business was all there at the finish and the general average must have been ahead of last year. Last year was the banner year, and to exceed that is very gratifying. One of the features was that very few orders were placed before Wednesday, but from then on they came in droves, until by Sunday the wholesale houses had scarcely anything left.

Bulbous stock was here in all its glory and sold better than usual. Lilies made their high water mark, and thousands of them were disposed of. Beauties were "the goods" and many more could have been used to advantage. Roses and carnations were scarce. There were not enough to fill orders. This helped the bulbous stock greatly. Violets were shipped from the north and sold at a high price.

The store men are almost unanimous in their report that there was an increase over last year. In most cases stock sold out clean and some of the stores did not have a flower left by Sunday noon.

The Jabez Elliot flower market did the usual enormous business. Saturday afternoon was ideal for business and there was a continual jam from opening till closing time and several thousand dollars' worth of flowers and plants were disposed of. At times the jam was so great that many people were unable to get into the market at all and others who got in could not stop to make purchases but were obliged to move on with the throng.

Many growers of "green goods" held back their cuts for a week or two before Easter; consequently there was an oversupply of this class of stock and considerable of it was left on the hands of the wholesale men. Smilax was the only exception.

Easter is the time of the pot plants and they sold up to standard. Lilies carried off the honors, as usual, but other kinds sold well also. Crimson Rambler, of which some extra fine plants were seen, sold very well.

Various Notes.

A hail storm of considerable severity passed over the Kentucky highlands last week and considerable damage was done. The florists in the belt are: Philip Popp, E. Ernsterhoff, Wm. Speck, Wm. Schuman, Chas. Pfeiffer, L. Pfeiffer Sons, Ed Fries, John Fries, S. Thomas and Thomas Windram. They suffered slight loss.

Miss Murphy, who has been associated with Wm. Murphy in the wholesale business, will leave with her sister for California the middle of May. They will join their brother, Bert, at Los Angeles, who has been west about a year and who is engaged in business in that city.

Henry Dieterich was in the city looking up Easter stock.

R. A. Betz was confined to his bed for several days by a severe cold.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres. E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres. O. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 20th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1906.

AMERICAN ELM is scarce in sizes above 2½-inch.

The Webster Floral Co., Hamilton, Ont., is doubling the acreage of its nursery.

The safe at the Aurora Nurseries, Aurora, Ill., was tampered with and $87 found to be missing April 16.

D. G. WIEGAND BRUSS, of Van der Weijden & Co., Boskoop, is visiting the buyers of Holland nursery stock as far west as Chicago. He says he finds the demand larger than ever before.

THE George Wittbold Co., Chicago, has fifteen acres planted to ornamental nursery stock at Edgebrook, Ill. They report a good retail demand and will enlarge their planting, going later into the wholesale line.

NURSERYMEN'S PROGRAM

Harlan P. Kelsey, Herbert S. Chase and John S. Kerr, the program committee, have completed their preparation for the thirtieth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, at West Baden, Ind., June 14 to 16. The prospects are for the most successful convention in the history of the society. Here is the program in full:

Wednesday, June 14, 10 A. M.

Calling to order, Pres. E. W. Kirkpatrick, Texas.
Welcome to Indiana, Andrew J. Rhodes, Indiana; 10 minutes.
Response for the Association, by the President; 10 minutes.
President's address; 15 minutes.
Reports of Secretary and Treasurer; 15 minutes.
Reports of committees:
Tariff—Irvine Rouse, New York; 5 minutes.
Legislation—Chas. L. Watrous, Iowa; 5 minutes.
To Edit Report—J. Horace McFarland, Pennsylvania; 5 minutes.
To Meet Western Freight Classification Committee—Peter Youngers, Nebraska; 5 minutes.
To Meet Eastern Freight Classification Committee—Wm. H. Moon, Pennsylvania; 5 minutes.
To Meet Southern Freight Classification Committee—Herbert S. Chase, Alabama; 5 minutes.
Transportation—E. Albertson, Indiana; 20 minutes. Discussion by G. L. Taber, Florida, and members; 10 minutes.
Paper, "The Cost of a Tree," by Harry L. Bird, Michigan. Discussion by Aubrey Frink, Florida; J. Horace McFarland, Pennsylvania; Herbert S. Chase, Alabama, and members.
Nomination of State Vice-Presidents.

Wednesday, 2 P. M.

Election of State Vice-Presidents; 5 minutes.
Paper, "Grading Nursery Stock," by L. A. Berckmans, Georgia; 15 minutes. Discussion by members; 10 minutes.
Paper, "The Low Prices of Ornamental Stock," by Chas. Maloy, New York; 15 minutes. Discussion by members; 10 minutes.
Paper, "The Grape, the Commercially Neglected Fruit," by T. V. Munson, Texas; 15 minutes. Discussion by members; 10 minutes.
Paper, "Experimental Orchards for Nurserymen," by L. C. Corbett, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture; 30 minutes. Discussion by members; 15 minutes.

Wednesday, 7:45 P. M.

By aid of the stereopticon the extremely interesting papers of the evening sessions will be fully illustrated. It has been the endeavor of the committee to make this year's program an eminently practical one, and we believe all the subjects presented are of unusual interest to every member. As the room must be darkened, members are respectfully requested to be present at 7:45 sharp.

Paper, "A Tree Garden to Last a Thousand Years," by J. Horace McFarland, Pennsylvania; 40 minutes. Discussion by J. Woodward Manning, Massachusetts, and members; 10 minutes.

Paper, "Soil Inoculation," by Dr. Geo. T. Moore, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture; 60 minutes. Discussion by J. H. Hale, Connecticut, and members.

Question Box: A great many questions have been suggested to the committee for discussion, but it has seemed best to consider them through the question box. Questions will be received by the secretary or the chairman of the program committee until Thursday afternoon, and will be answered on Friday.

Thursday, June 15, 9:30 A. M.

Paper, "The New Horticulture," by H. W. Stringfellow, Texas; 25 minutes.
Paper, "Best Methods of Improving Out Standards in Trees and Fruits," by G. L. Taber, Florida; 25 minutes. Discussion by members and W. C. Reed, Indiana; 20 minutes.
Paper, "Quality vs. Quantity," by Prof. John Craig, New York; 20 minutes. Discussion by members; 10 minutes.
Paper, "Plants in Department Stores," Howard A. Chase, Pennsylvania; 20 minutes. Discussion by members; 15 minutes.

Thursday, 2 P. M.

Paper, "Office Management," by Thomas B. Meehan, Pennsylvania; 25 minutes. Discussion by Chas. J. Brown, New York; 5 minutes; Wm. Pitkin, New York; 5 minutes.
Paper, "Fruit Exhibit at the World's Fair," by Wm. P. Stark, Missouri; 20 minutes. Discussion by J. S. Butterfield, Missouri, and members; 15 minutes.
The session will adjourn at 3:30 p. m., when the American Nurserymen's Protective Association and the Nurserymen's Mutual Protective Association will hold their annual meetings as per notices of the respective secretaries of those organizations.

Thursday, 7:45 P. M.

This is an executive session, and members only will be admitted. At Prof. Hedgecock's request the association has agreed that no report shall be made of his lecture in any paper, nor in the annual report, excepting as he may direct. It is understood that members by their presence agree to this arrangement and will fully respect the wishes of Prof. Hedgecock, and will not give out in any manner any information received from the lecturer.

Paper, "Picking, Packing, Grading and Shipping Fruit," by J. H. Hale, Connecticut; 30 minutes. Discussion by members; 20 minutes.

Paper, "Crown Gall and Root Knot," by Geo. G. Hedgecock, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture; 60 minutes. Discussion by C. L. Watrous, Iowa; 5 minutes; J. H. Hale, Connecticut; 5 minutes; and members.

Friday, June 16, 9 A. M.

Election of officers; 10 minutes.
Selection of place for next convention; 30 minutes.
Appointment of committee on resolutions; 10 minutes.
New business; 10 minutes.
Paper, "Refrigeration of Nursery Stock and Storage in Cellars," by Madison Cooper, New York; 30 minutes. Discussion by members; 20 minutes.
Paper, "Excluding Advertisements Quoting Prices," by J. M. Irvine, Missouri; 20 minutes. Discussion by Theo. Smith, New York.

Friday, 2 P. M.

Paper, "The Evolution of Importing," by James McHutchison, New York; 20 minutes. Discussion by Hiram T. Jones, New Jersey; 5 minutes; Andre L. Causse, New York; 5 minutes; F. L. Atkins, New Jersey; 5 minutes.
Answers to questions deposited in question box.
Report of committees on exhibits, on final resolutions, on program.
Announcement of committees.

Friday, 7 P. M.

Fruit banquet. This is a special feature, and it is hoped it will be an enjoyable one. Many members have kindly agreed to contribute liberally fruits in season in their respective sections, and a choice selection is now assured. Native wines are also expected. Prominent members and well-known speakers will respond to toasts, and the dinner will be presided over by one of our leading members, J. H. Hale, acting as toast-master. Tickets will be issued at a reasonable price per plate, and must be secured from any member of the program committee or the secretary of the association up to Thursday night, June 15. There will be dancing after the banquet, the music being furnished by the Baden Springs Hotel Company.

Saturday, June 17.

A special excursion has been arranged to Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, and details will be announced in advance. Members wishing to take in this excursion must apply to the committee before Friday, at 2 p. m.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $5.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PACIFIC COAST.

S. MAINGUENEAU, San Jose, Cal., reports a good business in French and English walnut trees.

THE California Irrigated Land Co., at Marysville, is planting 70,000 grape cuttings for planting in its vineyard next season.

At southern California points the horticultural commissioners are distributing colonies of the parasite which preys on the codlin moth.

MUMS IN CALIFORNIA.

I recently asked about growing asters in Southern California and having them in bloom at Christmas. In the reply in the REVIEW I was told that it would be easier and better to grow chrysanthemums. What varieties should I get and how shall I manage to have them at Christmas? It is easy enough to have them at Thanksgiving. A. L. H.

I do not know whether the questioner wishes to grow the chrysanthemums for market or only for garden adornment, but the only difference would be that in the latter case I might lengthen the list of varieties somewhat and include sorts that are not considered the most profitable for commercial planting.

It is now late enough in the season in this climate to plant out the young stock. Strong well rooted cuttings can be procured from any first-class nurseryman and when the variety is once planted there is no difficulty in raising any quantity of young stock from the old plants for the following season's planting.

Chrysanthemums, especially the late flowering sorts, should be planted in a sheltered location. I do not mean shaded, for the winter blooming varieties will stand all the sunshine they can get. Keep the young stock growing all summer and fall, always remembering that the finest blooms are obtained from plants that are not allowed to receive a check of any kind. It will be found that cultivation assists the growth of such heavy feeding stock as the chrysanthemum even more than a superabundance of artificial watering. Mulching is also to be recommended. Above all things do not let the surface of the ground get hard.

Keep all side shoots nipped off. Examine the plants every couple weeks after the first flower buds show and of course leave only the strongest of the terminal buds. There should then be no difficulty in raising big, showy flowers during the middle of winter in Southern California.

The plants should be set in rows, the rows from three to four feet apart and the plants about eighteen inches from each other in the row. It is possible to grow them considerably closer than this if there is any shortage in room but it is advisable to leave plenty of space to allow cultivation.

The list of chrysanthemums offered to the public is very large but the majority of them have not been found profitable for outside planting. There are a great many more early sorts than late ones and to a certain extent the locality has considerable to do with some varieties, but these I will name are the best I have found among the late blooming kinds: White, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Christmas Eve, Mrs. Henry Robinson and White Bonaffon. Yellow, Eugene Dailedouze and Major Bonaffon. Pink, Superba, Lavender Queen and Glory of Pacific. Red, Fisher's Torch and Lord Hopetoun.

There are several other late sorts I could mention but this list offers all the good solid colors and can be relied on to flower as late in the season as it is possible to have them. G.

FRESNO, CAL.

The newly appointed park commissioners of Fresno are Charles A. Chambers, S. George and G. C. Freman. All these gentlemen are well known and prominent business men and are fully capable of filling the position to which they have been appointed in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Chambers has been actively connected with the nursery business here for nearly fifteen years; for over twelve years he was in the employ of the Fancher Creek Nursery Co., of "Smyrna fig fame," and for the past two years has held the position of secretary of the Wilson Nurseries, of Dinuba, with headquarters in this city. Mr. George is a prominent Armenian, of the firm of George Bros., tailors. Mr. Freman is one of our leading attorneys and also connected with the Fancher Creek Nursery Co. ASH.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Another Easter has come and gone and the reports from all sources seem to be that it was the best Easter from a trade standpoint we ever had. Taken as a whole the weather was about as unsatisfactory as it could well have been, as we had a fall of over an inch of snow one night, and Thursday and Friday a regular downpour of rain. The men who handle plants were very much discouraged, but Saturday it cleared up for an ideal shopping day and everything good was cleaned up in fine shape. A visit among the shops Sunday morning found a lot of tired men, but all expressed themselves as do only people who have exceeded their expectations.

Almost everything brought fair prices, except that one retailer showed a handsome lot of moss rose buds which he had bought at $4 per dozen bunches of twenty-five buds, which seemed an extremely low price for novelties of that kind at Easter.

Bulbous stock seemed a drug on the market, notwithstanding that report said there would be a scarcity of this stock. It is reported that one wholesaler took this report seriously and tried to corner the market by getting in all the bulb stock in this section and some from the outside, and like Gates, with his wheat deal, he found there was still more to follow and Saturday night found him loaded to the guards.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. reports that, taken as a whole, they never handled as good stock, excepting violets, which are not expected to be very fine so late in the season. Roses were exceptionally fine and fresh, which they think indicates that they have succeeded in convincing their growers that it is not a good policy to hold stock too long for a holiday.

Last week we had a war of the Greeks, as Polites Bros. opened in the Arcade and the man who runs the stand next door got after them. Saturday they were selling the finest carnations at 50 and 75 cents per dozen. They sold lots of them. I was told by one of the store men today that the call for carnations is getting less every holiday, as they cannot compete with the Greeks and put carnations up in the way they must to send out and not hurt their reputation. As a result they push stock which the Greeks do not handle, and leave the carnations to the street men. Hoo-Hoo.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

It is with decided pleasure that I am able to report that Easter was much better than last year. The weather on Saturday and Sunday was ideal. The sun shone beautifully and was not too warm, still warm enough to deliver plants without heavy wrapping. If the weather had been propitious on Thursday and Friday it is doubtful if you could have found enough plants to decorate a store window.

Prices were firm and stock cleaned up nicely. On Sunday morning the wholesale houses had the appearance of a deserted Russian village after the Japs had passed through.

Violets had first call in cut flowers. Many customers were disappointed at not being able to get them. Carriages even drove up to the wholesale houses to find out when violets would arrive. Roses sold fairly well and all good stock found a ready sale. Stock grown by local growers was far superior to that shipped here. Carnations were decidedly scarce and orders were only half filled. Bulbous stock and cut lilies were plentiful but cleaned up nicely.

Lilies had first call in plants, azaleas and hydrangeas next. Ramblers and H. P. roses sold well, as did also spiraeas and some well done Deutzia Lemoinei. Genistas and marguerites did not sell very well. Bulbous stock in pans and boxes neatly trimmed sold in moderate quantities.

All the retailers are well pleased with results and look forward to a continuance of a prosperous business.

Various Notes.

J. M. Gasser has returned from the south much refreshed from his sojourn there.

Geo. Bate is all smiles and is passing the cigars around. It's an eight-pound girl. Am pleased to report Mrs. Bate doing nicely.

H. WEBER & SONS announce the completion of arrangements whereby they will, beginning in January, 1906, disseminate jointly with THE E. G. HILL CO.

THEIR TWO GRAND NEW CARNATIONS

MY MARYLAND AND JESSICA

MY MARYLAND is already well and favorably known, having been exhibited freely at the various flower shows and florist club meetings the past fall and winter, and in every case elicited the highest praise and most favorable comment. We pick this variety to quickly and easily displace all other whites for first honors, not alone in exhibition, but in commercial points as well. We claim for it a robustness of constitution quite unequaled in any other variety and an ease of culture that will delight the heart of the grower. The great vigor of both parents (Norway x Lawson) seems united and improved upon in this variety.

In JESSICA we have, in the red and white variegated class, what My Maryland will prove among white. It is descended through several generations of variegated seedlings of Helen Keller and Bradt extraction on the one side and Lawson on the other. A strong, thrifty growing variegated seedling bearing the seed. It is a trifle heavier in growth than My Maryland and just Lawson height. Aside from these differences and the color, the description of My Maryland applies to Jessica. Under favorable conditions four-inch blooms are not uncommon. We pick Jessica to win over any other variegated variety.

Both of the above are free propagators. We are thoroughly familiar with them and know what they will do. We will be in a position to deliver stock early and on time, and assure the trade that no disappointments will result on that score.

We have already booked many orders. It pays to be early. Orders booked are subject to cancellation by the buyer if unsatisfied with either variety up to the time the cuttings are received.

Price — $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

It is with decided pleasure that I am able to report that Easter was much better than last year. The weather on Saturday and Sunday was ideal. The sun shone beautifully and was not too warm, still warm enough to deliver plants without heavy wrapping. If the weather had been propitious on Thursday and Friday it is doubtful if you could have found enough plants to decorate a store window.

Prices were firm and stock cleaned up nicely. On Sunday morning the wholesale houses had the appearance of a deserted Russian village after the Japs had passed through.

Violets had first call in cut flowers. Many customers were disappointed at not being able to get them. Carriages even drove up to the wholesale houses to find out when violets would arrive. Roses sold fairly well and all good stock found a ready sale. Stock grown by local growers was far superior to that shipped here. Carnations were decidedly scarce and orders were only half filled. Bulbous stock and cut lilies were plentiful but cleaned up nicely.

Lilies had first call in plants, azaleas and hydrangeas next. Ramblers and H. P. roses sold well, as did also spiraeas and some well done Deutzia Lemoinei. Genistas and marguerites did not sell very well. Bulbous stock in pans and boxes neatly trimmed sold in moderate quantities.

All the retailers are well pleased with results and look forward to a continuance of a prosperous business.

Various Notes.

J. M. Gasser has returned from the south much refreshed from his sojourn there.

Geo. Bate is all smiles and is passing the cigars around. It's an eight-pound girl. Am pleased to report Mrs. Bate doing nicely.

The Sheriff street market Easter show was a decided success, the crowds being enormous.

Florists' Review

When Writing Advertisers.

H. WEBER & SONS announce the completion of arrangements whereby they will, beginning in January, 1906, disseminate jointly with THE E. G. HILL CO.

THEIR TWO GRAND NEW CARNATIONS

MY MARYLAND AND JESSICA

MY MARYLAND is already well and favorably known, having been exhibited freely at the various flower shows and florist club meetings the past fall and winter, and in every case elicited the highest praise and most favorable comment. We pick this variety to quickly and easily displace all other whites for first honors, not alone in exhibition, but in commercial points as well. We claim for it a robustness of constitution quite unequalled in any other variety and an ease of culture that will delight the heart of the grower. The great vigor of both parents (Norway x Lawson) seems united and improved upon in this variety.

In JESSICA we have, in the red and white variegated class, what My Maryland will prove among white. It is descended through several generations of variegated seedlings of Helen Keller and Bradt extraction on the one side and Lawson on the other. A strong, thrifty growing variegated seedling bearing the seed. It is a trifle heavier in growth than My Maryland and just Lawson height. Aside from these differences and the color, the description of My Maryland applies to Jessica. Under favorable conditions four-inch blooms are not uncommon. We pick Jessica to win over any other variegated variety.

Both of the above are free propagators. We are thoroughly familiar with them and know what they will do. We will be in a position to deliver stock early and on time, and assure the trade that no disappointments will result on that score.

We have already booked many orders. It pays to be early. Orders booked are subject to cancellation by the buyer if unsatisfied with either variety up to the time the cuttings are received.

KANSAS CITY.The Market.

The past week has been one of the busiest in the history of this city. Even though every grower took all his stock that showed even a small bloom and placed it on sale and an immense stock was shipped from other points, everything of a salable nature was sold out early in the evening before Easter. A large shipping trade was handled by some of the houses and the local demand was of immense proportions. Roses were plentiful and brought good prices. Carnations were scarce and prices ranged even higher than during Christmas week. Von Sions, jonquils, hyacinths and tulips sold for fancy prices. Easter novelties were sold out early and some of the shops were forced to close, not having anything left to sell. The shops vied with each other in their window decorations and some beautiful designs were to be seen.

Various Notes.

W. L. Rock had a most beautiful window and crowds thronged his shop from morning until closing time.

Miss Dalley did an immense business and, with an increased force of clerks, had her hands full to take care of her large business.

Ed. Ellsworth had a splendid show at Kellogg's and their wagons were out until 11 o'clock delivering their orders.

Miss Murray had a store full of customers all day and reports business as first-class.

The market men did an immense business Saturday, people thronging the streets all day. Good prices were received and every one was pleased with business.

The Kansas City Floral Co., with seven clerks, had all they could do to handle their business during the week and report that they handled over 10,000 carnations and 5,000 roses, not counting lilies, spiraea and other Easter stock. Mr. Shaeffer, the head of the new firm, is a live, hustling, up-to-date man and is making a success from the start.

The Alpha Floral Co. did a large business the past week and very little stock was left over.

The Convention hall directors called a meeting for Wednesday night and all the florists are becoming interested in the outlook and are helping to make the show a success.

SHREVEPORT, LA.

For Easter we shipped some field-grown cut roses to Cincinnati to try the pulse of that market. Roses are the queen of all flowers here, the tea and hybrid tea. New roses have been a failure with us. Some new varieties, such as Gruss an Teplitz, in red, hold up with old kinds, but no pink compares with Catherine Mermet and Bridesmaid here. Helen Gould is a good one in red. Kaiserin and Bride are the whites that lead. In yellows Mme. Welch, Safrano, Etoile de Lyon and Perle are all good in the field. We trust some roses of merit will come out and take a place with these old favorites. We must look to Europe as yet. All roses ought to be tested outdoors before sending them out. A good many rose names are changed from old to new.

Mums are next choice here and are being well improved by specialists in mum growing.

We would like to say a few words about florists selling to drug stores that use plants only to draw trade and hence sell at low prices. No florist should wholesale to these people or common merchants. In the end this will ruin our trade and cause a slump in prices. Here is another question which was discussed in the REVIEW, we think by wholesale people, about florists shipping flowers or plants and saying their responsibility ended when the stock was put on the train. Well, we think differently. In the first place the express company will not allow you to examine plants or flowers on arrival. When you pay the freight or express this lets them out, as you often have a lot of dead ones, and do you think any firm wants to pay for dead plants? We never made anything out of an express company yet. When we ship trees, if they are dead we do not want any pay. Freight is high with the express companies and so much mud is packed in plants you pay for half mud.

THE WOLF DUMP SIEVE SOIL MACHINE

pulverizes Sods, Manure and forces all the fibres through the sieve, dumps the stones out separately. Used by all the leading florists.

The New Wolf Improved Pipe Ventilating Apparatus.

is equipped with adjustable roller hangers, circular steel ratchet arms, automatic safety lock which combine durability, neatness and ease of operation. By using our combination of adjustable roller hangers and steel ratchet arm, the strain upon the pipe shafting is reduced to such a great extent that no expensive double strength or special fitted pipe is required. Houses 165 ft. long are now successfully operated from the end with single machines, which are furnished with or without pipe shafting. Send for catalogue and references.
